Mr. David Hunt: The standard spending assessment for fire and civil defence services is the Government's estimate of an appropriate level of expenditure consistent with the efficient provision of a standard level of service. It takes into account the characteristics of Cumbria as specified in the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England) and is consistent with the figure for total standard spending by all local authorities announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 19 July 1989. However, budgetary decisions for these services remain the responsibility of Cumbria county council. The Home Office inspectorate of fire services closely monitors the performance of brigades against the nationally recommended standards of fire cover.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any proposals for legislation to prohibit public footpaths crossing waste landfill sites.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The consideration of the diversion of any footpath would be a matter for the planning authority at the time of consideration of the planning application.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has had any meetings with the chairman or officers of the National Association of Waste Disposal Contractors since 22 November 1989; and whether he has made any assessment of the effects on Her Majesty's pollution inspectorate of the code of self-regulation.

Mr. Trippier: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the Member for Wells (Mr. Heathcoat-Amory) met the chairman and representatives of the National Association of Waste Disposal Contractors on 17 January. During the course of wide-ranging discussions the association's code of self-regulation was not specifically discussed. But the Department is aware of the code which we see as a positive step in promoting the necessary high standards that should prevail throughout waste management. Adoption of the code will not affect the work of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution in regard to its responsibilities for waste as these rest primarily in monitoring the performance of the waste disposal authorities and in setting a framework of national standards for waste management practice.

Water Privatisation

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the fees paid to each of the accountancy firms connected with the water privatisation; and how much money has been paid to firms criticised by the Department of Trade and Industry or the disciplinary committees of the accountancy profession.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: It is not our policy to comment on individual contracts. The full costs of privatisation will be reported to Parliament in due course in the normal way.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the figures for Exeter city council and Devon county council authorities (a) expenditure, (b) Government grant support, (c) percentage increase on previous years and (d) inflation percentage for the following years: 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90 together with the target figures for 1990-91.

Mr. Chope: The figures requested are as follows:

	Total expenditure £ million	Increase Per cent.	Rate support grant £	Increase Per cent.	GDP Deflator Per cent.
Exeter
1987-88	7·036	60·7	4,621,206	−16·4	5·3
1988-89	6·139	−12·7	4,902,078	6·1	7·25
1989-90	6·840	11·4	5,169,351	5·5	7·00
Devon
1987-88	390·072	8·3	162,988,858	7·5	5·3
1988-89	396·869	1·7	166,253,251	2·0	7·25
1989-90	456·617	15·1	162,550,732	−2·2	7·00

Notes:
1. For the years 1987-88 to 1989-90 the rate support grant for Devon consists of block grant only whereas Exeter received both block grant and domestic rate relief grant.
2. Under the new local government finance system, which comes into force on 1 April, there are no target figures.
3. In 1990-91 Exeter will receive £12·4 million of revenue support grant.

Uniform Business Rate

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give (a) the figures of business rate contribution to Exeter city council for the following years: 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90, (b) the expected business rate contribution to the uniform business rate in 1990-91 and (c) the allocation of uniform business rate to Exeter city council in 1990-91.

Mr. Chope: The available information is as follows:

Non-domestic rate yield in Exeter net of rebates:

	£ million
1987-88	16·1
1988-89	19·3
1989-90	21·1
Allocation of uniform business rate:
1990-91	21·5

The business rate contribution to the uniform business rate in 1990-91 is not yet known.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will show in the Official Report the numbers and grades of his staff engaged on GRE or SSA development in (a) 1988, (b) 1989 and (c) planned for 1990.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 25 January 1990]: The number of staff in my Department engaged on GRE or SSA development and calculation are shown in the table for 1988 and 1989. Future figures are not yet known.

The figures include professional economists and statisticians plus support staff who have been engaged on GRE or SSA development and calculation in the period. Not all of these staff have been engaged wholly on GRE or SSA development.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether people living in communities run by (a) the Moonies, (b) Hare Krishna, (c) the Children of God, (d) the Scientologists and (e) other religious cults will be exempt from the poll tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: Individuals who are members of religious communities, the principal occupation of which is prayer, contemplation, the relief of suffering or education; who have no income or capital of their own; and who are dependent upon the community concerned for their material needs, are exempt from the community charge. It is for community charges registration officers to decide in each case whether a person falls within the terms of the exemption.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what relief from the community charge will be available to those who currently receive relief on their rates because they are disabled; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Disabled persons' rate relief ensures that disabled people do not have to pay higher rate bills where an adaptation of their home made necessary by their disability would raise its rateable value. There is no question of a disabled person having to pay more community charge because of his disability, so equivalent provision is not necessary. Rebates of up to 80 per cent. of the community charge are available to people, including disabled people, with little or no income who qualify for community charge benefit. Income support, for those receiving it, contains an amount to help pay the remaining 20 per cent. Disabled people may qualify for rebates at higher levels of income than other claimants because of the disability premium.

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) by what percentage the rate imposed by Chelmsford borough council increased in each year from 1979 to date;

(2) by what percentage the rate imposed by Essex county council increased in each year from 1979 to date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The percentage changes over the previous years are as follows:

	Chelmsford borough council borough rate per cent.	Essex county council precept per cent.
1980-81	+4·4	+18·7
1981-82	+59·6	+10·8
1982-83	−39·2	+14·9
1983-84	+9·6	+4·7
1984-85	+38·8	+7·0
1985-86	+26·1	+7·4
1986-87	+7·1	+18·8
1987-88	−13·3	+10·8
1988-89	+38·5	+17·8
1989-90	+19·4	+5·1

Borough rate is the rate charged by the borough; precept is the rate levied by the county council.

Mr. Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether university students sponsored by firms are eligible for the full community charge rebate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The eligibility criteria defining full-time courses for the purposes of student relief make no reference to the source of a student's funds. Every person whose course fulfils these criteria will be liable to pay only 20 per cent. of the personal community charge.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the maximum level of community charge for Northampton at which no couple will be required to pay £3 per week extra as protected by the transitional relief; and how this divides between Northampton and Northamptonshire.

Mr. Chope: For the purposes of the transitional relief scheme, the assumed community charge for the area of Northampton borough council will be £294·13. The way in which this figure is derived does not permit a meaningful apportionment to be made between district and county; but the community charge bills which people receive will show separately how much of the actual community charge is due to county and district spending, and will show, for comparison, the cost of providing a standard level of service.

Cleaning Contractors, House of Commons

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what supervision is given and by whom as to the standard of work by the cleaning contractors now employed in the House of Commons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The Parliamentary Works Office and the Department of the Serjeant at Arms staff work together on the inspection of cleaning work undertaken by the contractor.

Ancient Monuments

Mr. Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to update and expand his schedule of ancient monuments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Before my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment includes a monument in the schedule that he maintains under section 1 of the Ancient Monuments and Archaeological Areas Act 1979, he consults English Heritage. English Heritage's major programme of re-survey work, known as the monuments protection programme, is now under way. It is expected to run for some 10 years or so and could lead to an increase in the number of scheduled monuments in England from 13,000 to approximately 60,000. The object of the programme is to identify further or redefine monuments of national importance which should be protected by statutory controls; and to collect up-to-date information to assist in their future use and management.

My right hon. Friend is now considering the first batch of 200 monuments recommended for scheduling by English Heritage. These cover monuments in the Salisbury Plain training area. To qualify for scheduling, monuments must be of national importance. Each case is considered on its merits. Because the characteristics which make a monument of national importance and worthy of scheduling are not always readily visible, its identification, and the subsequent decision whether or not to include it in the schedule, are matters for informed judgment in the light of professional advice given by English Heritage. The criteria on which the judgment is formed were first announced on 22 November 1983 and I now restate them:

(i) Period: all types of monuments that characterise a category or period should be considered for preservation.

(ii) Rarity: there are some monument categories which in certain periods are so scarce that all surviving examples which still retain some archaelogical potential, should be preserved. In general, however, a selection must be made which portrays the typical and commonplace as well as the rare. This process should take account of all aspects of the distribution of a particular class of monument, both in a national and a regional context.

(iii) Documentation: the significance of a monument may be enhanced by the existence of records of previous investigation or, in the case of more recent monuments, by the supporting evidence of contemporary written records.

(iv) Group Value: the value of a single monument (such as a field system) may be greatly enhanced by its association with related contemporary monuments (such as a settlement and cemetery) or with monuments of different periods. In some cases, it is preferable to protect the complete group of monuments, including associated and adjacent land, rather than to protect isolated monuments within the group.

(v) Survival/Condition: the survival of a monument's archaeological potential both above and below ground is a particularly important consideration and should be reassessed in relation to its present condition and surviving features.

(vi) Fragility/Vulnerability: highly important archaeological evidence from some field monuments can be destroyed by a single ploughing or unsympathetic treatment; vulnerable monuments of this nature would particularly benefit from the statutory protection which scheduling confers. There are also standing structures of particular form or complexity whose value can again be severely reduced by neglect or careless treatment and which are similarly well suited to protection by scheduled monument legislation, even if these structures are already listed historic buildings.

(vii) Diversity: some monuments may be selected for scheduling because they possess a combination of high quality features, others because of a single important attribute.

(viii) Potential: on occasion, the nature of the evidence cannot be specified precisely, but it may still be possible to document reasons anticipating its existence and importance and so to demonstrate the justification for scheduling. This is usually confined to sites rather than upstanding monuments.

CITES Conference

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration he is giving to a habitat tax, as suggested at the CITES conference at Lucerne.

Mr. Trippier: None. This matter was not formally discussed at the CITES conference. I shall, however, be interested in the outcome of any discussions on this issue between the International Council for Bird Preservation, which proposed it, and the pet trade.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy on the check list scheme contained in the resolution on the shipment of live animals passed at the seventh CITES conference; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: We support in principle efforts to improve transport conditions for live animals, and in the light of CITES conference resolution 7.13, are considering what further steps may be necessary to supplement the existing substantial safeguards which already operate in the United Kingdom.

Commons Registration Act

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the working of the Commons Registration Act 1965; and when he expects to bring forward proposals to amend it.

Mr. Trippier: We recognise, as did the Common Land Forum, that there are deficiencies in the Commons Registration Act 1965. For our legislative intentions, I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 27 November 1989 to my hon. Friend the Member for Harborough (Sir J. Farr), (Official Report, Vol. 162, column 89).

Standard Spending Assessments

Mr. Gow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the resident population of the borough of Eastbourne for the purpose of calculating its standard spending assessment; how he arrived at the size of the resident population; to what extent and at what date the figure for the size of the resident population is accurate; whether he and the Eastbourne borough council agree on the size of the resident population; and what representations he has received on this subject from the borough council.

Mr. Chope: The resident population of the borough of Eastbourne used for the purpose of calculating its standard spending assessment is 80,353. This figure is arrived at in accordance with the provisions of the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England) and is the estimate of the registrar general for England and Wales of the resident population at 30 June 1988. I believe that this is the best information available for this purpose, being compiled on a consistent and impartial basis and providing the necessary breakdown between age groups. The community charges registration officer for Eastbourne has reported a figure of 67,903 as being the number of persons registered as subject to pay the personal community charge, with an adjustment for students, and estimated to pay collective community charge contributions at 1 December 1989. Eastbourne borough council has made representations that the figures from its community charges register should be used for the purpose of calculating its standard spending assessment in place of the registrar general's estimate. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State considered these representations before he made the distribution report but decided not to make the change suggested.

Mr. Gow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what procedures exist for altering the standard spending assessment of a borough council for the year ending 31 March 1991 where it is discovered that the figure taken as the size of the resident population turns out to be misleading.

Mr. Chope: The standard spending assessment for each borough council, as for other councils, has been calculated in accordance with the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England). The use of resident population figures calculated on a different basis from that specified in that report would require the making of an amendment report. If representations were made to that effect, my right hon. Friend would take them into account in considering whether to make an amendment report.

Cash Limits

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he proposes to make any changes to the cash limit on the Property Services Agency civil vote in 1989-90.

Mr. Chope: Yes, subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit for class XX vote 18 will be increased by £11,725,000 from token provision of £1,000 to £11,726,000. A reduction of £3,960,000 was made in the main Estimate from provision of £791,436,000 to compensate for the cash limit breach on this vote in 1988-89, which resulted in an excess vote of £9,200,000. Against this, increases are needed to finance the acquisition of freehold and long leasehold office accommodation and increased rents payments, to offset a shortfall in capital receipts, and to finance additional expenditure on the parliamentary and the royal parks and palaces works programmes. The increase will be charged to the reserve.

Storm Damage

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those county authorities which have requested assistance from his Department following the storm of 25 January; and if he will list the SSA for each authority.

Mr. David Hunt: No local authority has yet made a formal request for assistance, but in view of the obviously serious nature of the storm, the Government announced on 25 January that special financial assistance would be made available.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the isolation of a county from its neighbours in extreme weather conditions is a factor which was considered in calculating SSAs.

Mr. David Hunt: This was not a factor considered. Although the Isle of Wight councils provided a paper which argued their case for recognition of extra costs that they claimed by virtue of separation from the mainland, isolation in extreme weather conditions was not a factor which entered the case that they put forward.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement authorising those counties affected by the storm of 25 January to repair the damage under the Bellwin rules.

Mr. David Hunt: Special financial arrangements to help local authorities in emergencies—known as the Bellwin scheme—have been announced and will be available for the areas covered by the storm.

Construction Products Directive

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress is being made in giving accreditation to third party certification bodies dealing with product conformity under the construction products directive; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 24 January 1990]: The British Board of Agrément was designated on 22 November 1989 to issue European technical approvals. It will also act as the spokesman for the United Kingdom in the European organisation of technical approval bodies to be set up under the construction products directive.

My Department is discussing with representatives of the construction industry, the European Commission and other member states, the appropriate arrangements for accreditation under the directive. We are also exploring with the National Measurement Accreditation Service and the National Accreditation Council for Certification Bodies how they might assist my Department in designating testing laboratories and certification bodies.

Revenue Support Grant

Mr. Gow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is the relevant population of the borough of Eastbourne for the purpose of calculating entitlement to revenue support grant; and how he arrived at the figure for the relevant population

(2) what representations he has received from; the Eastbourne borough council about the size of the relevant population of the borough of Eastbourne for the purpose of calculating revenue support grant for the year ending 31 March 1991; and whether he is satisfied that the figure for the size of the relevant population is as accurate as possible.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 26 January 1990]: The relevant population for the borough of Eastbourne for 1990-91 is 67,903. This figure has been calculated in accordance with the provisions of the Population Report (England) approved by the House on 18 January. For Eastbourne, the calculation is based on data provided and certified by the community charges registration officer for the borough, and I have no reason to believe that the figure is not accurate. I have received no representations about the size of the relevant population. The treasurer did, however, make representations about the estimates of population used in calculating standard spending assessments, which are derived from a different source. These representations were considered before my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State made the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England).

Mr. Gow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what procedures exist for altering the distribution of revenue support grant for a district council for the year ending 31 March 1991 where it is discovered that an error has been made in assessing the size of the relevant population.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 26 January 1990]: The relevant population for each district council for 1990-91 has been calculated in accordance with the Population Report (England). I am not aware of any errors having been made in this calculation. If any errors were discovered, my right hon. Friend would consider what action was necessary, depending on the circumstances of the case.

Local Government Finance, Eastbourne

Mr. Gow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what will be the level of the community charge in the borough of Eastbourne and in the district of Wealden on the basis of figures published by him on 11 January; and what is his estimate of overspending by Eastbourne and by Wealden for adults for the current year.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 26 January 1990]: On the basis of the assumptions used for the revenue support grant settlement, the community charge for 1990-91 would be £298 in Eastbourne and £270 in Wealden. In 1989-90 Eastbourne's reported budgeted total expenditure is £919,000 more than its grant-related expenditure assessment, and Wealden's expenditure is £727,000 more than its GRE. Expressed as amounts per adult using the relevant population for 1990-91, these figures are £14 and £7 respectively.

English Heritage

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list all grant offers and section 3A repair grant offers made by English Heritage for each year from 1984-85 to 1989-90, broken down by recipient organisation;

(2) if he will list total grant offers made by English Heritage from 1984-85 to 1989-90, broken down by category of grant, further subdividing section 3A repair grants between church and secular grants and showing each category as a proportion of the annual total;

(3) what is English Heritage's salary bill for 1984-85 to 1990-91 in real terms and for each year, as a proportion of grant in aid;

(4) what is the total staff complement of English Heritage for 1984-85 to 1989-90 and the estimates to 1992-93;

(5) what proportion of grant in aid was (a) offered and (b) paid by English Heritage in grants from 1984-85 to 1990-91;

(6) what was the Government's grant in aid to English Heritage in real terms from 1984-85 to 1992-93;

(7) what were English Heritage's operating costs from 1984-85 to 1990-91, broken down by category and showing each category as a proportion of the annual total.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 26 January 1990]: The detailed breakdown of expenditure on building repair grants, salaries and operating costs, and information on staff complement are matters for English Heritage. I have asked the chairman, Lord Montagu, to write to the hon. Member. Government grant in aid to English Heritage is as follows:

	Cash	Real terms at 1990-91 prices
1985-86	52·2	68·5
1986-87	60·1	76·3
1987-88	65·3	78·7
1988-89	66·2	74·4
1989-90	72·4	76·0
1990-91	78·0	78·0

Grant in aid for 1991-92 and subsequent years is allocated provisionally and is subject to revision during the appropriate year's public expenditure survey.

Start-up Grant

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many people in the past year have applied for a start-up grant, following advice from the Bradford enterprise centre; when applications were submitted to him; when he is going to take decisions on those applications; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 23 January 1990]: I have been asked to reply.

The Bradford enterprise centre provides a range of assistance and support for new and expanding businesses including start-up grants, which are available from a number of sources. No details are available on the numbers of people who may have applied for start-up assistance following advice from the centre, or of the outcome.

As part of Bradford metropolitan district council's inner area programme, the Government do, however, fund a business development scheme, which offers start-up grants of up to £2,000 to applicants who meet agreed criteria. For this particular start-up scheme, there have been 47 applications in the current financial year. Thirty applications were received on 10 July 1989 and decisions on 28 of these were issued by the Department on 21 July. One was subsequently withdrawn and the remaining application was determined in September on receipt of further information. Following the satisfactory conclusion on 8 January of discussions about the detailed operation of the scheme, the Department is now able to consider the 17 further applications received in November. Decisions can be expected shortly.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Organic Farming

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, 4Fisheries and Food when he received a document from the Soil Association entitled "20 per cent. of Britain Organic by the Year 2000"; what steps he has taken, or plans to take to assess the practicality of the proposals it contains; and what reply he has sent to the Soil Association.

Mr. Curry: I have not received from the Soil Association a copy of the document to which the hon. Member refers, although I am aware of it. In my reply on 16 January to a question from the hon. Member for Truro (Mr. Taylor) I referred to the steps being taken by the Government to encourage organic farming (Official Report columns 215-16).

Mince

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he intends introducing regulations governing the lean to fat ratios in mince; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Not for the present. I need to await developments in the European Community concerning proposals for the quantitative declaration of characterising ingredients of foodstuffs and the possible extension of the existing directive on minced meat to domestic production, both of which issues are likely to be discussed in the next few months.

Food Colouring

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food under what circumstances the inclusion in food of colouring matter is deemed to be necessary.

Mr. Maclean: The Food Advisory Committee (FAC), in its review of the Colouring Matter in Food Regulations 1973, discussed the need for colours to be added to food. It concluded that the responsible use of colours continues to have a role in providing consumers with a choice of attractively presented foods. It also, however, recommended stricter controls on their use including an extension to the list of foods which currently must not contain added colours. I announced in the House on 29 November last year the Government's acceptance of the FAC's recommendations. I therefore refer the hon. Member to the committee's final report on the review and its response to comments received on its final report, copies of which have already been placed in the Library of the House.

Sheep Offal

Mr. Parry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if there is any evidence of danger to animals that are fed food containing sheep offal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Sheep offal is subject to the prohibition on the use of ruminant-derived protein in ruminant feedstuffs as these species may be susceptible to the scrapie agent. There is no evidence to suggest that it poses a risk to non-ruminant species such as pigs and poultry.

Captive Birds (Imports)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his reply of 20 December 1989, Official Report, column 300, what further steps he has taken to ensure that the requirements relating to the import of captive birds are being fulfilled.

Mr. Maclean: The review of post-import quarantine arrangements is continuing. Visits by veterinary staff to major exporting countries and meetings with representatives of the bird trade and conservation organisations are being arranged. I have written to the airlines emphasising the need for proper care in transporting birds.

Non-smokers

Mr. Amos: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what provisions are being made in all the offices and other places under his Department's control for the convenience and comfort of non-smokers; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy for non-smokers.

Mr. Curry: Restrictions on smoking already apply at certain buildings. The Department's aim is to establish a non-smoking regime at each of its buildings but with facilities for smokers. We are progressively moving towards this position.

Animal Feed (Contamination)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) cattle and (b) sheep are restricted, as a result of lead-contaminated animal feed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies), Official Report, 24 January, columns 769-70. Details of numbers of individual animals under restriction are not held centrally.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all the countries in which restrictions are still imposed as a result of lead-contaminated animal feed; and, in each country, how many farms are under restriction.

Mr. Maclean: There are 1,512 farms still under restriction in England and a further 156 in Wales. The only other country known to have been affected was the Netherlands where I understand that one farm is still subject to restrictions.

Hill Livestock Allowances

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to increase hill livestock compensatory allowances by at least £3 per head; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Dr. Thomas) on 23 January 1990, at column 641.

Cattle Offal

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to ban the use of cattle offal from calves under six months old for human consumption.

Mr. Maclean: Offal from calves under six months of age do not present any risk. Such action would not, therefore, be justified.

Live Cattle Exports

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the economic impact of the European Economic Community restrictions on live cattle exports in the British beef and dairy industries.

Mr. Curry: The restrictions that the Commission is expected to adopt would, if in force in 1988, still have allowed the export of 249,000 (94 per cent.) of the 266,000 live cattle and calves exported in that year. The most important effect of the restrictions is likely to be on exports of breeding animals which were some 7,000 head and worth about £5 million in 1988.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the legal basis for the decision of the European Economic Community to ban the import of live cattle (a) born prior to June 1988 and (b) over six months of age.

Mr. Maclean: The Commission's proposal refers to the treaty of Rome and article 9D of directive 64/432.

Bovine Offal

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will provide details of restrictions imposed on the human consumption of bovine offal by the EEC member states other than the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: I am not aware that any other European Community member state has imposed restrictions on the consumption of offal.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what restrictions are imposed on the import of bovine offal currently banned from human consumption in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 25 January at column 821.

Non-price Support Measures

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish details of the new non-price support measures proposed by the Commission which he questioned at the Council of Ministers' meetings on 22 and 23 January.

Mr. Curry: The principal non-price elements proposed by the Commission as part of its price proposals are:

An aid for small arable producers, defined as producers with not more than 20 hectares of land who derive the main part of their income from cereals, oilseeds and pulses;

An aid to encourage the production of millet, canary seed and buckwheat;

The extension of suckler cow premium to suckler cows owned by small milk producers, who are defined as producers with a quota of not more than 60,000 kg a year;

The introduction of a Community financed scheme for the purchase of milk quota from producers undertaking to cease milk production altogether. The quota obtained would be reallocated by the member state concerned to producers in less favoured and mountainous areas, to bring their quotas up to no more than 60,000 or 100,000 kg a year respectively;

An increase of 4 ecu in the rate of annual ewe premium in less-favoured areas.

Meat and Bone meal Exports

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what certificates are currently required by France, West Germany and Israel to accompany meat and bone meal exports from the United Kingdom; and if he will list those other countries which have made representations to him concerning the quality of such exports;

(2) what representations he has received from other countries regarding the quality of meat and bone meal being exported from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: The certification currently required is as follows:

France—that the meat and bone meal is destined for use other than as food for ruminants;

West Germany—application must be made to the appropriate Land authority for an import permit. This will state the particular certification which is required in each case. The Ministry is unaware that any application has been made and is not aware of any conditions which individual Laender may stipulate; and Israel—that the meal is derived from poultry.

I have received no representations about the quality of United Kingdom exports.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Parry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to assess the risk of transmission of bovine spongiform encephalopathy through pet food.

Mr. Maclean: Infectivity and other studies of tissues from BSE-affected cattle are currently being funded by MAFF at the neuropathogenesis unit and the central veterinary laboratory.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the estimate of the Southwood committee for the likely weekly maximum of new reported cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy; and at what weekly level new cases are currently being reported.

Mr. Maclean: The report of the Southwood working party estimated that 350 to 400 new cases of BSE might occur per month. In recent months around 800 cases have been confirmed. This is consistent with the single source epidemic described by Southwood.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has yet determined what processes are necessary to deactivate the bovine spongiform encephalopathy agent in meat and bone meal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Research is in hand to try and establish the processes which might inactivate the agent of BSE.

ENERGY

Fiddler's Ferry Power Station

11. Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he has any plans to visit Fiddler's Ferry power station; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: I have no present plans to do so.

Nottingham Coalfield

12. Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he last met the chairman of British Coal to discuss the future of the Nottingham coalfield.

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. Friend and I meet the chairman of British Coal regularly to discuss all aspects of the coal industry, including the Nottinghamshire coalfield.

Electricity Prices

13. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his most up-to-date estimate of the rate of increase in the price of electricity to domestic customers for the year from 1 April.

20. Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his most up-to-date estimate of the percentage increase in domestic electricity prices in April for the following 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wakeham: It is for the area boards to set their own domestic tariffs from 1 April this year following their contract negotiations with generators. Ministers have said that they will approve the initial contracts to ensure that the terms are reasonable.

37. Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy by how much domestic electricity prices rose in the periods 1984 to 1989 and 1974 to 1979.

Mr. Baldry: In the period December 1984 to December 1989 domestic electricity prices decreased in real terms by 8 per cent.

In the period May 1974 to May 1979 (the last five years of the last Labour Government) domestic electricity prices increased in real terms by 9 per cent.

Offshore Oil and Gas

14. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many people are employed in the United Kingdom's offshore oil and gas installations.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Provisional figures indicate that 31,000 people were employed offshore on oil and gas installations in 1989, which is some 6 per cent. higher than in 1988.

British Coal

16. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he last met the chairman of British Coal; and what matters were discussed.

48. Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he last met the chairman of British Coal; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Wakeham: I meet the chairman of British Coal regularly to discuss all aspects of the coal industry.

Nuclear Electric

18. Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he can now announce the terms and conditions of employment of the staff of the nuclear corporation.

Mr. Baldry: This will be a matter for Nuclear Electric. The company will need to offer salaries and benefits sufficient to retain and recruit the skilled staff it needs to run its nuclear stations safely and efficiently.

Deep-mined Coal

19. Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if his Department has made any estimate of the likely production of deep-mined coal from Scottish pits in 1990 and 1991.

Mr. Baldry: No. Business projections are a matter for British Coal.

Energy Efficiency

21. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what has been the improvement in energy efficiency in the United Kingdom since 1979; and what information he has for the rest of the European Community.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Energy consumption is virtually unchanged, but GDP has risen by 20 per cent. Between 1982 and 1986, the latest period for which European Community figures are available, our rate of improvement was twice the Community average.

Pit Closures

22. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he last discussed pit closures with the chairman of British Coal.

Mr. Wakeham: I meet the chairman of British Coal regularly to discuss all aspects of the coal industry.

Insulation

23. Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what assessment he has made of the costs and benefits of the neighbourhood energy action community insulation programmes.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Community insulation projects have played a valuable role in combining implementation of basic insulation measures in low-income households with training for the unemployed. The Social Security Bill, which received its Second Reading on 22 January, will give my right hon. Friend powers to introduce a new scheme of grant not dependent on the availability of trainees. The costs and benefits of this scheme will be monitored and evaluated in the normal way.

43. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he has any further plans to encourage home insulation.

55. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what steps he is taking to encourage home insulation measures.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Existing programmes by the Energy Efficiency Office to encourage and promote energy efficiency in housing include publication of relevant information and advice under the best practice programme; support for community insulation projects; marketing and publicity initiatives, targeted on low-income households and on those moving house or undertaking improvements; and liaison arrangements with professional bodies in the building sector to encourage building professionals to give greater consideration to energy efficiency in the design of buildings.

The Social Security Bill, which received its Second Reading on 22 January, will enable my right hon. Friend to build on the arrangements to promote energy efficiency in low-income households through the introduction of a new scheme of grants.

25. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will restore the level of investment and employment in community insulation projects to that obtaining in 1988.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The principal purpose of community insulation projects is to help those on low incomes to be more efficient in their use of energy. The Social Security Bill, which received its Second Reading on 22 January, will give my right hon. Friend powers to introduce a new scheme of grants towards the costs of insulation measures in low-income households. I expect the new scheme to increase significantly the rate at which such measures are implemented.

Oil Production

24. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are the prospects for oil production during 1990.

35. Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are the prospects for oil production during 1990.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Prospects for the oil production industry are extremely encouraging. I expect continued recovery of oil output in 1990. Output could be up to 10 million tonnes higher than the 1989 level of 91 million tonnes.

40. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are his latest estimates of North sea oil production for each year in the 1990s.

41. Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are the latest estimates of North sea oil production for each year in the 1990s.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My Department is currently reviewing its forecast ranges for oil production for the next five years. This will be presented to Parliament when it is available.

Greenhouse Gases

26. Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his most up-to-date estimate of the prospective increase in greenhouse gases emission from all energy sources in the United Kingdom by the year 2005.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Estimates of such emissions under a wide range of scenarios for economic growth and energy prices were included in a study, carried out last year by my Department, entitled, "An evaluation of Energy Related Greenhouse Gas Emissions and Measures to Ameliorate Them". This was part of the United Kingdom's input to the work of the energy and industry subgroup to the response strategies working group of the UNEP/WMO intergovernmental panel on climate change (IPCC). A copy of the study was placed in the Library of the House on 30 November 1989; and it is to be published this week as Energy Paper 58.

Independent Electricity Generators

27. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are the prospects for the establishment of independent generators after the privatisation of the electricity supply industry.

32. Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what assessment he has made of the prospects for the establishment of independent generators after the privatisation of the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Baldry: The encouragement of competition in generation has always been one of the fundamental aims of our privatisation proposals. My Department is aware of around 20 major private generation projects in prospect, totalling some 7GW of capacity. The first of the new independent generating companies to take advantage of the opportunities offered as a result of our proposals is Lakeland Power, which last October signed a contract with the North Western electricity board.

Fabrication Sector

28. Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on current and projected levels of activity in the United Kingdom fabrication sector.

Mr. Peter Morrison: New capital expenditure in oil and gas development is estimated to reach £3·7 billion in 1990 —an increase of 75 per cent. compared with £2·1 billion in 1988—which clearly will improve the prospects for the United Kingdom offshore supplies industry, including the fabrication sector, in 1990 and beyond. Current level of fabrication activity is 229,000 tonnes.

Gas Prices

30. Mr. Charles Wardle: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy by how much domestic gas prices have increased since the privatisation of the gas industry.

52. Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy by how much domestic gas prices have increased since the privatisation of the gas industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Domestic gas prices have increased by less than 5 per cent. in current terms since privatisation. This represents a decrease of 13 per cent. in real terms.

Energy Sources

31. Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what proportion of his Department's research budget was spent on alternative energy sources in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Peter Morrison: In 1988-89 8·9 per cent. of my Department's research and development budget was spent on renewable energy sources.

54. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what progress has been made with the alternative energy projects currently funded or planned by his Department in Cornwall.

Mr. Peter Morrison: There are three major renewable energy research and development projects in Cornwall.

My Department contributed to the cost of the Cornwall energy project conducted by the Cornwall county council. Proposals for specific pieces of work arising from the first study are expected.

The geothermal hot dry rocks project operated by the Camborne School of Mines is progressing to schedule. A review of progress of the programme and future possibilities with the school is under way.

The Central Electricity Generating Board is progressing plans for an 8MW wind farm at Cold Northcott. My Department expects to contribute up to one third of the cost.

Non-fossil Fuel Obligation

33. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his latest estimate of the additional cost of the non-fossil fuel obligation subsequent to vesting day in the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Baldry: Customers currently pay for nuclear power in their electricity bills. The introduction of the non-fossil fuel obligation will not change this. The additional cost of meeting the obligation compared with the cost of generating the same electricity from fossil sources will be shown in the fossil fuel levy. It is too early to say what the initial size of the levy will be.

British Gas (Disconnections)

34. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many British Gas customers had their gas supply disconnected for debt in 1989; and what are the comparable figures for previous years.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Sherwood (Mr. Stewart).

British Coal (Scottish Contracts)

36. Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what discussions he has had with British Coal about the future of the industry in Scotland and the recent Court of Session judgments over the validity of contracts between British Coal and the South of Scotland electricity board.

Mr. Baldry: I meet the chairman of British Coal regularly to discuss all aspects of the coal industry. The Court of Session judgments over the validity of contracts between British Coal and the SSEB are a matter for the parties concerned.

Combined Heat and Power

38. Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a further statement on his policy on combined heat and power schemes.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave him on 18 December, Official Report, column 8. I have nothing further to add.

Sizewell B

39. Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what has been the expenditure to date on Sizewell B nuclear power station.

Mr. Baldry: This is a matter for the CEGB.

Tidal Power

42. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what steps he is taking to encourage development of tidal power projects.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My Department is supporting a wide-ranging programme of studies on potential tidal energy sites in the United Kingdom. The aim of the current work is to reduce the uncertainty on costs, performance and regional and environmental issues to the point where it will be possible to take decisions on whether to plan for construction.

Coal Imports

44. Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are the most up-to-date figures or estimates available to him of the tonnage of coal imports into (a) Scotland and (b) Great Britain as a whole for 1989, 1990, 1991.

Mr. Baldry: Information on coal imports is available for the period January to November 1989 as shown in the table. We do not produce estimates for future years.

	Million tonnes
Scotland	1·5
Great Britain	10·9

Source: Her Majesty's Customs and Excise (port of entry basis)

Mr. Buckley: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are his most up-to-date figures for coal imports into the United Kingdom for 1989 and his latest estimate for 1990.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that my right hon. Friend gave to the hon. Member for Bolsover (Mr. Skinner) earlier today.

51. Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what percentage of the United Kingdom coal-burn in 1989 was imported.

Mr. Baldry: Twelve per cent. of coal burned in the United Kingdom during the period January to November 1989—the latest period for which information is available—was imported.

Pipelines (Shutdown Valves)

45. Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many oil and gas pipelines on the United Kingdom continental shelf have had sub-sea emergency shutdown valves fitted.

Mr. Peter Morrison: A total of 26 oil and gas pipelines to fixed offshore installations are fitted with sub-sea isolation systems. In addition, all oil and gas pipeline risers to the six floating production platforms on the United Kingdom continental shelf are fitted with these systems.

Miners

46. Mr. Cunliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his most up-to-date estimate of the number of miners on British Coal's books on 1 January 1989, 1 January 1990 and 1 January 1991.

50. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his most up-to-date estimate of the level of colliery manpower on the books of British Coal by 1 January 1991.

Mr. Baldry: For the week ended 31 December 1988 there were 85,883 men on British Coal's colliery books. The equivalent figure for the week ended 30 December 1989 was 66,059. The Government do not make estimates of future manning levels in British Coal. Such levels depend on a number of factors, including the corporation's continued ability to raise its competitiveness.

Coal Burning

47. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what steps his Department is taking to encourage the coal mining industry to develop new methods of burning coal.

Mr. Baldry: British Coal has an international reputation for research and development into new methods of burning coal and an impressive record of introducing new ideas commercially in association with plant manufacturers. Government support for pre-commercial research and development on new combustion technologies is made available from time to time as appropriate, such as at British Coal's Grimethorpe facility, where £17 million was provided for pressurised fluidised bed combustion over the period 1976 to 1984, and up to a further £8 million offered last year for a three-year programme on British Coal's topping cycle concept.

Energy Conservation

49. Mr. Ray Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his most up-to-date estimate of the level of investment in energy conservation by the (a) domestic, (b) industrial and (c) public sectors over the next five years.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Investment in energy efficiency measures is a matter for individual consumers and the information requested is not available; where the Government are directly responsible, we have begun a campaign which is expected to lead to Government Departments increasing their investment in energy efficiency by up to 10 per cent. of their annual expenditure on energy.

Nuclear Electric

53. Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he next proposes to meet the chairman of the national nuclear company; and what matters he proposes to discuss.

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. Friend and I intend to meet the chairman of Nuclear Electric whenever necessary to discuss matters of concern to Nuclear Electric.

Nuclear Power

56. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what future plans his Department has for the development of the nuclear power industry in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Energy to the hon. Member for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours) on 18 December 1989, column 6.

Non-smokers

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what provisions are being made in all the offices and other places under his Department's control for the convenience and comfort of non-smokers; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy for non-smokers.

Mr. Wakeham: The only premises for which my Department has prime responsibility are its headquarters at 1 Palace street, SW1. The policy there is that staff are asked to refrain from smoking in offices where there is a non-smoker; and that smoking is not allowed in most common areas of the building. The operation of these arrangements will be kept under review in consultation with staff.

Sulphur Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will make it his policy that the prospectuses for the sale of shares in National Power and PowerGen include the commitment to instal flue gas desulphurisation in 12,000 MW of generating capacity to achieve the EC target of 60 per cent. reduction in sulphur dioxide emissions;

(2) if he will make it his policy to ensure that Britain's electricity-generating industry pursues the EC programme of installing flue gas desulphurisation in 12,000 MW of generating capacity to achieve the 60 per cent. reduction in sulphur dioxide emissions by 2003;

(3) if he will make it his policy to ensure that National Power and PowerGen complete the EC programme of flue gas desulphurisation to cut sulphur dioxide emissions by 60 per cent. by the year 2003;

(4) what consultation he (a) has had and (b) expects to have regarding the British electricity-generating industry's programme to instal flue gas desulphurisation in 12,000 MW of capacity to achieve the EC target of 60 per cent. reduction in sulphur dioxide emissions by the year 2003.

Mr. Baldry: The Government are determined to implement in full the EC large combustion plants directive. This directive commits the United Kingdom to reduce its emissions of sulphur dioxide (and nitrogen oxides) from existing plants, such as fossil-fuelled power stations, but does not specify the means by which this should be done. Retrofitting flue gas desulphurisation equipment will play a major part in this, but the burning of low sulphur fuels, including gas, may also contribute. The prospectuses for the sale of National Power and PowerGen will explain how they plan to achieve the reductions required of them. The Government invited public comment last August on their plans to implement the directive. Further consultation will take place before a plan for reductions of emissions from existing plants is issued.

Imported Electricity (France)

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if supplies of French nuclear-generated electricity imported via the cross-Channel interconnector will be included within the non-fossil fuel quota of electricity supplied to the grid in the United Kingdom;

(2) what steps he will be taking to ensure that there is no subsidisation of nuclear-generated electricity purchased from Electricité de France under the arrangements for the non-fossil fuel quota.

Mr. Baldry: The cross-Channel link was built to be used for electricity trading in both directions and mutual assistance. Recent trading has been in both directions. Negotiations are taking place with Electricité de France for these arrangements to continue in future. Given the interruptible nature of these arrangements, imports through the link will not qualify for inclusion in the non-fossil fuel obligation. Electricity sales through the link will be on a fully commercial basis, without subsidy.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what was the total in (a) GWh, and (b) cost, of electricity imported from France via the cross-Channel interconnector in 1989.

Mr. Baldry: Figures for the whole year are not yet available. For the first 11 months of 1989, imports totalled 13,210 GWh with a value of £285·3 million[1].

I understand that figures for December will show the United Kingdom was a net exporter of electricity to France.

Director General of Electricity Supply

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his estimate of the cost to the public purse for the office of the Director General of Electricity Supply.

Mr. Baldry: The costs of the Office of Electricity Regulation will be recovered through fees to be paid by the electricity industry.

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his estimate of the total cost of establishing the office of the Director General of Electricity Supply.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to my hon. Friend the Member for Daventry (Mr. Boswell) on 26 January 1990, at column 904.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Cash Limits

Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether there are any changes to his Department's cash limits or running cost limits for 1989-90.

Mr. Ridley: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates:

There will be a token increase of £1,000 on class V, vote 1 (regional and selective assistance, support for aerospace, shipbuilding, steel and vehicle manufacture) to introduce a new subhead to meet expenditure on a special payment of £31,790,000 to the International Tin Council. Extra provision of £23,123,000 is also being made for assistance to the shipbuilding industry. The special payment to the International Tin Council and the additional provision for assistance to the shipbuilding industry are offset by a higher than expected receipts and reduced demand for expenditure on regional development grants, regional selective assistance, selective assistance to industry, and support for the aerospace and steel industries.

The cash limit for class V, vote 3 (administration, regulation of domestic trade and industry and consumer protection) will be increased by £155,642,000 from £248,181,000 to £403,823,000. The increase covers provision of £156,000,000 for ex gratia payments to investors in Barlow Clowes Gilt Managers Ltd. and Barlow Clowes International Ltd., and associated expenses: the decision to make these payments was announced in the House on 19 December 1989.

Substantial recoveries are expected in future years and these will be credited to the Consolidated Fund. The increase is partially offset by transfers of £322,000 to the Central Statistical Office (class XIX, vote 18) in respect of staff and services recently transferred to the CSO; £24,000 to the Cabinet Office (class XX, vote 2) in respect of the transfer to that Department of the post of Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster; and £12,000 to the Department of the Environment (class X, vote 5) in respect of the transfer to that Department of responsibility for the Government's city action teams. Included in these transfers are provisions for running costs which result in the running cost limit for the Department being reduced by £221,000 from £305,098,000 to £304,877,000.

In addition to these changes, the cash limit for class V, vote 2 (support for industry) will be reduced by £72,500,000 from £570,837,000 to £498,337,000. This reflects reductions in requirements of £18·7 million for innovation, of £19·8 million for regional enterprise grants, and of £4 million for assistance for exceptional projects, in each case as a result of lower than expected demand, together with a reduction of £17 million for the consultancy initiatives as a result of lower costs per case and a slower than expected rate of completion of projects than originally anticipated, a reduction of £6 million for education and training as a result of lower than expected levels of activity, and a reduction of £7 million in grant in aid provision for the English Industrial Estates Corporation in the light of greater than expected receipts.

The net effect of these changes will be charged to the reserve.

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has any proposals for requiring accountancy firms to split audit practices for tax advice and consultancy work.

Mr. Redwood: No.

Bicycles

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from the bicycle manufacturing industry concerning recent EEC directives; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: Representation has been made by the cycle industry about European standard EN 71 (in the United Kingdom BS 5665) and the implications for certain children's cycles of the Toys (Safety) Regulations 1989 which implement the toy safety directive. There is concern that the tests specified in the standard may not meet the essential safety requirements of the regulations in respect of a range of children's cycles. We are considering this as a matter of urgency. If any harmonised standard does not meet the essential safety requirements the Government can refer the matter to the standing committee set up under directive 83/189 for reconsideration. However, the industry has been advised that when a harmonised standard is not appropriate to a particular product, it is open to the manufacturers to submit a model of the product to an approved body for an EC type examination. The test body is concerned to establish that the model submitted for approval meets the essential safety requirements and in so doing may, if the harmonised standard is inappropriate, have regard to other appropriate tests.

Unsolicited Mail

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what safeguards he will introduce to protect the general public against potential abuses deriving from the use of unsolicited mail shots of health care professions not subject to any forms of statutory registration.

Mr. Forth: I have no plans to introduce any new legislation in this area. As well as the general consumer protection law, there is the British code of advertising practice which applies to direct mail advertisements in the same way that it applies to advertisements published in newspapers and magazines. The Advertising Standards Authority will investigate any complaints about breaches of the code and will take any action it considers appropriate.

Non-smokers

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what provisions are being made in all the offices and other places under his Department's control for the convenience and comfort of non-smokers; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy for non-smokers.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 29 January]: At present, smoking is prohibited in most common areas including reception areas, waiting rooms, restaurants, libraries and conference rooms. Smoking is banned in any office where a majority of staff vote for such a ban.

Beds (Flammability)

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he proposes to publish BS 7177.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 29 January]: The Department of Trade and Industry does not publish British standards.

The British Standards Institution published BS 7177:1989 "Resistance to ignition of mattresses, divans and bed-bases" on 29 September 1989.

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to enable manufacturers to continue production of goods which are to be subject to BS 7177, and will be for retail sale after the date for compliance with BS 7177.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 29 January]: Agreement has now been reached on the British standard specification BS 7177, which I intend to approve for the purposes of the general safety requirement of the Consumer Protection Act 1987 in respect of the cigarette and match resistance of domestic mattresses with effect from 1 September 1990.

Eastbourne Water Company

Mr. Gow: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has yet completed his inquiries into the Eastbourne Water Company; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 26 January]: We are considering the matter, and I will write to the hon. Gentleman shortly.

Barlow Clowes

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on which date Barlow Clowes investors will begin to receive the detailed offer referred to in his statement of 19 December 1989.

Mr. Redwood: Messrs. Cork Gully and Ernst and Young, who are making the payments as the Department's agents, have informed me that all investors have now been sent a letter setting out their entitlement under the scheme of payments. Anyone who believes that he is entitled to claim but who has not yet received a letter should write to the Department's agents at Queensway house, London road, South Poynton, Cheshire SK12 1NJ. Investors have been asked to return their forms by 19 February, although claims made after that date may be accepted if good reason is shown for the delay. In the interests of prompt payment of claims investors should make sure that the deeds of assignment they have been asked to sign are properly completed and dated: some 30 per cent. of those returned so far have not been dated, and this will inevitably delay payment in these cases.

The payment to investors includes a sum representing interest up to 31 December 1989, as referred to in paragraph 8.19 of the Parliamentary Commissioner's report and in the letters sent to investors. I regret that due to a clerical error annex B to the Government's observations on the Parliamentary Commissioner's report contained the words "the date of payment" instead of "31 December 1989".

WALES

Free Milk

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many children are receiving free milk (a) under the age of five years, (b) at ages five to seven years and (c) at ages seven to 11 years.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: At September 1988 there were 10,444 children in maintained schools (including special) in Wales in receipt of free milk. Information is not available by age or for children who do not attend school.

Schools (Staff Budgets)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his most up-to-date estimate of the numbers and percentages of maintained primary and secondary schools in Wales whose school staff salary costs per teacher in post in 1993 will be (a) 15 per cent., (b) 10 per cent. and (c) 5 per cent. or more above average, (d) at or near the average and (e) 5 per cent., (f) 10 per cent. and (g) 15 per cent. below the average.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No estimates have been made.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he proposes to undertake before setting the formula for calculating school staff budgets under local financial management for maintained schools.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: None. As I told the hon. Gentleman on 25 January at column 851, it is the responsibility of each LEA to determine the formula for allocating budgets to the schools covered by its LMS scheme.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his most up-to-date estimate of the numbers and percentages of maintained primary and secondary schools in Wales whose school staff salary costs, relative to average school staff salary costs per teacher in post are (i) 15 per cent., (ii) 10 per cent., (iii) 5 per cent. or more above average, (iv) at or near the average and (v) 5 per cent., (vi) 10 per cent., and (vii) 15 per cent. below average.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The information is not readily available.

Education Spending

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each county the standard spending assessments in the categories and sub-categories for (a) education as a whole, (b) under-fives, (c) primary schools, (d) secondary schools, (e) 16 to 19-year-olds, (f) further and higher and (g) adult and community.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The Welsh revenue support grant formulae do not form a basis for calculating notional allocations of standard spending assessment for individual expenditure categories.

Hospital Spending

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report, hospital expenditure per head for each of the regional health authorities in Wales for each of the last five years.

Mr. Grist: There are no regional health authorities, in Wales. Welsh district health authorities' revenue, capital and total expenditures per head for the last five years are shown in the following tables:

Firing Range, Cardiff

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps have been taken to refurbish the range backstops at the national sports centre, Cardiff; when he expects work to be completed; and at what cost.

Mr. Grist: I would refer the hon. Gentleman to the Sports Council for Wales, which operates the national sports centre.

Leisure Facilities

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what assessment he has made of the cost of staff time that will be involved in the legal, financial and administrative work necessary to put the operation of leisure facilities out to tender in respect of (a) each district council in Wales and (b) each county council in Wales;

(2) what assessment he has made of the number of staff hours that will be involved in the legal, financial and administrative work necessary to put the operation of leisure and sports facilities out to tender in respect of (a) each district council in Wales and (b) each county council in Wales.

Mr. Grist: None. We are confident that the savings that will result will outweigh any initial costs incurred by authorities in preparing for competition.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will obtain for his Departmental library a copy of the report, "New Technology, the NPT and the International Atomic Agency Authority Safeguards System" by D. Fakley and Adolf Von Baeckmann, published by the Programme for Promoting Nuclear Non-Proliferation.

Mr. Maude: The report, "New Technology, the NPT and International Atomic Agency Authority Safeguards System" by D. Fakley and Adolf Von Baeckmann, published by the Programme for Promoting Nuclear Non-Proliferation, is an occasional paper issued by the Centre for International Policy Studies at the university of Southampton. A copy will be added to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office library in due course.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the European Council Ministers meeting in Dublin on 20 January discussed (a) European Community initiatives to export nuclear technology to eastern European states and (b) ways of using articles III and IV of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty to assist eastern Europe with nuclear technology.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. At the informal meeting of EC Foreign Ministers hosted by the Irish presidency on 20 January, there was no discussion of these matters.

Nepal

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he will take concerning violations of human rights in the Nakkhu prison, Nepal.

Mr. Maude: We will continue to make known to the Nepalese Government, as and when necessary, our concerns about respect for human rights.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Nepal concerning that country's non-party assembly system and the banning of the opposition.

Mr. Maude: None.

Kashmir

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has had seeking his intervention with the Indian Government concerning recent civil disturbances in Kashmir; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: None. We have no sympathy with those who espouse violence to achieve political ends. We hope it will prove possible to find a peaceful solution to the current problems in Kashmir.

Visas

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will take steps to bring about the mutual abolition of visas for travel between the United Kingdom and Hungary.

Mr. Maude: There are no plans at present to abolish visas for Hungarians travelling to the United Kingdom. However, we recognise that the situation in eastern Europe is changing rapidly. Although the final direction of these changes is far from clear, we welcome the moves towards greater democracy and freer movement of people. We shall continue to watch the situation closely and will adjust our policies in the light of developments, keeping in touch with our European Community partners.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs who will represent his Department at the Council of Ministers meetings; and what will be the agenda, on (a) general affairs: 5 and 6 February, 4 to 6 March, 2 and 3 April, 7 and 8 May, 18 and 19 June, 28 and 29 April and (b) development: 29 May.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and I normally attend Foreign Affairs Council meetings. Depending on the weight of trade items on the agenda, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry may also attend. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs attends informal Foreign Ministers' meetings, and my right hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development attends Development Council meetings.

Subjects expected to be discussed by the next and subsequent Foreign Affairs Councils include relations with eastern Europe, economic and monetary union, the Uruguay round, and trade relations with Third countries.

Kurds

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees concerning the problems of Kurdish people.

Mr. Maude: We are in regular touch with UNHCR on the problem of Kurdish refugees. We are currently studying an international appeal launched by the UNHCR on 20 December for assistance to Iraqi Kurdish refugees in Turkey.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations have been made to the Government of Iraq concerning the treatment of Kurdish people.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have nothing to add to the reply I gave the hon. Gentleman on 25 October last year at column 490.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps have been taken by the staff of Her Majesty's embassy in Turkey to visit the refugee camps of Kurdish asylum seekers from Iraq.

Mr. Maude: Staff from Her Majesty's embassy, Ankara, last visited the Iraqi Kurdish refugee camps in Turkey in July 1989. A request to the Turkish Government for a further visit in December was refused. We have repeatedly urged the Turkish Government to reconsider their position.

El Salvador

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has received on the progress of the investigations into the killing of six Jesuits in El Salvador.

Mr. Sainsbury: I understand that a colonel, two lieutenants, one sub-lieutenant, two sergeants, one corporal and two soldiers of the Salvadorean armed forces have now been detained in connection with the killing of the six Jesuits, their cook and her daughter.

Export Services

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will supply figures for spending by his Department on export services, in constant prices, for each year since 1979.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 22 January 1990]: Spending on export services is not identified separately in statistics on resources devoted by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to commercial work overseas. Generally, about 90 per cent. of commercial work is in support of British exports. Since 1984-85, the following amounts, excluding London overheads, have been devoted to commercial work overseas (at 1984-85 constant prices):

1984-85	56·9
1985-86	54·8
1986-87	54·8
1987-88	52·8

No comparable figures are available for the years before 1984-85.

The decline in spending in real terms during this period paralleled a similar decline in the FCO's overall overseas spending, but higher productivity in both responsive and initiative work led to increased output from fewer staff. For example, between 1983 and 1989, posts overseas reported a 14 per cent. increase in export intelligence notifications and a 60 per cent. increase in the number of market inquiries.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Rain Forests

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will name each of the research projects on the (a) medicinal and (b) nutritional plants and trees of the rain forest funded by (i) Her Majesty's Government and (ii) the European Community.

Mrs. Chalker: The research projects in nutritional plants and trees of tropical forests funded by the Overseas Development Administration are as follows:

African acacias: study and acquisition of genetic resources.

Evaluation of central American multipurpose hardwood tree species for dry zones.

Exploration and collection of calliandra calothyrsus.

Intensive study of leucaena genetic resources in central America and Mexico.

Evaluation of genetic variation in gliricidia sepium.

Acacia karoo: evaluation and acquisition of genetic resources.

There are currently no Overseas Development Organisation-funded projects on medicinal research, but we are ready to consider requests from developing countries for assistance in this area.

The European Community currently has a number of research projects under consideration. Details are not yet available.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Stephen and Christopher Fellows

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Attorney-General what was the cost of the case of Stephen and Christopher Fellows heard at Stafford crown court.

The Attorney-General: This case was tried in the Crown court at the election of the defendants, who there entered guilty pleas. The cost of 20 minutes' court time was about £300. The cost to the legal aid fund of solicitor and counsel will be about £280 to £380. Prosecution costs were £270, although these costs should be offset by the effects of an order made against the defendants to pay £120 each towards the costs of the prosecution.

European Community Reports (Disclosure)

Mr. Aitken: To ask the Attorney-General how many reports he has received of the unauthorised disclosure of internal EEC reports and documents since the passing of the Official Secrets Act; and what action he has taken in consequence.

The Attorney-General: I have received no such reports.

Abortions

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Attorney-General what criteria are taken into account in considering prosecutions in cases where medical personnel fit intra-uterine devices with the intention of aborting pregnancies in their early hours without obtaining the certification appropriate under the Abortion Act 1967.

The Attorney-General: The criteria set out in the code for Crown prosecutors, issued under section 10 of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985, are applied in all prosecutions considered by the Crown prosecution service. The criteria require that there is sufficient evidence to afford a realistic prospect of a conviction and that the public interest requires a prosecution in the circumstances.

EC (Internal Market Document)

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Attorney-General what action he proposes to take under the Official Secrets Act in relation to the publication in the British press of the internal Community document relating to the impact of the internal market on regions; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: None.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Mortgage Interest Relief

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the value today of the ceiling for mortgage interest tax relief if it had been indexed in line with inflation and if it had been indexed in line with average house prices.

Mr. Lilley: The ceiling for mortgage interest relief was set at £30,000 in 1983-84. It would be £41,000 in 1989-90 if it had increased in line with the movement in retail prices, and £64,000 if it had increased in line with the movement in average house prices.

Earned Income (Taxation of Benefits)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will increase in line with inflation the current level of earned income above which all benefits are taxable.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 29 January 1990]: I cannot anticipate my right hon. Friend's Budget statement.

Mr. Archy Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the current level of earned income above which all benefits are taxable if the existing level had risen in line with the retail price index since the time it was fixed at £8,500.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 29 January 1990]: The earnings threshold—also known as the PIID limit—above which employees' benefits are taxed would be £18,100 in 1989-90 if it had risen in line with the retail price index since it was fixed at £8,500 in 1979-80. All directors are liable to tax on their benefits regardless of the level of their earnings.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Recruitment Advertising

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the posts advertised for the last three years by (a) health and social services boards, (b) the Department of Health and Social Services, (c) education and library boards and (d) the Department of Education for Northern Ireland showing which publications each post was advertised in and the number of applicants who replied to each.

Mr. Cope: Statistics relating to general service grades are not available by Department as all posts in this category are advertised by the Civil Service Commission to fill vacancies on a Northern Ireland Civil Service-wide basis.

The information requested at parts (a) and (c) is set out in the tables below:

Cerebral Palsy

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what research he has commissioned to investigate the causes of cerebral palsy;

(2) what steps his Department is taking to monitor trends in cerebral palsy.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 22 January 1990]: None. The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research in the United Kingdom is the Medical Research Council. However, I understand the Department of Health is funding some research into the causes of cerebral palsy.

Construction Materials

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what effects on steel reinforcing have been reported to him as a result of alkali silica reaction or alkali aggregate reaction in the concrete used for the construction of any public building, bridge, sewage works, or water impoundment dam in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 23 January 1990]: None.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether any alkali silica reaction or alkali aggregate reaction has been reported in any concrete used in the construction of any building or other publicly or Government-funded construction now in public ownership in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 23 January 1990]: I am aware of only one concrete structure in public ownership in Northern Ireland with a problem which may have been caused by alkali aggregate reaction. The problem is not considered serious, but further investigations are being carried out.

Firearms

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what definition his Department uses of a replica firearm.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 23 January 1990]: Article 2 of the Firearms (Northern Ireland) Order 1981 defines imitation firearm as "anything which has the appearance of being a firearm whether or not it is capable of discharging any shot, bullet or other missile".

Additionally, under the Firearms (Northern Ireland) Order 1983 any imitation firearm which is readily convertible with a firearm is treated as if it were a firearm.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he has taken to investigate with the British Standards Institute the specifications for a standard for (a) firearms and (b) ammunition enclosure for use in domestic premises in Northern Ireland for sporting firearms and ammunition.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 23 January 1990]: None directly, but the Royal Ulster Constabulary has contributed to the Home Office study with the British Standards Institute on the subject.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Royal Ulster Constabulary issues a receipt for each firearm taken into the possession of the police when a firearm certificate is not renewed.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 23 January 1990]: The Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary has informed me that an official receipt is given in such circumstances.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Royal Ulster Constabulary issues reminders to the holders of firearms certificates before the expiry of the certificates (a) before the renewal of the certificate and (b) before the normal period taken to process such a renewal application.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 23 January 1990]: The Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary has informed me that a reminder is sent to the firearm certificate holder one month prior to the month in which his certificate is due for renewal. A final reminder is sent one month after the end of the month in which the certificate was due for renewal. Local police may also contact the firearm certificate holder if they consider it justified.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether, within the last three years, any firearm in Northern Ireland was taken into the possession of the police because the owner's firearm certificate had not been processed and returned before the expiry date, in cases where the certificate had been sent, or given to the police for renewal before the expiry date.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 23 January 1990]: The Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary has informed me that the information is not available in the form requested and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. If the hon. Gentleman has any specific case in mind, I will make inquiries.

Harland and Wolff

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement concerning the disposal of Harland and Wolff and that shipyard's present and future work load.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 25 January 1990]: The sale of the Harland and Wolff business to a new company set up by the management and employees backed by Fred Olsen was completed on 8 September 1989. As the company is no longer in public ownership, it would be inappropriate for me to comment on its work load.

Fair Employment Commission

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Fair Employment Commission was requested to register in accordance with the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1989 prior to the nominated date of 15 January 1990; and how many persons are presently employed by the Fair Employment Commission.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 26 January 1990]: The Fair Employment Commission is specified as a public authority in the Fair Employment (Specification of Public Authorities) Order (Northern Ireland) 1989 and is therefore automatically treated as registered under the Act. At 19 January 1990, the commission employed 34 staff.

EMPLOYMENT

Earnings

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his estimate of the increase in average earnings each year for manuals and non-manuals in the private sector less manufacturing, based on the weighted average difference between the figures given in his letter of 11 January and those for the public sector as a whole.

Mr. Nicholls: The calculation requested would not be meaningful, for the reasons stated in my letter to the hon. Member.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 20 December 1989, Official Report, column 235, whether he will publish in the Official Report the information supplied in his letter of 11 January, together with his best estimate of the numbers currently employed in (a) each of the specified categories, (b) manufacturing in the public sector and (c) private sector other than manufacturing.

Mr. Nicholls: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 18 January 1990 at columns 396—98. The remaining earnings information requested is provided in the table.

Estimates of the numbers in employment for the categories requested are not available except for non-manual male employees in manufacturing, of which there were 917,300 employees in September 1989, the latest available estimate.

Percentage increase in weekly and hourly earnings of full-time adult male employees (a)

	Manual
	Not in public sector
April of each year	Weekly earnings per cent.	Hourly earnings per cent.
1980(b)	18·6	20·4
1981(b)	8·1	11·2

1984	8·9	7·7
1985	8·1	7·7
1986	6·3	6·6
1987	7·0	6·7
1988	8·1	6·8
1989	9·5	8·8

Notes:

(a) average gross weekly and hourly earnings, not affected by absence, for those on adult rates; manufacturing as defined in the 1980 SIC (but see notes (b) and (c)).

(b) males aged 21 and over on all rates; 1968 SIC definition of manufacturing.

(c) males aged 21 and over on all rates; 1980 SIC definition of manufacturing.

Home Workers

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to provide equal employment rights for home workers.

Mr. Nicholls: Home workers who are employees already have the same employment rights as other employees.

Employment Training

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will identify the relevant costs per head for employment training trainees participating in the programme through training managers who operate nationally and locally in the voluntary sector.

Mr. Nicholls: Information on the cost per trainee in employment training for training managers which are voluntary organisations is not available.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, what are the statistics for Great Britain and each Training Agency region, for each month since October 1989 showing the results of new client adviser interviews with people who want to register as unemployed, broken down in the same categories as in his answer of 30 October 1989, Official Report, columns 1-2.

Mr. Eggar: As the information requested is contained in a number of tables, I will write to the hon. Member, and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Tourism

Mr. Lee: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the latest national estimate of the numbers of (a) white on brown tourism signs and (b) tourist information centres.

Mr. Nicholls: A figure for the total number of white on brown tourist signs is not readily available and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

There are currently 581 tourist information centres in England.

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many individuals are currently circulated with the following minutes of Health and Safety Commission meetings (i) commission minutes, (ii) management board minutes, (iii) chief inspectors management meeting minutes and (iv) executive minutes; if he has knowledge of any proposals to extend the current circulation; and if he will place copies of these in the Library.

Mr. Nicholls: The circulation of these minutes is an internal matter for the Health and Safety Commission and Executive.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many prosecutions have been undertaken by the Health and Safety Executive under section 6 of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974; and how many of these were successful.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 29 January 1990]: From 1975-1980, HSE's factory inspectorate laid 130 informations under section 6, of which 110 resulted in convictions, while five informations were withdrawn. In the period 1981 to the end of the financial year 1987-88 (the latest year for which figures are currently available), the factory and agricultural inspectorate laid 224 informations, of which 184 were successful and 17 withdrawn. Data on section 6 prosecutions taken by other inspectorates within HSE cannot be provided without disproportionate cost.

Building Safety Regulations

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he proposes to introduce new building safety regulations to accommodate contemporary requirements in the glass and ceramic industry.

Mr. Nicholls: [holding answer 29 January 1990]: I am informed by the chairman of the Health and Safety Commission that there are no current plans for new regulations concerning glazed structures under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974.

However, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment is proposing to issue a consultative paper including proposals for requirements relating to safety glazing under the Building Regulations 1985.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment who will represent his Department at the social affairs meetings of the Council of Ministers on 1 and 2 March, and 26 and 27 April; and what the agenda will be for both meetings.

Mr. Eggar: I expect to attend the informal meeting of the Labour and Social Affairs Council on 1 and 2 March. The agenda is expected to include discussions on long-term unemployment, training in eastern Europe and the social dialogue.

It is likely that a Social Security Minister will attend the informal Social Security Ministers Council on 26 and 27 April. This will depend on the agenda, which is not yet known.

Repetitive Strain Injury

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will give details of the research project into repetitive strain injury being planned by the Health and Safety Executive; when it started; when it is expected to finish; what are the objectives; and what will be the total cost;

(2) if he will place in the Library the two studies on repetitive strain injury which have just been completed for the Health and Safety Executive by the universities of Birmingham and Edinburgh.

Mr. Nicholls: The report of the study carried out by the Institute of Occupational Medicine in Edinburgh is found in the Library, Deposited Paper No. 5131. The Health and Safety Executive is still awaiting the report from the university of Birmingham. The executive is currently supporting a small study at the Institute of Occupational Medicine in Edinburgh, which follows on from the earlier project. The current study aims to produce an ergonomic guide or assessment aid which will enable non-experts to identify work activities which may lead to upper limb disorders. It started on 1 October 1989, finishes on 31 March 1990 and will cost £17,783. Negotiations are currently taking place between the Health and Safety Executive and the institute on possible support for research into upper limb disorders occurring in keyboard operators.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when the Health and Safety Executive plans to publish guidelines aimed at preventing repetitive strain injury; and what plans he has to publicise these guidelines.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Executive plans to publish guidance entitled "Work Related Upper Limb Disorders: A Guide to Prevention" in spring this year. The guidance will be publicised by means of a press notice. The executive's inspectors and employment medical advisers will bring it to the attention of employers in the course of their duties. The HSE is also producing clinically oriented guidance for occupational health professionals and a check list and risk assessment guide aimed at employers.

"Action for Jobs"

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much of the expenditure on printed material for "Action for Jobs" in 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88 was spent through the Central Office of Information.

Mr. Eggar: All the expenditure on producing and distributing printed material for "Action for Jobs" during the periods 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88 was spent through the Central Office of Information.

Training Agency

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what arrangements the Training Agency is making to monitor the quality of the corporate plans presented by prospective training executive councils; and when he expects to place copies of these plans in the Library.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 24 January 1990]: Corporate plans submitted by training and enterprise councils will be assessed by the national training task force under the chairmanship of Brian Wolfson. The task force's recommendation will be forwarded to me for approval.

The contract between my Department and the TEC will require that a full copy of the plan must be made available to the public at the registered office of the TEC. The contract will also provide that the TEC publishes a summary of the plan within three months of the start of the plan. I shall arrange for these summaries to be placed in the Library as they become available.

Coal Mines

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many major injuries were suffered by men in mines operated by British Coal in 1978-79 and each succeeding year;

(2) how many major injuries were suffered by men in private licensed mines in 1978-79 and each succeeding year;

(3) how many men were killed in mines operated by British Coal in 1978-79 and each succeeding year.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answers 29 January 1990]: It is not possible separately to identify fatal and major injuries in British Coal and licensed coal mines before 1985-86 without incurring disproportionate costs. The following tables give the information that is valuable to Her Majesty's inspectorate of mines.

	Major injuries at all coal mines	Fatal injuries at all coal mines
1978	494	63
1979	473	46
1980	512	42

	Major injuries at all coal mines	Fatal injuries at all coal mines
[1]1981	815	35
1982	865	38
[2]1984-85	378	22

[1] The introduction of NADO Regulations 1980 on 1 January 1981 widened the coverage of the serious injury category. Figures from 1981 are therefore not directly comparable with those for earlier years.
[2] Covering the 15 month period January 1984-March 1985.

	Major injuries at licensed coal mines	Major injuries at British coal mines	Fatal injuries at British coal mines
[1]1985-86	17	715	28
1987-88	27	729	9

[1] The introduction of the RIDDOR Regulations 1985 on 1 April 1986 further widened the major injury category.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether the mines inspectorate received copies of the annual reports of the National Coal Board and the British Coal Corporation in each year since 1978-79.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 29 January 1990]: The Health and Safety Executive's mines inspectorate has received copies of these annual reports.

DEFENCE

Firearms Range, Cardiff

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library a copy of his Department's report into the condition and maintenance of the national sports centre, Cardiff indoor firearms range completed between July and December 1989 following the incident which led to the temporary closure of the range last summer.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The report on the condition of the indoor range at the national sports centre, Cardiff was provided by the Army in its capacity as safety advisor to the Sports Council of Wales. Decisions about the publication of the report and the future of the range are matters for the Sports Council of Wales.

Low Flying

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will ensure that, henceforth, information will be gathered to establish the amount of low-flying activity over Northumberland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so.

Captain Fred Holroyd

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date the Royal Military Police interviewed Captain Fred Holroyd, retired, concerning the Kincora boys' home as referred to in his reply to the Adjournment debate on 29 November 1989, Official Report, column 819.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 15 January 1990]: Captain Holroyd was initially interviewed by the Royal Military Police about Kincora on 22 May 1982.

Mr. Colin Wallace

Mr. Michael Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will make a statement about the allegations of Mr. Colin Wallace concerning the activities of the Army and of the security service in Northern Ireland during the 1970s and about Mr. Wallace's appeal against his dismissal from the Civil Service for disclosing a classified document to an unauthorised person on 4 February 1975.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In the course of recent work in dealing with parliamentary inquiries about the case of Mr. Colin Wallace, records have been found which have brought to light new information relating to matters which arose under earlier Administrations. Ministers have not, of course, been told what advice was given to former Labour Ministers, nor what views they expressed, with the exception of decisions by the then Attorney-General. I think it right to report this new information to the House. My noble Friends Lord Carrington and Lord Whitelaw, the noble Lord, Lord Mason, and the right hon. Member for Morley and Leeds South (Mr. Rees) have been consulted about the terms of this statement.

As the House knows, Mr. Wallace accepted on 15 March 1968 an appointment as an assistant information officer at the Army's Northern Ireland command headquarters (HQNI). He became an established information officer from 14 December 1971 and a senior information officer with effect from 27 September 1974, having first held this latter post on temporary promotion.

Mr. Wallace left HQNI for the Army's north-west district headquarters on 4 February 1975, having handed over his duties at HQNI on 31 January 1975. On 4 February 1975 Mr. Wallace delivered a restricted document at the home of a journalist, without any authority to do so. On 25 June 1975, Mr. Wallace was informed that he would be dismissed from the Civil Service for this action.

He appealed to the Civil Service Appeal Board, which heard his case on 17 October 1975. The CSAB concluded that there was justification for the Department's decision that Mr. Wallace's services could not be retained: but that, having regard to his previous good record of service, if Mr. Wallace wished to offer his resignation, the Department should accept this as an alternative to dismissal. Mr. Wallace resigned with effect from 31 December 1975.

Mr. Wallace claimed in his appeal that his action in passing the document to the journalist was done with the intention of safeguarding the interests of the Department, and that it was in accordance with his terms of reference and the nature of his duties. He said that those duties included unattributable briefing of journalists, which sometimes included the revelation of privileged and sensitive information; and that he often had to exercise his judgment as to how much information he could reveal.

In its statement to the CSAB, the Ministry of Defence accepted that the duties of the post, as described in the job specification set out in the relevant trawl notice, came in practice to include some kinds of unattributable briefing. Mr. Wallace claimed that the job specification given in the trawl notice dealt only with his straightforward public relations duties and that there was also a further job specification classified secret.

MOD did not contest the evidence on Mr. Wallace's behalf, but it did not acknowledge the existence of a supplementary job specification; nor did it make a copy available, as Mr. Wallace had requested. More recently, the existence of any supplementary job specification has been denied; and indeed no evidence has been found in the documentation still available that Mr. Wallace was given any formal supplementary directive or job specification.

However, the papers which have now come to light indicate that, when the case was made to establish Mr. Wallace's post, it was proposed that its duties should include responsibilities for providing unattributable covert briefings to the press; and it was stated that the incumbent would be required to make on-the-spot decisions on matters of national security during such interviews.

It seems that, in the event, the arguments for including these responsibilities in Mr. Wallace's job description were made orally rather than in writing to those who approved the establishment of the SIO post. But presumably Mr. Wallace was told what duties he was expected to carry out; and indeed it would appear that he had already been undertaking unattributable briefing activities of this kind, which may have included disinformation. It has not since the mid 1970s been the policy to disseminate disinformation in Northern Ireland in ways designed to denigrate individuals and/or organisations or for propaganda purposes. That remains the case.

The fact remains that the disciplinary offence with which Mr. Wallace was charged was committed after he had relinquished his post at HQNI; that he sought no authority for the disclosure from his successors or from his former superiors; that he did not even report what he had done; and that if he had sought permission for his proposed action he would certainly not have received it. Whilst he attempted to argue that he had not completed the handover of his duties at HQNI at the time that he made the disclosure, it seems clear that the CSAB did not accept that argument.

Nevertheless, in the light of this re-examination of the papers it would be right to consider again the handling of Mr. Wallace's appeal to the CSAB.

Accordingly, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has invited Mr. David Calcutt QC, the Master of Magdalene College Cambridge, to make an investigation of the papers on these matters. Mr. Calcutt has agreed to do so. His terms of reference will be as follows:

"To consider, and to advise the Secretary of State for Defence, whether an injustice was done to Mr. Colin Wallace as a result of the manner in which his case was presented to the Civil Service Appeal Board when on 17 October 1975 it considered the decision of the Ministry of Defence to terminate his employment on disciplinary grounds; and, if so, to recommend whether compensation should be paid to him."

Procedures will be discussed with Mr. Calcutt to ensure that he sees all relevant papers in circumstances that protect their confidentiality. Mr. Wallace will, of course, be able to make representations to him. My Department is writing to Mr. Wallace to advise him how he should do so. Mr. Calcutt's conclusions and recommendations will be made public; but classified matters and material will not, of course, be published.

For the avoidance of doubt, I should make it clear that the re-examination of departmental papers has revealed no evidence at all that the decision to terminate Mr. Wallace's employment was taken for reasons other than his serious lack of judgment in disclosing classified information to the media without having proper authority to do so.

I should also like to take this opportunity to correct a number of errors in previous statements which have now come to notice as a result of the re-examination of departmental papers.

Some of Mr. Wallace's allegations relate to a project with the title "Clockwork Orange". Two documents have been found dating from 1975 which contain brief references to a proposed project with that title: the second of these documents was clearly based on the first. It appears that this title was given to a project contemplating the dissemination of an account of the organisation and activities of PIRA. The documents show that Mr. Wallace was involved in the project. The documents also state that the project was not cleared.

No evidence has been found that, before work on the "Clockwork Orange" project was stopped, it had been extended to cover Protestant organisations and individuals or to include Northern Irish and British politicians, as Mr. Wallace has alleged. As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister stated on 6 May 1987 at column 723-732, allegations that the Security Service was engaged, during the mid and late 1970s, in a plot to destabilise Lord Wilson's Government were thoroughly investigated by the then director general, who gave her his personal assurance that these stories were false.

I should also make it clear that the new information which has come to light does not substantiate Mr. Wallace's allegations of a cover-up relating to the Kincora boys' hostel in Belfast. If, nevertheless, Mr. Wallace has allegations that he wishes to press about criminal activity or other wrongdoing in Northern Ireland, then the best way for him to deal with this is to give any information in his possession to the RUC in the first instance: if this information is classified, he should first consult the Director of Army Security.

I am writing to my hon. Friend the Member for Arundel (Mr. Marshall) and to the hon. Members for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell) and for Brent, East (Mr. Livingstone) about some further points of detail which require correction or classification. I will place copies of my letters in the Library of the House.

I greatly regret that the fact that relevant records were not brought to Ministers' attention has in recent years caused inaccurate statements to be made to the House and in both ministerial and official correspondence. I have thought it right to correct these inaccuracies forthwith; and to settle once and for all the allegations of injustice to Mr. Wallace over his appeal to the CSAB by arranging the investigation by Mr. Calcutt.

ENERGY

Scottish Electricity

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what progress has been made in the work to expand the capacity of the interconnector allowing the purchase by English distribution companies of electricity generated in Scotland.

Mr. Baldry: I understand that the SSEB and the National Grid Company are preparing the necessary environmental assessments and applications for consent which will be required if the interconnection capacity is to be increased. The decision to increase capacity of the interconnector will depend on successful conclusion of contracts for increased energy exchanges over the existing link.

Offshore Health and Safety

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what further proposals he has to improve the health and safety of workers on offshore oil and gas installations.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Aberdeen, South (Mr. Doran) on Monday 13 November 1989 at columns 99-100.

Coal Imports

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many tonnes of coal were imported into Britain 10 years, five years ago and for the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Baldry: Coal imports into the United Kingdom in these years, and for the most recent period in 1989 for which information is available, have been as follows:

Calendar year	Million tonnes
1985	12·7

British Coal

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he last met the chairman of British Coal; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Baldry: I meet the chairman of British Coal regularly to discuss all aspects of the coal industry.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what further proposals he has for promoting greater energy efficiency in electricity generation.

Mr. Baldry: Competition between generating companies will provide them with a major incentive to make the most efficient use of fuel in their power stations.

Severn Barrage

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the latest estimate of the cost of building the Severn barrage.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Severn tidal power group, in its report on the latest phase of studies, estimates the cost of building the Severn barrage at £8·5 billion.

The report was published last year in the Energy Paper series and copies placed in the Library of the House.

Independent Generators

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his assessment of the prospects for the establishment of independent generators after the privatisation of the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Baldry: The encouragement of competition in generation has always been one of the fundamental aims of our privatisation proposals. My Department is aware of around 20 major private generation projects in prospect, totalling some 7GW of capacity. The first of the new independent generating companies to take advantage of the opportunities offered as a result of our proposals is Lakeland Power, which last October signed a contract with the North Western electricity board.

Coal Burn

Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what proposals he has for promoting the burning of coal in more energy-efficient ways.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Government have supported British Coal's research on new technologies such as pressurised fluid bed combustion and integrated coal gasification combined cycle plant. Further support has been given for British Coal's topping cycle concept.

My Department also encourages the more energy efficient use of coal through its promotion of combined heat and power technology and through its participation in the domestic solid fuel appliance approval scheme.

Heating Bills

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what further proposals he has to assist low-income households with their heating bills.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Social Security Bill, which received its second reading on 22 January, provides powers for my right hon. Friend to make grants towards the cost of measures to improve energy efficiency in low- income households. My Department will be issuing a consultation document on the proposed grant scheme shortly.

French Nuclear Reactors

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will seek to obtain from the Government of France full details of recent safety assessments of nuclear reactors within 100 miles of the British coast; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Dr. Thomas) on 25 January at column 814.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a further statement on progress in the development of economic renewable energy resources.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Government continue to support a major research and development programme aimed at developing commercially viable and environmentally acceptable renewable energy technologies to contribute to future energy supply.

Nuclear Energy

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if his Department will be represented at the conference on the nuclear fuel cycle 1990 to be held in Nashville, United States of America between 25 and 28 March.

Mr. Baldry: There are at present no plans for my Department to be represented at this conference.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if his Department will be represented at the seminar on decommissioning of nuclear plants to be held in London on 19 and 20 March.

Mr. Baldry: No.

Falkland Islands

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy, Official Report, 18 December, column 46, he will make it his policy to request (a) United Kingdom NIREX Ltd. and (b) the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority to conduct feasibility studies to assess the suitability of the Falkland Islands geology for nuclear waste disposal.

Mr. Baldry: No.

Gas Exploration (South Yorkshire)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list by location, any sites in south Yorkshire due for exploratory drilling for gas.

Mr. Peter Morrison: There are 12 current petroleum licences (nine exploration and three production) in south Yorkshire. All proposals to drill are subject to specific approval. No such proposals have been received from current licensees although it is possible that they will wish to drill before licences expire.

Nuclear Powers (Thesis)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what use was made by his departmental library of the thesis, "Nuclear Powers—An Assessment of Nuclear Decision Making, 1932-1979, with Special Reference to the Anglo-American Atomic Relationship", to which he made reference in his reply of 13 February 1989, Official Report, column 41.

Mr. Wakeham: The librarian of my Department borrowed a copy of the thesis to assess whether a copy should be purchased should sufficient demand arise. No request has been received for this thesis to date.

Electricity Supply Industry

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what advice his Department has given to the electricity supply industry as to the method of flue gas desulphurisation;

(2) what consideration his Department has given to the comparative environmental costs of (a) the regenerative method and (b) the limestone-gypsum method of flue gas desulphurisation.

Mr. Baldry: The choice of FGD process is a matter for the industry.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received as to the method of flue gas desulphurisation that will be fitted to power stations.

Mr. Baldry: A few representations were received some time ago favouring the regenerative FGD process, but none has been received recently. The choice of FGD process is a matter for the industry.

Creches

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list by location, where creche facilities are provided for working mothers employed in his Department; and if they have to make any payment for this service.

Mr. Wakeham: My Department does not provide creche facilities for working mothers.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy who will represent his Department at the EC Council of Energy Ministers meeting on 21 May; and what the agenda will be.

Mr. Wakeham: The United Kingdom representative at the Energy Council will be decided on nearer the time. The agenda for the Council will not be published until shortly before the Council; but we expect discussion to cover the Commission's four internal energy market proposals and other issues, including possibly energy and the environment.

Nuclear Power

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his Department will be represented at the seminar on nuclear power, Planning for Emergencies, to be held in Manchester on 6 March.

Mr. Baldry: I have been asked to reply. It is not proposed that representatives from either my Department of the Home Office will attend this seminar.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Ambulance Dispute

Mr. Denis Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inquests have been held during the course of the ambulance dispute into deaths which may have been accelerated by reason of delay in the response of the ambulance service or by the attendance of ambulances not carrying adequate resuscitation or other necessary equipment.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No information is collected centrally from which any such cases could be identified.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Denis Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his Department will take steps to remind doctors and members of the public of their lawful duty to report cases to the appropriate coroner for his investigation when they have reason to believe that the death of any person has been aggravated or accelerated by reason of delayed response from the ambulance service or the attendance of an ambulance not carrying adequate equipment for the resuscitation or emergency treatment of patients.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There is an obligation at common law to report to the coroner any violent or unnatural death or sudden death, the cause of which is unknown. There is at present no difference between the legal duty of doctors and that of other members of the public. Since we have no evidence that the obligation is being neglected, we see no need for special steps to be taken to remind members of the public about it.

Kurds

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of Kurdish asylum seekers from Turkey who have (a) arrived in the United Kingdom since January 1989, been (b) granted political asylum, (c) returned to Turkey, (d) given exceptional leave to remain and (e) held in detention; and if he will make a statement on his policy towards Kurdish asylum seekers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Immigration statistics do not record ethnic origins of asylum seekers. Since January 1989, some 3,900 Turkish nationals have applied for asylum on arrival: 164 have been granted asylum; 44 have been removed to Turkey; 249 have left the United Kingdom of their own accord before their examination was completed; 611 have been given exceptional leave to enter. On 29 January, there were three Turkish asylum seekers in detention.

The Government are committed to their obligations under the 1951 United Nations convention on refugees. All asylum applications are considered on their individual merits and where the applicant is found to have a well-founded fear of persecution for reasons of race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group or political opinion, he or she will be granted refugee status.

Prevention of Terrorism Act

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state the number of people (a) stopped and questioned under the Prevention of Terrorism Act for each month since January 1989, (b) the number held under an order issued by him, (c) the number who subsequently received exclusion orders and (d) the number charged with other offences.

Mr. Waddington: Information on the operation of the prevention of terrorism legislation is compiled quarterly and published in Home Office statistical bulletins. Issue 36/89 contains information up to the third quarter of 1989. The next bulletin, covering the whole of 1989, will be published shortly. Home Office statistical bulletins are held in the Library.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions since their release from prison in October 1989, Paul Hill and Gerard Conlon have been questioned under the Prevention of Terrorism Act; and for what length of time they were held.

Mr. Waddington: No central record is kept of examinations under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989 which last one hour or less. Neither Mr. Hill nor Mr. Conlon has been examined for more than one hour or detained under the 1989 Act.

Guildford Four

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to receive the report from Sir John May into the conviction of the Guildford Four.

Mr. John Patten: Sir John May has not yet indicated when he expects to be able to produce his report.

Obscene Publications

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of prosecutions which have taken place under the Obscene Publications Act 1959 for each of the past five years and how many resulted in convictions.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is given in the table. Data for 1989 will not be available until autumn 1990.

Magistrates Courts Scrutiny

Mr. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has yet reached any conclusions on the recommendations in the magistrates courts scrutiny relating to services provided by the police for these courts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: The scrutiny report recommended that the police should not be regarded as responsible for maintaining order or general security duties in magistrates courts on a routine basis. In the light of the consultations which have taken place with interested bodies on this matter, I accept this conclusion. I am issuing guidelines intended to assist local discussion between the police and the magistrates courts about the appropriate level of police presence in individual cases.

The guidelines (a copy of which is being placed in the Library) make it clear that, while the police have a responsibility, as part of their general duties, to protect magistrates and courts staff where the police consider that there are reasonable grounds for believing that they may be at risk, the courts should reduce these risks so far as possible and should consider the provision of appropriate physical security measures to that end. I am considering the case for clarifying the legal powers available to magistrates courts and their staff to ensure the uninterrupted administration of justice.

The scrutiny report also recommended that steps should be taken to improve the management of services now routinely provided by the police for the courts, including the service of summonses, the execution of warrants and the custody of prisoners at court. As to the first two services, I am asking magistrates courts committees, in consultation with their paying authorities and the relevant police authorities, to undertake an assessment of the practical consequences of transferring responsibility for routine work from the police to the courts service. We have already made provision in public expenditure for the appointment of a substantial additional number of court fine enforcement staff and have asked magistrates courts to consider the greater use of bailiffs to enforce fines.

In the light of legal advice about charges to magistrates courts committees for the execution of warrants by the police, I propose, with effect from 1 April, to disregard any such charges for the purpose of paying specific grant to local authorities. I shall be consulting the relevant local authority associations about the effect of this decision. I also propose to disregard any such charges for the service of summonses by the Metropolitan police with effect from the same date and with effect from 1 April 1991 in the case of other police forces in England and Wales, subject to consultation with the local authority associations.

I am still considering the question of responsibility for the gaolering services.

Mr. Colin Wallace

Mr. Michael Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has completed his consideration of the book entitled "Who Framed Colin Wallace" by Paul Foot; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I have carefully examined the arguments put forward by Mr. Foot in his book and am satisfied that there is no new evidence or other consideration of substance which casts doubt on the safety of Mr. Colin Wallace's conviction for manslaughter. Before coming to a final decision on this case, I examined carefully the matters referred to in a statement today by my hon. Friend the Member for Epsom and Ewell (Mr. Hamilton), and I am satisfied that they are unconnected with the case and in no way cast doubt upon the safety of the conviction. I have placed in the Libraries of both Houses a memorandum which sets out in greater detail the reasons why I have reached this conclusion.

Creches

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list by location where creche facilities are provided for working mothers employed in his Department; and if they have to make any payment for this service.

Mr. Waddington: In addition to its support for Cabinet Office initiatives towards the provision of child care in the Civil Service and to the secondment of an officer to the Midland bank nursery project, the Home Office is planning to provide, for payment, creche facilities for its employees in Croydon and Bootle shortly, and is considering the possibility of making similar provision in London.

Inquests

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average lapse of time between the occurrence of a sudden death and the date of the inquest.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I regret that this information is not collected centrally. I understand that coroners endeavour to hold inquests as soon as practicable following the death, but sometimes delays are experienced—for example, because of the need to wait for witnesses or other evidence.

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the procedure for determining the date of an inquest.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: This is a matter for the coroner to decide.

Greyhound Race Courses

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many greyhound race courses are owned by companies involved in the business of off-course bookmaking; and which of these greyhound race courses supply betting services to the off-course betting shops in the same ownership.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Companies have no obligation to inform the Home Office of their ownership of greyhound tracks. Certain information of the character of that requested is, however, recorded in "Grand Metropolitan plc and William Hill Organisation Ltd. A report on the merger situation" (Cm. 776), by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission which was published in August last year and a copy of which is in the Library.

That information relates to the supply of daytime greyhound racing meetings by greyhound track promoters under annual contract to Bookmaker Afternoon Greyhound Services Ltd. (BAGS). I understand that, following the subsequent acquisition of William Hill by Brent Walker plc of the 10 greyhound tracks which at present have contracts with BAGS, five are owned and operated by companies which own off-course bookmaking companies. Coverage of meetings at all 10 tracks is available, via Satellite Information Services, to licensed betting offices in general.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Retirement Pensions

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by what percentage (a) the basic retirement pension and (b) prices increased between April 1979 and 1990.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The latest available information shows that, between April 1979 and April 1989, the basic retirement pension rose by 123·6 per cent., whilst prices rose by 110·5 per cent. This represents an increase of 6·2 per cent. in the real value of the retirement pension over the period.

Nursing and Residential Homes

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of evidence submitted to his Department on the cost of providing care in voluntary and private nursing homes and the level of income support payable to residents in residential and nursing homes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The amount of income support payable to people in residential care and nursing homes is subject to national limits and is reviewed every year. We take account of a variety of evidence, including detailed and differing representations from interested organisations and individuals. The evidence is considered along with our own information.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the costs of keeping an aged person in (a) a nursing home and (b) in residential care for a year.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that the figures are not available in the form requested. The information available for May 1989 shows that the estimated total number of people in nursing homes in receipt of income support was 56,000 at an annual cost of £446 million. This gives an estimated average annual expenditure figure on income support of £8,000 per claimant. The estimated total number of people in residential care homes in receipt of income support was 119,000 at an annual cost of £658 million. This gives an estimated average annual expenditure figure on income support of £5,500 per claimant.

These figures do not include payment of other benefits such as retirement pension and attendance allowance which are paid depending on the individual's circumstances in addition to income support.

Repetitive Strain Injury

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he intends to extend the categories of repetitive strain injuries which are recognised by his Department as prescribed workplace injuries.

Mr. Scott: Once both of the studies on repetitive strain injury commissioned by the Health and Safety Executive from the universities of Edinburgh and of Birmingham are available, the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council will consider whether the research evidence might justify further detailed consideration of occupational repetitive strain injuries.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what advice he has received on the types of industrial tasks which are most likely to result in workers suffering from repetitive strain injury; and in which industries there are likely to be significant numbers of sufferers.

Mr. Scott: A position paper adopted by the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council in September 1986 identified repetitive strain injury as being complained of by word processor operators, assembly line workers and workers in the print, textile and furniture industries.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what information he has on the incidence of repetitive strain injury in the pottery industry;

(2) what proportion of the known sufferers from repetitive strain injury are women.

Mr. Scott: I regret that this information is not available.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information he has on the trend of repetitive strain injury as measured by the number of claims for compensation.

Mr. Scott: Information on the number of prescribed diseases A4 and A8 diagnosed in connection with claims for industrial injuries benefits in 1985, 1986 and 1987 is provided on page 22 of the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council periodic report—January 1990 (copies are available in the Library). For reasons of sample size, this information is unlikely to provide a reliable indication of trends.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which forms of repetitive strain injury are recognised by his Department as prescribed workplace injuries.

Mr. Scott: Two repetitive strain injuries are listed in the schedule of prescribed industrial diseases:

Prescribed Disease A4: Cramp of the hand or forearm due to repetitive movements.

Prescribed Disease A8: Traumatic inflammation of the tendons of the hand or forearm or of the associated tendon sheaths. Benefit can also be paid for carpal syndrome if it occurs as a result of prescribed disease A8.

Invalidity Pension

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people will be affected by the abolition of earnings-related additions to invalidity pension;

(2) how much money will be saved in the first year by the abolition of earnings-related additions to invalidity pension.

Mr. Scott: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher) on 19 January at columns 484-85.

Industrial Benefit

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people will be affected by the abolition of reduced earnings allowances in the industrial benefit scheme;

(2) how much money will be saved in the first year by the abolition of reduced earnings allowances in the industrial benefit scheme.

Mr. Scott: An estimated 14,400 new claimants a year will be affected by the abolition of reduced earnings allowance, which will result in a reduction in expenditure of about £1 million in 1990-91.

Board-and-lodging Allowance

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what regulations govern the administration and use of the pocket money element in the board-and-lodging allowance;

(2) what steps his Department has taken to ensure the pocket money allowance in the board-and-lodging allowance is not used to top up fees paid to private residential establishments.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Applicable amounts payable for persons in independent residential care and nursing homes are prescribed by the Income Support (General) Regulations 1987, as amended. They include an amount in respect of personal expenses which is at present £10·05 each week. The regulations do not prescribe how that allowance is to be used, as this is a matter for the claimant.

Departmental Cash Limits

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether there have been any changes to the cash limit or running costs limit of his Department for 1989-90.

Mr. Scott: The cash limit for class XV, vote 7 will be reduced by £426,000 from £1,595,118,000 to £1,594,692,000, and the running costs limit for the Department by £170,000 from £1,736,531,000 to £1,736,361,000. These reductions reflect the following changes.

The transfer of £25,000 from the Cabinet Office: Office of the Minister for the Civil Service (class XX, vote 1) is in respect of the challenge funding scheme for senior management development training, as announced by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State, Privy Council Office. This increase in running costs is offset by the transfer of £195,000 to the Department of Health and Social Security (Northern Ireland) for the running costs of the Belfast social security centre. There will be a corresponding increase on Department of Health and Social Security (Northern Ireland) vote 3, administration and miscellaneous services.

An increase of £244,000 in the agency payment to Department of Employment to meet an increase in the costs of administering the unemployment benefit service. A corresponding amount will be appropriated in aid of class VII, vote 2. This increase in current expenditure will be offset by the transfer of £500,000 to the Department of Health and Social Security (Northern Ireland), in respect of capital improvements to the store for paid orders at Lisahally. There will be a corresponding increase on Department of Health and Social Security (Northern Ireland) vote 3, administration and miscellaneous services.

Consultants

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many studies or reports have been commissioned from commercial consultants since June 1987; what has been the cost; what proportion of the studies or reports has been put out to tender; what is the value of those tendered; what proportion of the studies or reports has been commissioned from Arthur Andersen; and what is the value of those commissioned from Arthur Andersen.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 29 January 1990]: The number of studies or reports commissioned from commercial consultants by the Department since June 1987 is 90, at a total cost of £3,529,844. The proportion of the studies put out to tender was 33 per cent. and their value was £1,066,482. The proportion of the studies or reports commissioned from Arthur Andersen was 8·9 per cent., and their value was £976,316.

Housing Benefit

Mr Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which local authorities have received and processed the most applications for transitional payments as a percentage of housing benefit payments they make.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 14 December 1989]: Applications for housing benefit transitional payments were received and processed at the transitional payments unit in Glasgow. The 20 local authority areas from which the largest number of applications were received expressed as a percentage of estimated housing benefit caseload is as follows:

	Per cent.
Monklands	41
Hamilton	35
East Kilbride	33
Motherwell	32
Glasgow	32
Waltham Forest	31
Inverclyde	30
South Tyneside	30

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Queen's Consent

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council which Minister is responsible for reviewing the operation of the system of signifying or withholding Queen's Consent in relation to particular Bills and of advice relating to the use of the Royal Prerogative.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Requests to Her Majesty for the grant of her consent to either House debating a Public Bill affecting her interest or prerogative are put forward by the Minister responsible for the subject to which the Bill relates. Amendment of the present arrangements would require a decision of Parliament. There is, of course, at present no question of a review of the need for consent. If the question arose, the matter of which Minister would be responsible for promoting such a proposal would be one for the Government of the day to decide.

Disabled People (Parking)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Lord President of the Council whether permission was given by the Services Committee to British Telecom engineers on 15 January, for their equipment to be placed in the parking area reserved for disabled drivers at Norman Shaw North building; and if he will take steps to ensure that there is no recurrence of this in the future.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: British Telecom's London network organisation should not have placed this equipment in the parking area reserved for disabled drivers in the area of the Norman Shaw buildings earlier this month. Steps have been taken to ensure that the correct procedures are adhered to in future.

Copying Machines

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Lord President of the Council why all but one of the copying machines in Norman Shaw North are switched off at night while the House is sitting and hon. Members are still working; and if he will seek to rectify this position.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The copying machine on the ground floor of Norman Shaw North is left on until the rising of the House, on sitting Mondays to Thursdays. All the remainder are switched off at 9 pm, in accordance with the guidance for the use of these machines issued by the Services Committee which takes account of fire regulations and supervision requirements. If the hon. Member wishes to suggest changes to the hours of operation of copying machines, he should in the first instance raise the matter with the Accommodation and Administration Sub-Committee.

PRIME MINISTER

Middle East

Q47. Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Prime Minister what steps she has taken to help free British hostages in the middle east; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The plight of the British hostages in Lebanon is high among our concerns. We have raised the matter with a wide range of Governments and organisations who might have influence on the hostage holders. Her Majesty's ambassador in Beirut, in a difficult and dangerous environment, follows up every lead. We will continue to make every possible effort on behalf of the hostages.

Jobs

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the report commissioned by the EEC on the impact of the 1992 proposals on jobs in the United Kingdom; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I am always interested in any developments which affect jobs in the United Kingdom and will not hesitate to discuss them at the European Council, if this is appropriate.

The single European market is a major opportunity for the United Kingdom. The impact on employment in the United Kingdom depends crucially on the responses of United Kingdom firms to this opportunity.

Engagements

Mr. Cox: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 30 January.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 30 January.

Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 30 January.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 30 January.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Sir Maurice Oldfield

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what authorisations have been sought from Her Majesty's Government by potential authors of a biography of the late Sir Maurice Oldfield; and what Her Majesty's Government's response has been.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 29 January 1990]: No such authorisation has been sought.

HEALTH

Product Licences

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money has been paid to the Medicines Control Agency in fees for product licences in 1987, 1988 and 1989; and how many applications for which fees have been paid remain outstanding.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Product licence application fees collected for fees years were

1986-87	354,143
1987-88	252,495
1988-89	738,425

The total number of outstanding product licence applications as at 31 December 1989 was as follows:

	Number
Product Licences	1,867
Product Licences (Parallel Imports)	991

No information is available on the numbers of applications outstanding for which fees have been paid but the application fee becomes due at the time the application is made.

Abortions

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if Bourn hall, Bourn, Cambridge has a licence to perform abortions under the Abortion Act 1967.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent guidance he has issued on the application of the Abortion Act 1967 in those circumstances in which medical personnel fit intra-uterine devices with the intention of causing pregnancies to abort during their early hours; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The handbook on contraceptive practice, a copy of which is available in the Library, last published in 1984 and shortly to be reissued, describes the mode of action of post-coital contraceptives, including intra-uterine devices. The Department's policy on these matters is based on advice given to the Department about the legal position under the Abortion Act 1967; the interpretation of the law in any particular case is, of course, a matter for the courts.

Assessment Procedures

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will consult with voluntary organisations in drawing up his code of guidance to local authorities on the proposed assessment procedures outlined in "Caring for People";

(2) if, in his code of guidance to local authorities on the proposed assessment procedures outlined in "Caring for People" he will direct local authorities to consult local voluntary organisations and representatives of disabled people and carers when determining their own assessment procedures.

(3) if, in his code of guidance to local authorities on the proposed assessment procedures outlined in "Caring for People" he will advise that carers should have a right to ask for an assessment of their needs;

(4) whether he will involve voluntary organisations experienced in the field in his discussions on the training needs of those involved in the proposed assessment procedures outlined in "Caring for People".

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department has in hand a programme to develop guidance for local authorities. Voluntary and professional organisations will be consulted during the preparation of this guidance. In the course of preparing the guidance we shall be considering what advice to give authorities on local consultation and the training needs of those carrying out assessments. Under our community care proposals, carers will be able to ask that their own care needs should be considered as well as those of the person they are caring for.

Insurance

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will issue advice to local authorities on the insurance implications for voluntary organisations and bodies providing services involving lifting and bathing in poorly equipped homes.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Problems involving insurance in such situations have not been brought to our attention. Consequently, we have no plans at present to issue guidance to local authorities on this subject.

Private Hospitals

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the private hospitals in England and Wales and the amount of financial assistance they receive from public funds.

Mr. Freeman: Health authorities have power to award grants or loans to voluntary and charitable organisations, but the extent to which they do so is for local decision and information is not collected centrally. Information for Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Cancer Screening

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by regional health authority what health education is offered to schools explaining the call/recall system of cervical cytology screening.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information by regional health authority is not held centrally. I understand that a health education task group under the auspices of the National Curriculum Council is considering the content of health education in schools.

AIDS

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on guidance issued by the United States Food and Drugs Administration to doctors on the recommended dosage of the anti-AIDS drug Retrovir (AZT); and whether he has any plans to issue guidance to doctors in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We are aware of reports indicating that the United States Food and Drug Administration has recently announced labelling changes for Retrovir involving a lowering of the recommended daily dose approved for administration in that country. Any changes to the licensed indication of drugs marketed in the United Kingdom must be approved by the licensing authority on grounds of safety, quality and efficacy seeking, where necessary, the advice of the Committee on Safety of Medicines. Doctors already have extensive information on the currently licensed product from a wide variety of sources, and we have no plans at present to issue further guidance.

Carers

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he is putting forward in respect of the control and monitoring by his Department of private sector providers of care.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Local authorities will provide an arms length inspection and monitoring unit for a variety of provision, whether in the public or private sector. Social service departments will also through their contracts with providers, specify monitoring mechanisms. The Department will examine community care plans and monitor progress towards meeting service objectives. Health authorities will continue to have responsibility for registration and inspection of private nursing home care.

Creches

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by location, where creche facilities are provided for working mothers employed in his Department; and if they have to make any payment for this service.

Mr. Freeman: No nursery facilities are at present provided for parents employed in the Department. We are undertaking a feasibility study into the provision of such facilities, and we are contributing to a study into interdepartmental provision being co-ordinated by the office of the Minister for the Civil Service. In addition we run holiday play schemes financed by parental and departmental contributions for children aged between five and 11 years.

NHS Travel Cost Scheme

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the cost of the National Health Service travel cost scheme in each of the last three years; and what steps he will take to increase public knowledge and take-up.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Summarised accounts of health authorities in England show the following expenditure, for the last three years, in respect of fares paid to patients travelling to and from hospital for NHS treatment:

Year	£ million
1986-87	3·037
1988-89	3·265

These figures do not indicate NHS administration costs. We are currently considering measures to increase public awareness of the hospital travel costs scheme.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who will represent his Department at the EC's Council of Health Ministers meeting on 19 April; and what the agenda will be.

Mr. Freeman: No firm date has yet been fixed for the EC Council of Health Ministers meeting. It is likely that the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health, Lady Hooper, who has responsibility for international health matters, will attend.

The agenda for the meeting will be decided by the Irish presidency in cooperation with the European Commission. Details of the items to be raised have not yet been notified to us.

Prescriptions

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department intends to ask family practitioner committees to review the prescribing performances of those doctors who consistently under-prescribe medicines for their patients, compared to the average, in the same way as doctors who are deemed to be over-prescribing will be subject to peer review.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: It is our intention that family practitioner committees, which will have medically qualified advisers on prescribing, should consider the possibility of under-prescribing which would be injurious to patients and raise any such cases with the practice concerned.

Drugs

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department is proposing to publish a further working paper on the implementation of indicative drug budgets.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We propose to issue a further working paper on the implementation of indicative drug budgets within the next few weeks.

Slimming Aids

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has concerning the link between slimming aids and anorexia and bulimia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The Department knows of no research which directly links slimming aids to anorexia or bulimia.

Haemophiliacs

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health why the haemophiliac sufferers contaminated with the HIV virus have not yet received the capital sum promised them via the Macfarlane Trust; and when he expects the payments to be made.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [pursuant to her reply, 26 January 1990, c. 921]: The arrangements for paying the ex-gratia sums have now been completed. In co-operation with the trustees of the Macfarlane Trust, a new discretionary trust called the Macfarlane (Special Payments) Trust has been set up to administer the payments. It is expected that payments will begin tomorrow.

Dennis and Cole Families

Mr. Terry Fields: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will institute an inquiry into the arbitrary removal of the Dennis family from a doctor's list in the Old Swan health centre and the Cole family from a doctor's list in the Edge Hill health centre, both in Broadgreen, Liverpool; if he will ascertain the reasons for these removals; what redress is available to the families; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 29 January 1990]: The administration of the contract of service of general medical practitioners is a matter for the local family practitioner committee, in this case the Liverpool FPC, Refuge Assurance house, Lord street, Liverpool L2 1UT. It is, however, permissible for a practitioner to remove patients from his or her list and reasons do not have to be given. Similarly, patients may leave the list of a practitioner without giving reasons.

As my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State made clear on 23 January at columns 728-29, we should view with concern any evidence that doctors were acting unreasonably or under a mistaken interpretation of the terms of the new contract.

If any family are unable to find a doctor of their choice, they should ask the FPC (which has a duty so to do) to allocate them to a doctor's list.

TRANSPORT

Air Accidents

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the criteria used by the chief inspector of air accidents in determining whether or not an investigation into an incident or accident shall be carried out.

Mr. McLoughlin: The air accidents investigation branch's main task is to investigate reportable accidents, which are those involving serious injury or significant aircraft damage. Each reportable accident is inquired into by means of a formal investigation, a field investigation, or a form to the pilot or operator with follow up inquiries as appropriate.

Incidents, including air misses, are reportable to the Civil Aviation Authority and dealt with by it. However, the chief inspector of air accidents has the power to investigate incidents and does investigate serious incidents to public transport aircraft from time to time. A serious incident is defined as one which good fortune narrowly prevented from being a major accident.

Occurrence Report

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what were the contents of the mandatory occurrence report filed with the Civil Aviation Authority by the captain of a British Midland Airways aircraft en route from London to Belfast on Saturday 11 November 1989.

Mr. McLoughlin: The pilot reported that at 2028 GMT and whilst descending on airway blue 3 into Belfast following a scheduled flight from Heathrow, as the aircraft passed through 11,200 feet at a position three nautical miles east of Kirkistown, the crew witnessed a ball of light pass overhead the aircraft heading due west. It descended to a position on the port beam where it appeared to burst into a cascade of white and blue magnesium lights. At the time, the aircraft was between two layers of stratus cloud less than 3,000 feet apart. Another aircraft in the vicinity witnessed the light, and it was reported to Belfast air traffic control.

I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 18 December 1989 to his earlier question on this matter at column 3.

Rescue Operations (Liverpool Airport)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to the arrangements that exist at Liverpool airport for conducting rescue operations in the event of an aircraft ditching in the Mersey at high tide.

Mr. McLoughlin: This is a matter for the Civil Aviation Authority, which has the statutory responsibility for the licensing of Liverpool airport.

I have drawn the hon. Member's question to the attention of the chairman of the Civil Aviation Authority and will ask him to write to the hon. Member direct.

Learner Drivers

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any information on the number of accidents involving a newly qualified driver supervising a learner driver.

Mr. Atkins: The police records of accidents, on which national statistics are based, do not include information on the qualifications of supervising drivers. However, I have received a number of letters about accidents which have occurred in these circumstances.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he has received any representations from the motoring organisations regarding the supervision of learner drivers by recently qualified drivers; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make a statement on the progress of his plans to introduce a minimum experience qualification for newly qualified drivers who wish to supervise learner drivers.

Mr. Atkins: Our consultation paper issued on 20 December last year at column 278 invited comments by 28 February. One motoring organisation is among those who have so far written. I shall develop the proposals in the light of all the comments received.

RAF Finningley

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list (a) by date, (b) by type of aircraft and (c) by reason all civil aircraft that have had to divert to Royal Air Force Finningley during the last 10 years.

Mr. McLoughlin: RAF Finningley, being a military airfield, is not nominated as a diversion airfield for civil commercial air traffic required to nominate such a diversion airfield in the flight plan. Records are not available prior to 1985 but since that date only one aircraft has made a diversion and emergency landing at RAF Finningley. This occurred on Sunday, 27 November 1988, when an American-registered private microlight aircraft, call sign N85BZ, experienced an engine malfunction. Rather than continue with the flight, the pilot elected to land at Finningley, which was the nearest airfield available.

Near Misses

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his reply of 16 January to the hon. Member for Don Valley, Official Report, column 153, if he will list the locations where the three air misses occurred.

Mr. McLoughlin: The incident on 2 November 1986 involving a civilian glider and a civilian Cessna 172 occurred at a height of 1,500 ft, 10 miles south-south-west of Doncaster. The incident involving an RAF Buccaneer and a civilian Cessna 152 on 1 July 1987 occurred at a height of 2,000 ft, four miles east of Mansfield.

The incident on 27 January 1988 involving an RAF Tornado and a civilian Cessna 152 occurred at a height of 800 ft, close to Netherthorpe aerodrome.

British Rail

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what amounts were deducted from his payments to the British Railways Board in the previous year 1988-89 in respect of retrospective charges made by him against payments to it in earlier years; on what basis the deductions were made; and in what manner he publicised them.

Mr. Portillo: A recovery of £64·5 million was made from PSO grant in 1988-89 for overpayments made in 1986-87 and in 1987-88. In both years grant was paid subject to a final adjustment once a review by my Department and British Rail of cost allocation between railway sectors was completed. British Rail made a number of accounting changes in 1988-89 and the Department recovered grant overpaid in 1986-87 and 1987-88 in accordance with the conditions of the grant settlements for those years. British Rail's annual report and accounts for 1988-89, published on 5 July 1989, reported the outcome. Copies were placed in the Library of the House.

Mersey Travel

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will be in a position to reply to Mersey Travel's case for Government assistance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: The case is being given consideration. A decision will be made as soon as possible.

Mark Woodward

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the messages received by Milford Haven coastguard and passed on to Swansea coastguard relating to the 999 call by Mr. Kevin Richards reporting an incident relating to Mark Woodward who was drowned on 16 August 1989 in Rappanee cove, Ilfracombe.

Mr. McLoughlin: The call received by Milford Haven coastguard, relating to this incident, and the action taken by it, was listed in my reply of 27 November 1989, at column 82, final paragraph.

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library a transcript of the coastguard tape relating to the drowning on 16 August 1989 of Mark Woodward.

Mr. McLoughlin: The tapes referred to are not an official record, but extracts taken from the multi-track tapes for ease of use at the coroner's inquest. The tapes were heard by the Woodward family on Friday 26 January, following which they were made public, and available to anyone who wishes to hear them. It should be emphasised that the tapes are only extracts, do not contain associated conversations and cannot be linked to time. However a copy will be placed in the Library as soon as a transcription has been made.

Nuclear Convoys (Accidents)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies have been made of the problems of evacuating civilians in the event of a nuclear convoy accident in-transit through south Yorkshire.

Mr. Atkins: The preparation of evacuation plans is the responsibility of local authorities.

Merchant Shipping

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the merchant ships flying foreign flags and carrying British personnel which have been lost in the past five years; and if he will report on the progress of inquiries into the causes of loss by the authorities of the countries in which the vessels were, in each case, registered.

Mr. McLoughlin: Merchant ships flying foreign flags are the responsibility of the flag state. No records are available in the United Kingdom showing which foreign ships carry British personnel.

A57, Warrington

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received regarding speed limits on the A57 Liverpool road/Sankey way in Warrington; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: Cheshire county council is the highway authority for the A57 in Warrington but would need my right hon. Friend's consent to a speed limit. The north-west regional office advised the council in November that a 50 mph limit for Liverpool road/Sankey way would not be justified by our nationally applied criteria and practice.

Greater Manchester Relief Road

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport with which organisations his Department has had consultations regarding (a) section 2 M56 to M62, and (b) section 3 M62 to M66 of the Greater Manchester western and northern relief road.

Mr. Atkins: No consultations have yet been carried out.

South Wales-Shrewsbury Line

Sir John Stradling Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will discuss with the chairman of British Rail the provision of services on the south Wales-Shrewsbury line.

Mr. Portillo: The Government set quality of service objectives for provincial sector services in July 1989. We shall monitor them closely and discuss any problems with the board.

Lighthouses

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many lighthouses there are around the United Kingdom, detailing the number with resident keepers and the number electronically controlled from land bases; and when he expects all lighthouses to be radio-controlled from land bases.

Mr. McLoughlin: The general lighthouse authorities operate 289 lighthouses around the United Kingdom. Of these, 58 are manned; 73 are monitored from other bases; and 158 are neither manned nor monitored from other bases. The automation of the remaining manned lighthouses, except those designed as area control stations, is planned to be complete by 1998; but a substantial number will remain neither manned nor monitored from other bases. I have no information on lighthouses operated by local lighthouse authorities.

Helicopter Crash, Eastwood

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he is taking following the helicopter crash at Eastwood Toll; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The accident is the subject of an investigation by the Department of Transport's air accidents investigation branch. A team of specialists in both engineering and operations arrived at the site a few hours after the accident and began work immediately. The wreckage has subsequently been removed to the AAIB's base at Farnborough, where work is continuing.

M66 (Tree Pruning)

Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to undertake the pruning of the trees on the M66 at Ramsbottom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The planned work was completed on 10 October.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport who will represent his Department at the EC Council of Transport Ministers meetings on 29 March and 14 to 16 June; and what will be the agenda for both meetings.

Mr. Portillo: It is the intention of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to attend the Transport Councils in March and June.

Subjects likely to be discussed include the international carriage of goods by road, air transport liberalisation, cabotage, transport infrastructure, and maritime relations with Third countries.

HGVs (Advertising)

Mr. Oakes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what are his plans for new regulations regarding the use of reflective material for advertising on the rear of heavy goods vehicles;

(2) which colours he intends to permit for advertising in reflective material on the rear of heavy goods vehicles; and which he intends to prohibit.

Mr. Atkins: We have no plans to change the general regulations governing the colour of reflective material fitted to vehicles.

Generally, the only colour of reflective material which may be fitted to the rear of a vehicle is red.

There is no regulation to prohibit the use of red reflective material fitted to the rear of a heavy goods vehicle for advertising purposes.

East London Assessment Studies

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the details of the alignment of the new roads and widened roads envisaged in the east London assessment studies.

Mr. Atkins: More detailed alignments will be produced only if decisions are taken to proceed further with any scheme following consideration of the comments received on the consultants' suggested options.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received concerning the time allowed for consultation under stage 2 of the east London assessment studies.

Mr. Atkins: I have received a number of representations. Opinions are divided between those who request more time and those who wish decisions to be reached as soon as possible.

Traffic Commissioner

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to appoint the traffic commissioner outlined in his announcement on "Traffic in London," on 14 December 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: A decision on the appointment of a London traffic director will be taken in the light of consultation on the "Traffic in London" discussion document. Comments on the initiatives in the document have been requested by 28 February 1990.

Contracts

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all those contracts let by his Department from 1 November 1989 to date and these contracts which his Department hopes to let by the end of March.

Mr. Atkins: The following contracts worth more than £1 million have been awarded since 1 November 1989:

£ million

Scheme and successful tenderer	Contract price
A1/M1 link contract 1, Catthorpe interchange, Leicestershire Tarmac Construction Limited	3·1
A1/M1 link contract 5s, Northamptonshire Balfour Beatty	30·7
A1/M1 link contract 4, Rothwell to Kettering, Northamptonshire May Gurney and Co. Limited	4·4
A16 Louth bypass, Lincolnshire Clugston Construction Limited	4·9
A47 Eye bypass, Peterborough, Cambridgeshire Redland Aggregates	5·1

Tenders have been invited for the following schemes and it is expected that the contracts will be awarded before the end of March:

A1 Improvements at Brampton Hut, Cambridgeshire
A1 Improvements at Girtford, Sandy, Cambridgeshire
A6 Quorn and Mountsorrel bypass, Leicestershire
A12 Grade separated junction at Capel St. Mary, Suffolk
A16 Boston Algakirk diversion, Lincolnshire
A23 Warninglid to Brighton (Sayers Common to Muddleswood)
A30 Plusha to Bolventor, Cornwall
A42 Castle Donnington North, contract 2, Leicestershire
A43 Blisworth bypass, Northamptonshire
A47 Castor and Ailsworth bypass, Peterborough, Cambridgeshire
A47 Improvement at East Norton, Lincolnshire
A140 Dickleburgh bypass, Norfolk
A523 Macclesfield bypass, Cheshire
A650 Drighlington bypass, West Yorkshire
A1079 Market Weighton bypass, Humberside

M3 (Widening)

Mr. John Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy with regard to widening the M3 to four lanes each way between Bar End and Compton at Winchester.

Mr. Atkins: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 18 December 1989 at column 5.

Manchester Metrolink

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport from what Public Expenditure White Paper budget headings for 1990-91 and 1991-92 and from which subsection of which vote on account for 1990-91, the sums referred to for Manchester Metrolink in his answer of 22 January, Official Report, column 491, are drawn; how much in total there is, or is expected to be, under each budget heading and vote subsection, respectively for 1990-91 and 1991-91; and how much remains unallocated under each heading.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 26 January 1990]: The sums for Manchester Metrolink given in my answer of 22 January at column 491 were composed of credit approvals for borrowing by the Greater Manchester passenger transport authority and public transport facilities grant to be paid at the rate of 50 per cent. of eligible costs. Discussions on costs eligible for grant are not yet complete but the PTA has been allocated £20·945 million credit approvals provisionally on the basis of expected Metrolink expenditure in 1990-91.

The national provision for public transport facilities grant and credit approvals planned for 1990-91 and 1991-92 are given in table 7.1 of chapter 7 of the Government's expenditure plans 1990-91 to 1992-93 (Cm. 1007), published today.

The provision and amounts as yet unallocated are:

£ million	1990-91		1991-92
	Credit approvals (all local authority transport)	Public transport facilities grant	Credit approvals (all local authority transport)	Public transport facilities grant
Provision	486	29	570	20
of which now unallocated	25	not settled	570	20

SCOTLAND

Rents into Mortgages Scheme

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he plans to use local estate agents to promote sales of properties through the rents into mortgages scheme.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Responsibility for the administration and promotion of the rents to mortgages scheme lies with Scottish Homes and it is for that body to consider the most appropriate methods of encouraging sales under the scheme.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a further statement on the techniques Scottish Homes is using to promote the rents into mortgages scheme.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As a follow-up to the wide press coverage of the formal launch of the rents to mortgages scheme, Scottish Homes has made supplies of its explanatory leaflet available at each of its local offices and at the offices of the new town development corporations. It has also undertaken a mail drop of the leaflet to each of its tenants who are eligible to purchase under the scheme.

In addition to this general coverage, Scottish Homes has commissioned market research to enable it to target more concentrated sales campaigns in identified areas.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the proportion of council homes sold in the district council areas of Scotland where Scottish Homes is carrying out his Department's policy of allowing rents to be converted into mortgages; and what impact he expects this policy will have on the overall level of home ownership in those districts.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The pilot rents to mortgages scheme operates only in areas containing public sector housing rented from Scottish Homes or new town development corporations. The information requested for these areas is contained in the table.

While this is a pilot scheme available only to a specified range of tenants, I expect it to play a significant part in extending owner-occupation in its areas of operation.

Total sales from 1 April 1979 to 30 September 1989 as a percentage of stock in district council areas where Scottish Homes are operating rents to mortgage scheme

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects the first sale to be completed of a Scottish Homes property bought under his Department's rents into mortgages scheme.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I expect the first sale of a Scottish Homes property under the rents to mortgages scheme to be completed in March of this year.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has set a target for the number of homes to be sold through the rents into mortgages scheme by the end of the three-year experimental period.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: At the launch of the rents to mortgages scheme on 30 October last year, my right hon. and learned Friend announced that he expected up to 5,000 applications under the scheme during the three-year period.

Pre-School Playgroups

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what support his Department gives to the Scottish Pre-School Play Association; and whether he has any plans to increase that support.

Mr. Lang: The Scottish Pre-School Play Association in the current year has received grants totalling £78,000 under the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968. Grants for 1990-91 have yet to be determined, in the light of applications and commitments.

Bus Routes

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make the number of Road Traffic Act convictions a necessary declaration for those companies bidding for bus routes.

Mr. Rifkind: No. Companies wishing to operate a local bus service, whether commercial or under contract to local authorities must hold a PSV operator's licence. In deciding whether or not to grant an operator's licence, the traffic commissioner takes into account relevant convictions of the operator or his employees. Licence holders are required to make known to the traffic commissioner details of convictions during the currency of the licence.

Playground Supervision

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the progress of consultations about school playground supervision.

Mr. Lang: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Tayside, North (Mr. Walker) on 6 December 1989.

Crown Office (Press Statement)

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish in the Official Report the press statement made by the Crown Office on Friday 19 January concerning matters arising from the resignation of a judge at the Court of Session.

Mr. Rifkind: The press statement issued on behalf of Crown Office on 19 January was related to allegations of misconduct by Court of Session judges and was in the following terms:

"Commenting on allegations of misconduct by Court of Session Judges, a Crown Office spokesman said today:

'The Lord Advocate is responsible for investigation and prosecution of crime made known to him. No information or complaint has been provided to him which would allow him to instruct any police force or Procurator Fiscal to carry out a criminal investigation. Any rumour which has been conveyed to him has contained no sufficient specification for such instruction but what checks could be made have been made. They have revealed no basis on which to instruct further investigation.

If at any time the Lord Advocate were to be made aware of sufficiently specific allegations to instruct inquiry, the appropriate steps would of course be taken.

Allegations of non-criminal conduct by Judges are not matters for investigation by the Lord Advocate.'"

Creches

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by location, where creche facilities are provided for working mothers employed in his Department; and if they have to make any payment for this service.

Mr. Rifkind: My Department does not directly provide creche facilities. The central Edinburgh holiday play-scheme (for school-age children of civil servants), which is largely self-financing, is, however, used by Scottish Office staff.

Judges

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all the public utterances of the Lord Advocate concerning the appointment and resignation of judges since 1 January; and if he will place copies and transcripts where available in the Library.

Mr. Rifkind: The Lord Advocate has made no such public statement.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he or any official of his tendered advice to the Lord President of the Court of Session in either December 1989 or January 1990; and on what subjects.

Mr. Rifkind: It is not the practice to make known the substance of discussions which Ministers or their officials have with the Lord President of the Court of Session.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the dates in November and December when officials of the Crown Office held lunchtime meetings with the Lord President of the Court of Session.

Mr. Rifkind: A Crown Office official, together with an official from the Scottish Courts Administration, attended upon the Lord President of the Court of Session at lunchtime on 20 December 1989.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer, Official Report, 22 January, column 547, on what date since 1 November 1989 his meeting with the Lord President of the Court of Session took place; and whether, within the range of matters discussed was the question of an impending vacancy at the Court of Session.

Mr. Rifkind: On 22 December 1989.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 22 January, Official Report, column 548, if he will list the dates in November and December 1989, and January 1990 when he met judges of the Court of Session; and if he will name the judges he met.

Mr. Rifkind: The Secretary of State does not keep a record of all the occasions on which he meets judges of the Court of Session.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 22 January, Official Report, column 548, if he will list the dates in November and December 1989, and January 1990, when the Lord Advocate met judges of the Court of Session; and if he will name the judges.

Mr. Rifkind: The Lord Advocate does not keep a record of all the occasions on which he meet judges of the Court of Session.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Govan, 22 January, Official Report, column 548, if he will place in the Library the information made available to the Lord President of the Court of Session by officials of the Lord Advocate since 1 January.

Mr. Rifkind: It is not the practice to make known such information.

Passenger Ferries

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he is in a position to estimate the number of orders for new passenger ferry vessels for Caledonian MacBrayne which are likely to be placed with United Kingdom shipyards over the next five years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 29 January 1990]: Caledonian MacBrayne estimates that it will replace up to four major passenger ferry vessels and four minor passenger ferry vessels over the next five years.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report the current passenger ferry fleet owned by Caledonian MacBrayne in terms of type, gross registered tonnage and age.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 29 January 1990]: The current passenger fleet of Caledonian MacBrayne is as follows:

	GRT (gross registered tonnage)	Age (years)
Major vehicle ferries
MV Iona	1,324	20
MV Jupiter	849	16
MV Pioneer	1,071	16
MV Suilven	1,908	16
MV Juno	854	16
MV Saturn	851	12
MV Claymore	1,631	12
MV Isle of Arran	3,296	6
MV Hebridean Isles	3,040	5
MV Isle of Mull	4,719	2
MV Lord of the Isles	3,504	1
Small vehicle ferries
MV Kyleakin	225	20
MV Lochalsh	225	19
MV Kilbrannan	64	18
MV Morvern	64	17

	GRT (gross registered tonnage)	Age (years)
MV Bruernish	69	17
MV Rhum	69	17
MV Coll	69	16
MV Eigg	69	15
MV Canna	69	15
MV Raasay	69	14
MV Isle of Cumbrae	201	13
MV Loch Striven	206	4
MV Loch Linnhe	206	4
MV Loch Riddon	206	4
MV Loch Ranza	206	3

MV Lochmor	189	11

Salmon

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the annual tonnage of salmon caught in Scotland in each of the last 10 years (a) by anglers and (b) by commercial fishermen.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 29 January 1990]: Details of reported catches of Scottish salmon and sea trout by salmon fishery statistical district and by method of catch (rod-and-line, net and coble, and fixed engine) are given for the years 1982-88 in annual statistical bulletins and for previous years in "Scottish salmon catch statistics 1952-1981". Copies of these publications by the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland are available in the Library.

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will publish figures on the level of salmon stocks in the principal Scottish rivers in recent years.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 29 January 1990]: Information on the size of the salmon stocks on each river in Scotland is not available. An electronic fish counter has been operated on the river North Esk by the freshwater fisheries laboratory of the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland for some years. The numbers of adult salmon passing upstream past that counter are as follows:

1986	6,987
1987	7,132
1988	11,243

DAFS scientists are also making a widespread survey of juvenile stocks of salmon in Scottish rivers.

Planning (Neighbour Notification)

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made in revising the neighbour notification procedure in planning applications; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 29 January 1990]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Eastwood (Mr. Stewart) on 25 July (Official Report, column 649). The revision of the neighbour notification procedure is being undertaken by the Scottish Development Department as part of a wider review of the general development order and a consultation paper on the revised provisions of the general development order will be issued in due course.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether, in consequence of entries for domestic property on the valuation roll no longer being updated, he will accept notification on the occupant for the purpose of neighbour notification in planning applications.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 29 January 1990]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Eastwood on 25 July (Official Report, column 649).

Private Education

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by name all the private educational establishments in Scotland stating the amount of public assistance, financial or otherwise, which each receives.

Mr. Lang: A list of registered independent schools in Scotland has been placed in the Library. Details of private educational establishments in receipt of public funding in respect of their educational activities are set out in the table:

Establishment	Amount of public funding[4] in 1988-89 £
Corseford School, Renfrew[1]	549,246
Craigerne School, Peebles[1]	266,128
Donaldsons School for the Deaf, Edinburgh[1]	381,173
East Park School, Glasgow[1]	868,105
Harmeny School, Balerno[1]	269,184
Jordanhill School, Glasgow[1]	1,624,500
Queen Victoria School, Dunblane[2]	3,388,000
Royal Blind School, Edinburgh[1]	780,630
Scoraig Secondary School, Ross-shire[3]	8,000
Stanmore School, Lanark[1]	689,921
Thorntoun Manor, Kilmarnock[1]	300,741
Newbattle Abbey College[5]	322,271

[1] Grant-aided schools in receipt of central Government funding.
[2] Maintained by the Ministry of Defence.
[3] In receipt of funding from Highland Regional Council.
[4] Includes funding in respect of capital and recurrent expenditure.
[5] Government funding was withdrawn on 30 September 1989; with the exception of grant for redundancy and premature retirement compensation.

Crofters (Grants and Loans)

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage increases are required to adjust the levels of grant and loan available under the crofters building grants and loan scheme in line with inflation.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: On the basis of building costs and building materials indices and of the costs of new crofter housing an increase of nearly 30 per cent. would now be required.

Deprived Area Supplements

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will indicate the basis on which deprived area supplements to basic practice allowance for Scottish general medical practitioners will be paid when the new contract comes into force on 1 April.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: These payments will be made on the basis of an index devised by Professor Brian Jarman. Professor Jarman has recently revised his index to take account of the most up-to-date Scottish information available. The payments will be made at three levels: the lowest for index scores of 30-39, the next for 40-49 and the highest for scores of over 50. A total of 11·4 per cent. of the Scottish population live in postcode sectors with index scores of over 30. I am setting up a committee drawn from various interests to monitor the implementation of these payments.

Marine Fish Farmers

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money was paid to the Crown Estate Commissioners by marine fish farmers in each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 25 January 1990]: I understand from the Crown Estate Commission that in the last five financial years the Crown Estate has received the following gross rental income from marine fish farming:

1984-85	[1]7,000
1985-86	[1]8,200
1986-87	[1]8,800
1987-88	340,000
1988-89	485,000

[1] Approximate.

The commission explains that the figures represent gross income and that no account has been taken of management costs and reinvestment in research and training, which the commission states will amount to £450,000 in the current year.

Prison Population

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the prison population in each of the past 10 years; what are his estimates for the prison population for the next five years; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 25 January 1990]: Information for the past 10 years is set out in the table:

Population in Scottish penal establishments 1980 to 1989

	Number
1980	4,860
1981	4,518
1982	4,891
1983	5,052
1984	4,753
1985	5,273
1986	5,588
1987	5,446
1988	5,229
1989[1]	4,985

My latest projection is for an average population of 5,100 prisoners in each of the next five years. This projection, which was prepared some months ago for planning purposes, takes account of demographic trends.

I welcome the fact that, since the peak in 1986, the average prison population has fallen steadily, to the point where we are now projecting that the number of places in Scottish prisons will be adequate to meet needs for the foreseeable future. Such an improvement can only contribute to better conditions for prisoners and staff alike.

Lothian Health Board

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy on the closure of hospitals or wards; and if he has received any notification of the possibility of such closures by Lothian health board.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 26 January 1990]: My right hon. and learned Friend will consider any hospital closure or withdrawal of a specialty within a hospital on its own merits and after the relevant health board has consulted all local bodies with a valid interest. I am not aware of any such public consultations being undertaken by Lothian health board at present.

I am, however, aware of speculation in the media about hospital closures in Lothian and the board has stated that it has no plans for "crisis closures".

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Farm Animals

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many representations he has received concerning the ill-treatment of farm animals.

Mr. Maclean: I receive many representations on all aspects of farm animal welfare.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to introduce legislation to improve the treatment of farm animals.

Mr. Maclean: The Government plan to introduce orders on the welfare of farm livestock and horses at markets and an amendment of the transport legislation in respect of unfit animals. We are also planning new regulations on the protection of livestock on farms and at the point of slaughter. Proposed Community controls will also require implementing legislation in due course.

Sheep

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the reason for the change of colour coding of sheep infected by the aftermath of Chernobyl.

Mr. Maclean: This enables groups of sheep which have been out of the restricted area for a minimum period of time to be identified, subject to appropriate checks, as candidates for block release. The "mark and release" arrangements for sheep leaving the post-Chernobyl restricted areas are described in full in my Department's evidence to the Agriculture Committee's inquiry, "Chernobyl: The Government's Response", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Scrapie

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether his Department is conducting any research into genetic predisposition of sheep to scrapie.

Mr. Gummer: Research into the genetic predisposition of sheep to scrapie is being undertaken by the AFRC at the neuropathogenesis unit. The scrapie resistant flock at the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food Redesdale experimental husbandry farm is being used in this work.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food who will represent the Ministry at the EC Council of Ministers meetings; and what will be on the agenda on (a) Agriculture: 22 and 23 January, 12 and 13 February, 4 to 6 March, 26 and 27 March, 23 and 24 April, 21 and 22 May, 11 and 12 June, 18 and 19 June, and (b) Fisheries: 18 January and 27 June.

Mr. Curry: The Council of Ministers' meeting on 18 January was cancelled. For the meeting on 22 and 23 January I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for South Hams (Mr. Steen) on 24 January, Official Report, column 768. Agendas for future Councils will be decided nearer the time, as will the question of representation. However, I expect the Councils of 12 and 13 February, 5 and 6 March, and 26 and 27 March to concentrate on the Commission's proposals for 1990 farm prices and that my right hon. Friend the Minister, and I will represent the United Kingdom at these meetings.

Bull Fights

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will invite the EEC Commission, at the next meeting of the Agricultural Council, to produce measures on animal welfare with particular regard to the banning of bull fights; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The Commission has already produced measures on animal welfare and is preparing others. The EEC treaty contains no legal basis for justifying Community intervention on bull-fighting.

Live Horses (Exports)

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the proposals by the European Economic Community Commission on the transportation of animals within the EEC; and if they will permit the United Kingdom to maintain its restrictions on the export of live ponies and horses.

Mr. Maclean: The Government intend to negotiate the highest possible welfare standards during forthcoming discussions in Brussels. We shall press strongly to retain controls designed to prevent horses and ponies being exported for slaughter; the Commission's proposals do not provide for our existing restrictions to continue.

Bovine (Brain Removal)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a further statement on the implications for contamination from the practice of splitting bovine cranium with band-saws for the purpose of brain removal.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to my previous replies and have nothing further to add.

Common Agriculture Policy

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has of the proportion, by value, of United Kingdom agricultural products which are covered by the common agriculture policy regime.

Mr. Curry: The European Commission estimates that 90 per cent. of final agricultural production in the United Kingdom in 1987 was subject to market regimes under the common agricultural policy.
Source: The Agricultural Situation in the Community 1988 Report EC Commission.

Intervention Butter

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food under what conditions intervention butter is sold or given to the National Health Service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Intervention butter was available to non-profit-making organisations, including the National Health Service, at subsidised prices until July 1988 when the relevant Community regulation was suspended. The NHS continues, however, to make use of supplies of subsidised butter from the open market under EC rules which allow for a subsidy of £1,065/tonne (compared to the current market price of around £2,000/tonne).

Pesticides

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has any plans to commission outside bodies to carry out his pesticide reviews; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I wish to make rapid progress with the review of older pesticides. All ways of achieving this are currently being evaluated.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Foreign Language Teaching

13. Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he plans any fresh approaches to foreign language tuition among those at primary schools or earlier.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. Friend has no such plans at present.

37. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the extent to which modern foreign languages will be taught in primary schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: The national curriculum includes a modern foreign language as a foundation subject at secondary level only. Individual local education authorities and primary schools are free to provide foreign language teaching to their pupils outside the national curriculum, if they have the necessary staffing and other resources to do so.

Scottish Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals

14. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has any plans to meet the Scottish Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals.

39. Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has any plans to meet the Scottish Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals.

Mr. Jackson: I believe that the hon. Members are referring to the executive committee of the Standing Conference of Scottish Universities. My right hon. Friend has seen a number of Scottish Vice-Chancellors and he plans to visit some Scottish universities in May.

Capital Allocations

15. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received regarding the 1990-91 capital allocations announced in December.

61. Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received concerning the capital allocations for the schools building programme.

81. Mr. Barry Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received concerning the school building programme capital allocations.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. Friend has received a number of letters and requests for meetings from hon. Members, LEAs and others about the annual capital guidelines which he announced on 20 December.

101. Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on capital allocation grants to voluntary-aided and special schools.

42. Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the capital allocation for schools in England for 1990-91.

Mr. Alan Howarth: I refer the hon. Members to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Banbury (Mr. Baldry) on 20 December 1989 at columns 254-58.

Open University

16. Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many Open university students have graduated since the university was founded; and what proportion of British university graduates are now produced by the Open university each year.

Mr. Jackson: The Open university has awarded 101,900 ordinary BA degrees, and 18,094 honours degress since it admitted its first students in 1971. In 1988 it produced 9·9 per cent. of United Kingdom university graduates, and 5·3 per cent. of all United Kingdom graduates.

Parent Governors

17. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of parent representation on the boards of governors of schools in the maintained sector.

67. Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether the new arrangements for parent governors are working satisfactorily.

Mrs. Rumbold: A survey last year showed that new governing bodies, with a much larger number of parents, are already getting to grips with important educational issues. The most effective governing bodies are those where all members work as a team, in which parents have an important part to play.

Computers

18. Mr. Andrew Mackay: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many computers are now in schools in the maintained sector.

Mr. Alan Howarth: There is an average of three microcomputers per maintained primary school and 30 per maintained secondary school.

Local Financial Management

19. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on progress on the introduction of local financial management in schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: Eighty-four authorities have either received formal approval for their schemes or are being consulted on modifications prior to approval. We have indicated to five authorities that their schemes cannot be approved in their present form and that formal implementation will therefore be deferred until April 1991.

Teacher Numbers

20. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the current supply of teachers and on the position at this time in 1989.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Department collects data on vacant posts from local education authorities each January. I hope that local authorities will submit their returns for January 1990 quickly. We shall publish the results as soon as they are available. Data for 1989 were shown in the reply my right hon. Friend gave on 21 December 1989 to the hon. Member for Blackburn (Mr. Straw) at columns 353-55.

Disabled Students Allowance

21. Ms. Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to announce the result of his review of the disabled students allowance.

41. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has any plans to review the disabled students allowance.

48. Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects the review of disabled students allowance to be completed.

95. Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he will be announcing the result of his review of the disabled students allowance.

98. Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to make a statement on the level of the disabled students allowance.

Mr. Jackson: I refer the hon. Members to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Bridgend (Mr. Griffiths) on 15 January at column 8.

Teacher Shortages

22. Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has had in the last month from inner London boroughs with regard to teacher shortage.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend on 8 January received a letter from the Association of London Authorities on the subject of teacher recruitment and retention in inner London. He will reply shortly. My right hon. Friend is well aware of the difficulties relating to teacher supply in some parts of London. He recently announced grant of £4 million over two years to assist local authorities with teacher recruitment schemes. A substantial amount of this will go to the inner London authorities. Discussion of further measures is taking place at official level.

27. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what evidence he has on teacher shortages; and what action is being taken to encourage greater recruitment to the profession.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Department's annual January survey of vacancies showed in 1989 a vacancy rate in secondary schools of 1·2 per cent.—the same as in 1979. Wastage from the profession has remained broadly constant for many years.

For the future we shall continue and reinforce the range of measures we are already pursuing to encourage greater recruitment to the profession. These include expanding the teaching as a career unit, providing bursaries to trainee teachers of shortage subjects, funding in-service training for retraining teachers in the shortage subjects, and encouraging mature entrants to the profession through a series of taster courses and through the licensed teacher scheme. In addition, from April 1990, education support grant of £4 million will be available to support the recruitment of married women returners and mature new entrants to teaching.

29. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what new steps he proposes to take to tackle the problem of teacher shortages in London.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. Friend has asked the Interim Advisory Committee to advise on measures to improve teacher supply in areas where vacancy rates are highest, notably the inner London weighting area.

In addition he has made available over £100,000 to support a London-wide recruitment campaign; and from April 1990 funding under education support grant will be available to support the recruitment of married women returners and mature new entrants to teaching. This will be of particular benefit to London authorities.

87. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assessment he has made of the shortage of teachers (a) generally and (b) in mathematics, science and foreign languages; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Department's memorandum to the Education Science and Arts Committee in November 1988 describes the indicators that the Department uses to assess teacher supply and includes an assessment of shortages generally and by subject at that time. A more recent assessment was made in the Department's written evidence to the Interim Advisory Committee. Copies of both documents are in the Library. The Government recognise that there are difficulties in recruiting teachers in some parts of the country and in some subjects, in particular mathematics, physics, chemistry and modern languages.

89. Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what measures he is taking to attract people into the teaching profession.

Mr. Alan Howarth: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. Pawsey), on 16 January 1990 at column 159.

Higher Education

23. Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to monitor quality in higher education provision; and if he will make a statement.

96. Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to monitor quality in higher education provision; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: The main responsibility for quality in higher education rests with the institutions themselves and their validating bodies. In addition, Her Majesty's inspectors continue to provide, through their published reports, an assessment of the quality of provision in the polytechnics and colleges sector. My right hon. Friend encourages the work in hand in both sectors of higher education to develop improved quality assurance measures and looks to the higher education funding councils and others to consider ways in which these could be used to secure the yet more effective use of the substantial public funds allocated to higher education.

43. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the number of full-time students currently in higher education establishments; and what were the comparable figures for 1980.

Mr. Jackson: Information for academic year 1989-90 is not yet available centrally. Provisional figures for 1988-89 indicate that there were 628,000 full-time and sandwich students of higher education courses in Great Britain, compared with 521,000 in 1980-81.

Grant-maintained Schools

24. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about progress with the development of grant-maintained schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: Twenty schools have been incorporated as grant-maintained schools since September 1989. They are now experiencing the benefits of greater financial and administrative autonomy. They are proving popular with parents and pupils. I share their confidence in the future and expect them to take full advantage of the opportunities which grant-maintained status offers.

91. Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many grant-maintained schools are currently in operation; how many new approvals have been given; and how many schools are in the process of consultations with a view to obtaining grant-maintained status.

Mrs. Rumbold: To date 86 schools have embarked on the process of applying for grant-maintained status and parents at 57 of them have so far voted in favour of proceeding with an application. My right hon. Friend has approved 32 of the 41 proposals which have so far reached him for decision. More secondary schools have now been approved for grant-maintained status than the number of secondary schools in half of English LEAs.

A-levels

25. Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what discussions he has had about the future of A-levels; and if he will make a statement.

54. Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what discussions he has had about the future of A-levels; and if he will make a statement.

59. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what discussions he has had about the future of A-levels; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Members to the reply that my right hon. Friend gave on 28 November to my hon. Friend the Member for Battersea (Mr. Bowis) at column 181. In addition my right hon. Friend has asked the School Examinations and Assessment Council to develop general principles to govern A and AS examinations. The sixth form curriculum and the future of post-16 education generally, frequently arises in discussions with representatives of teachers' associations and others.

Global Climate (Research)

26. Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what programme he is supporting for systematic research into the impact of the terrestrial environment on the global climate comparable to the programmes on the atmosphere and the oceans; and whether he has any plans to increase the resources allocated to them.

Mr. Jackson: Through the research councils, the following programmes are being supported through the science budget:

NERC is carrying out a broad programme of research in terrestrial and freshwater sciences. This provides a firm scientific base for studies of the impact of global climate change on the terrestrial environment.

Current research specifically on the interaction between the terrestrial environment and global climate is as follows:

(i) changes in the floristic composition of habitats and the abundance and geographical range of animals.
(ii) the effects on coastal ecosystems of sea level rise.
(iii) the productivity of freshwater plankton and their population dynamics in response to changes to lake stratification.
(iv) investigation of the change in rates of soil organic matter decomposition and the production of trace gases.
(v) modelling changes in forest productivity.
(vi) the effect of climate change on water resources.
(vii) predictive modelling of the frequency of extreme events such as flooding and high winds.
(viii) studies of the dynamics of Antarctic terrestrial and freshwater ecosystems projects carried out by higher education institutions supported by research grants, postgraduate studentships and fellowships.

AFRC's current research in this area concerns:

(i) the absorption or release of carbon dioxide by plants in photosynthesis and respiration and the effects of carbon dioxide on plant growth, production and development.
(ii) the fate of nitrogen in plants and soil and the release of gases such as nitrous oxide to the atmosphere.

Within the increased resources for each of the research councils announced on 10 January, NERC is planning to extend its work and has allocated resources to a programme of Arctic ecology; AFRC intends to increase its level of spend in the area mentioned above; and SERC will be devoting resources to a research initiative on clean processes and technology.

78. Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his Department's expenditure on research into the effects on the global climate of (a) the atmosphere, (b) the oceans and (c) the terrestrial environment.

Mr. Jackson: Expenditure by the research councils on these categories of research in 1989-90 is estimated to be as follows:

The atmosphere
NERC	1,555
SERC	c.4,000
The oceans
NERC	11,487
The terrestrial environment
NERC	1,325
AFRC	10,000

In addition to the above, NERC spends £6,618,000 on research into paleoclimates and on land and sea glaciology.

97. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will increase funding to the NERC for research into the effects of global warming.

Mr. Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Hexham (Mr. Amos) on 10 January at columns 623-24.

In addition to the specific allocations referred to, it is for the councils to decide on how the resources allocated to them should be spent.

Four-year-olds

28. Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what action he is taking in response to the Her Majesty's inspectorate's report on the quality of education of four-year-olds in primary classes.

33. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what action he is taking in response to Her Majesty's inspectorate's report on the quality of education of four-year-olds in primary classes.

104. Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what action he is taking in response to the Her Majesty's inspectorate's report on the quality of education of four-year-olds in primary classes.

Mrs. Rumbold: The findings of Her Majesty's inspectorate in "The Quality of Education for Four-Year-Olds in Primary Classes" published in December are chiefly for local education authorities and schools to consider. The Government have addressed one important need by designating in-service training for teachers with responsibility for these children a national priority area within the local education authority training grants scheme. The committee of inquiry which I am chairing is considering how three and four-year-olds may have improved educational experiences in various settings.

Performance Indicators

30. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps his Department is taking to encourage schools to make greater use of performance indicators.

Mrs. Rumbold: We regard the development of performance indicators as a key element in the effective management of schools. The Department has recently circulated to all local education authorities a list of indicators identified by schools in a pilot exercise as particularly valuable for this purpose. I shall send my hon. Friend a copy of the aide memoire, together with my speech on the occasion of its publication.

Teachers' Pay

31. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he next expects to meet teachers' union representatives to discuss pay; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend will be meeting the teacher unions in due course to discuss the report of the Interim Advisory Committee on school teachers' pay and conditions and the Government's proposals in response to the committee's recommendations.

65. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what plans he has to introduce greater regional flexibility in pay for teachers in England and Wales.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Interim Advisory Committee on school teachers' pay and conditions has been asked to advise on what modifications should be made to the system of selective payments to teachers. My right hon. Friend will be considering its recommendations carefully.

75. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what has been the real rate of increase in teachers' pay since 1979; and what was the corresponding figure for the 1974 to 1979 period.

Mrs. Rumbold: Teachers' average salaries have risen by 30 per cent. in real terms since 1979. The estimated increase in real terms between March 1974 and 1979 is approximately 6 per cent.

84. Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will make a statement on teachers' pay.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend expects shortly to announce the Government's proposals in response to the recommendations of the Interim Advisory Committee.

Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what progress is being made in creating a joint negotiating body for teachers' pay; and if he will make a statement.

85. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what progress has been made in establishing a new negotiating body for teachers' pay and conditions.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend held a series of meetings with the teacher unions and the local authority employers in October and November last year. He is considering carefully the points made to him then. Further meetings will take place in due course.

Standardised Testing

32. Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the implementation of standardised testing in schools.

50. Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has any plans to improve the arrangements so far made for assessment of pupils' progress following the introduction of the national curriculum.

106. Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what progress has been made on agreeing a system of assessment for the national curriculum in primary schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has received further advice from the School Examinations and Assessment Council about the arrangements for national curriculum assessment. He is considering that advice and will make a statement shortly.

School Transport and Travel Expenses

34. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what recent discussions he has had with representatives of local education authorities regarding school transport and travel expenses.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The costs of school transport are taken into account in the discussions which my right hon. Friend holds with representatives of local education authorities as part of the annual cycle for determining the local authority grant settlement. He has not had any discussions about the law regarding school transport and travel expenses, which I set out in the reply I gave my hon. Friend on 14 November at column 229.

Deaf Children

35. Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set up an inquiry into the desirability of totally deaf and profoundly deaf children, for whom sign language is their first language, being taught by at least one deaf teacher using sign language.

Mr. Alan Howarth: This is a matter for local education authorities, as the employers, to decide for themselves in the light of local circumstances. It would not be appropriate to seek to limit the teaching options available to them.

English Teaching

36. Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what progress has been made since 1979 in improving standards of English, written and spoken in schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Examination results for the 16-plus age group indicate a small but steady rise throughout the decade in the standard of English attained by school leavers. Government initiatives such as the education support grant programmes for oracy and English language in the curriculum will continue this process. Above all the national curriculum will give pupils and teachers clear objectives for written and spoken English and the ways and means of reaching them.

National Curriculum

38. Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the progress of the implementation of the national curriculum.

99. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the progress of the implementation of the national curriculum.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave to the hon. Members for Truro (Mr. Taylor), for Nuneaton (Mr. Stevens) and for Edmonton (Dr. Twinn) on 19 December 1989 at col. 201.

51. Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much time he recommends teachers in primary schools should spend on assessment of the core curriculum.

66. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much time he recommends teachers in primary schools should spend on assessment of the core curriculum.

83. Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much time he recommends teachers in primary schools should spend on assessment of the core curriculum.

Mrs. Rumbold: Assessment should be an integral part of teaching. It is not possible, therefore, to say precisely how much time teachers should spend on it.

Departmental Literature

40. Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will take any measures to limit the use of jargon in the literature published by his Department and by other educational organisations.

Mrs. Rumbold: Yes.

Student Loans

44. Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the average debt expected for a student studying a four-year arts degree at a Scottish university assuming the student loans scheme was in operation and the student was entering the first year of the course in autumn 1990.

Mr. Jackson: A student beginning a four-year degree course in autumn 1990 would repay just under £2,000 over five years from April 1995. This assumes that the RPI increases by 3 per cent. a year on average over the next 10 years, and that there is no deferment of repayments. Repayments will not vary according to the subject of study, or the institution at which the course was undertaken.

46. Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a further statement on progress in establishing revised arrangements for the proposed scheme for studen loans, following his statement of 21 December, Official Report, column 617.

Mr. Jackson: Preparatory work on the student loans scheme is well in hand. As already announced to the House, the Student Loans Company Limited has selected a managing director and has secured premises in Glasgow.

60. Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he expects to make any changes to the present proposed scheme for the repayment of student top-up loans.

Mr. Jackson: None of significance. The withdrawal of the banks means that their branches will no longer be available to handle loan applications, or to counsel borrowers. It does not affect the principles of the scheme, or its administration, in other respects.

72. Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what progress he has made towards implementing the student loans scheme.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what progress he has made with the student loans scheme; and if he will make a statement.

93. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what progress has been made with the student loans scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: Preparatory work on the student loans scheme is well in hand. As already announced to the House, the Student Loans Company Limited has selected a managing director and has secured premises in Glasgow.

74. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what research his Department has carried out into the potential impact of his student loans scheme on the numbers of undergraduate students.

Mr. Jackson: A study of different countries' student support systems, including the effect on participation in higher education, was published as Annex C to the White Paper. This concluded that "there is no direct correlation of either the quantity of support or its form with participation rates".

The Department will be monitoring the effect of top-up loans on student participation.

76. Mrs. Rosie Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what, if any, studies his Department has undertaken, or has had undertaken on its behalf, into the feasibility of students repaying their maintenance loans through the income tax system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: In drawing up proposals for top-up loans for students a wide range of repayment options was considered. I am confident that the Government's scheme represents the most effective means of providing additional resources for students and securing value for money to the taxpayer.

90. Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assessment he has made of the special financial needs of the disabled in formulating his proposals for the introduction of the top-up loan for students.

Mr. Jackson: The top-up loans scheme is designed to provide an additional source of support for all students. The Department is examining the evidence submitted by organisations representing the interests of disabled students, relating to both top-up loans and the present system of student support.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what plans he has for the administration of the student loans scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what plans he has for the administration of the student loans scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Aberdeen, South (Mr. Doran).

110. Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what decision has been made on whether supplementary allowances for dependants will be frozen following introduction of student loans.

Mr. Jackson: Supplementary allowances in respect of dependants will continue to be available to all eligible students under the mandatory awards system after the introduction of top-up loans. The rates for 1990-91 are currently being considered and will be announced shortly.

The levels of these allowances for 1991-92 and subsequent years will be considered at the appropriate times in the light of all relevant circumstances, including available resources.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out the decisions he has made to date on the administration of the student loans scheme, pursuant to the withdrawal of the banks from the administration of the scheme and his statement to the House of 21 December 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: It remains the Government's intention that, subject to the passage of the Education (Student Loans) Bill, the Student Loans Company Limited will administer the scheme. The Secretaries of State for Education and Science and for Scotland have acquired the company and have appointed directors. The company has selected a managing director and acquired premises. Detailed information about the administration of the scheme will be made public as soon as possible. The principles, objectives and funding of the student loans scheme are not altered by the withdrawal of the banks.

School Leaving Age

45. Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he last received representations to consider further the statutory school leaving age.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. Friend has received no such representations.

Temporary Classrooms

47. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether any research into the disadvantages of education carried out in temporary classrooms separate from the main school building has been carried out; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: I am not aware of any recent research into the subject in question.

Youth Service

49. Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much has been spent on the running of the youth service in each of the last three years.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The information requested is given in the table. The figures consist of direct expenditure by the Department to voluntary organisations, and local authority expenditure on the youth service as recorded by them in their annual returns, including that supported by specific grant. The figures include recurrent and capital expenditure on the youth service.

Expenditure on the Youth Service—England

1986-87	156
1987-88	188
1988-89	175

Teacher Training

52. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many people were recruited onto teacher training courses in England and Wales in 1989 and 1988.

Mr. Alan Howarth: A total of 21,757 students started initial teacher training courses in September 1989—an increase of 1,574 on the corresponding 1988 total of 20,183.

Essex Education Committee

53. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he last met the chairman of Essex county council education committee.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. Friend has not met the chairman of Essex county council education committee recently, but I met her on 23 November. I also met, on 22 January, the chairman of the county council, who is standing in for her while she is in hospital.

City Technology Colleges

55. Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his latest estimate of the cost to public funds of implementing his policy on city technology colleges.

Mrs. Rumbold: Total planned Government expenditure from the announcement of the city technology colleges programme to the end of the financial year 1991-92 is £122·4 million. In addition to this, there are sponsors' contributions totalling over £43 million.

69. Mrs. Currie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on progress on the development of city technology colleges in the midlands.

Mrs. Rumbold: We are making rapid progress on the establishment of CTCs in the midlands. During the last two weeks my right hon. Friend has announced plans for CTCs in Corby and in Derby, and in addition sponsors have declared their wish to fund a CTC in Telford. These are in addition to the CTC already open in Kingshurst, Birmingham.

PhD Students

56. Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proportion of university PhD students are now of British nationality.

Mr. Jackson: Sixty per cent. of university students registered for PhD qualifications in 1988 were of United Kingdom domicile.

Teacher Supply

57. Mr. Buckley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what new proposals he has to improve the supply of teachers.

Mr. Alan Howarth: We shall continue and reinforce the range of measures we are already pursuing to meet the staffing demand of schools in the 1990s. These include expanding the teaching as a career unit, providing bursaries to trainee teachers of shortage subjects, funding in-service training for retraining teachers in the shortage subjects, and encouraging mature entrants to the profession through a series of taster courses and through the licensed teacher scheme. In addition, from April 1990, education support grant of £4 million will be available to support the recruitment of married women returners and mature new entrants to teaching.

Education Reform Act

58. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the work of teachers implementing the Education Reform Act 1988.

Mrs. Rumbold: Teachers are at the forefront of implementing our education reforms. The success of the reforms depends crucially on their contribution. I am encouraged by the evidence I have received of the enthusiasm and dedication with which the reforms are being implemented, and I pay tribute to the dedication, professionalism and hard work of teachers in this.

Local Management of Schools

62. Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what reductions in staff numbers employed in local education authority offices he anticipates as a result of local management of schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Lancashire, West (Mr. Hind) on 19 December 1989 at column 206.

Interim Advisory Committee

63. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he last met the chairman of the Interim Advisory Committee on School Teachers' Pay and Conditions; and what matters were discussed.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend meets Lord Chilver from time to time in the normal course of business.

70. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the progress being made by the Interim Advisory Committee on School Teachers' Pay and Conditions.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend asked the Interim Advisory Committee to report by the end of January.

Science Budget

64. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the allocation of the science budget for 1990-91.

Mr. Jackson: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my right hon. Friend gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Hexham (Mr. Amos) on 10 January at columns 623-4.

Classroom Closures

68. Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many teaching days have been lost to children in the current academic year due to their classroom's closure on structural grounds.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Surplus School Places

71. Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what action he has considered to ensure that local education authorities reduce their number of surplus school places.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Local education authorities are aware of the high cost of under-used capacity at schools with a substantial proportion of surplus places. They recognise therefore that it is very much in their own financial interests to continue to come forward with proposals to rationalise their school provision where appropriate and continue to make proposals to that end.

University Education

79. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many applications for university education have been received in 1990; and what were the comparable figures in each of the previous three years.

Mr. Jackson: By 15 December 1989, the Universities Central Council on Admissions had received 195,600 applications from home and overseas students for admission to university in 1990. Comparably incomplete figures for previous years are, for entry in 1989, 176,600; in 1988, 164,800; and in 1987, 156,600.

Higher Education (Salaries)

80. Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the average annual increase in real terms between 1979 and 1989 of national average earnings, average professors' salaries, senior lecturers' salaries, and PhD research student grants respectively.

Mr. Jackson: The average annual increases in real salary-grant over the 10-year period 1979 to 1989 were:

	Per cent.
Average national earnings	2·5
Professors' average salaries	1·9
University senior lecturers' maximum salaries	1·3
Research council studentships (London)	0·6
Research council studentships (elsewhere)	0·4

Notes:

1. The figure for average national earnings has been derived from the New Earnings Survey and is based on males and females on full time rates across all occupations, industries and services.
2. Average salaries and earnings are based on the period 1 April to 31 March in each of the years. The figures for academic salaries do not include non-salary earnings.
3. Studentships grants are based on the period 1 October to 30 September in each of the years. The figures do not include British Academy grants.
4. All figures have been calculated by use of the Retail Price Index.

Saturday Sports Facilities (Schools)

82. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the level of provisions of Saturday sports facilities in schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: Figures on Saturday use of sports facilities in schools are not available. The Government wish to encourage the wider use of school sports facilities by the local community and will shortly publish a practical guidance booklet on dual use.

Standard Assessment Tests

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what decisions have been made about the publication of standard assessment tests at seven years; and if he will make a statement.

86. Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what decisions have been made about the publication of standard assessment tests at seven years; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Wolverhampton, South-East (Mr. Turner) earlier today.

National Union of Teachers

88. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he last met the president of the National Union of Teachers; and what subjects were discussed.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend met the NUT president last week to discuss teacher supply and other matters.

Ko Hsuan School, Chawleigh

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps Her Majesty's inspectorate has now taken to ensure that the Ko Hsuan school at Chawleigh in north Devon conforms with approved practice in terms of sleeping arrangements, religious instruction and supervision outside school hours; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave on 11 January 1990 at column 706.

Under-fives

92. Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is taking to bring public education services for the under-fives into line with other European countries such as Denmark, Holland, France, Spain and Sweden.

Mrs. Rumbold: European countries vary in the nature and extent of their provision for the under-fives. The Government do not see conformity as a desirable end in itself; our intention is rather to build on the strengths of our existing services, including the important contribution made by the voluntary sector.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are his latest figures for each local education authority for expenditure on the education of under-fives.

Mrs. Rumbold: The information requested is not collected centrally. Local authority expenditure returns to the Department of the Environment do not identify separate figures for the education of under-fives. Expenditure is returned for all pupils in the nursery and primary sector taken together.

Supply Teachers

94. Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what discussions he has had with local education authorities about the number of supply teachers; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Dewsbury (Mrs. Taylor) earlier today.

Examination Results

100. Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assessment he has made of the factors which most influence whether schools and local authorities achieve good public examination results.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Department has undertaken numerous analyses and commissioned research in this field. HM Inspectorate also records and comments upon examination results in its reports on schools, local education authorities and aspects of the education system.

In the light of the evidence, my right hon. Friend has concluded that the major influence on examination results is the quality of teaching and organisation of individual schools. The reforms now being instituted under the Education Reform Act, including in particular the introduction of the national curriculum, are intended to improve the quality of teaching and learning in all schools, and across all local education authorities.

School Visits

102. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received over his Department's revised policy on charging for school visits.

Mrs. Rumbold: Letters to the Department about the new law, which include requests for clarification as well as expressions of opinion, have reduced considerably in recent months. It is clear that many schools are managing well within the new arrangements, but we are continuing to monitor the situation.

Interactive Video

103. Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what support he is giving to the development and testing of interactive video teaching material on compact discs for use in the school science curriculum.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Department is taking a number of steps to stimulate the production of interactive video materials. Currently we are funding the production of five discs in mathematics. The question of support for other curriculum areas will be considered in due course.

Underspending

105. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the areas in which his Department is underspending.

Mr. MacGregor: DES public expenditure Votes in 1988-89 were underspent by 1·8 per cent. Three quarters of this arose on two programmes of specific grant where local authorities did not claim as high a proportion of grant within the financial year to which it related as had been projected. Action has been taken to ensure that in future outturn more closely matches Vote provision for these programmes.

Infant and Junior Schools (Manchester)

107. Mr. Litherland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received from head teachers of infant and junior schools in Manchester regarding present working conditions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. Friend last year received via the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris) a representation from the headteacher of Oldwood infant school in Manchester concerning staff facilities at the school.

As part of a visit to Manchester last December my right hon. Friend visited Ravensbury county primary school where he saw working conditions at first hand.

Decisions about the allocation of capital resources in county schools are a matter for Manchester education authority.

Physical Education

108. Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to be able to announce the appointment of the working party on physical education and the national curriculum; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett) on 23 January, 1990 at column 598.

Local Management of Schools

109. Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on pupil-led funding and the system of local management of schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: Pupil-led funding is a key element of local management of schools. At least 75 per cent. of the resources to be allocated to schools by authorities' formula must be allocated on the basis of pupil numbers weighted for age. The remainder may be used to reflect variations in the circumstances of schools within each authority, including the size and condition of premises, the number of pupils with special needs and the need to provide a balanced curriculum in small schools.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what recent representations he has had from governing bodies about local management of schools.

77. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has had from governing bodies about local management of schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations from governing bodies. Very many of these have expressed support for the greater role that governing bodies will play in the running of schools under local management.

Science Libraries

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what action he is taking to make it possible for university science libraries to acquire more of the relevant periodicals in their disciplines.

Mr. Jackson: It is for individual universities to decide their own priorities within the total resources at their disposal.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science who will represent his Department at the European Community Council of Ministers meeting on 31 May, education and 18 May, culture; and what the agenda will be for both meetings.

Mr. Jackson: My right hon. Friend represents the United Kingdom at the meetings of European Community Ministers of Education. It is too early to predict the final agenda for the meeting on 31 May. Early indications are that it may include discussions on education co-operation, European schools, equality of educational opportunity in initial and in-service training of teachers, education for enterprise and distance education. The Council will also receive from the Commission a number of progress reports on education programmes.

Responsibility for cultural matters rests with my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Arts, who expects to be present at the 18 May meeting of European Community Ministers of Culture. Present indications are that the following items may be among those discussed: education and training in the cultural sector, free movement of cultural goods in the single European market, the MEDIA programme, library co-operation in the field of data banks, and the European City of Culture programme.

Grant-Maintained Status

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will place in the Library a copy of each proposal for acquisition of grant-maintained status required from the governing body of the school under section 62 of the Education Reform Act 1988 received by him to date.

Mr. MacGregor: Under section 62 of the Education Reform Act 1988 the governing body of a school applying for grant-maintained status must publish statutory proposals, a copy of which they are obliged to send to me. I shall put in train arrangements for the Library to receive a copy of the proposals for those schools on which I have reached decisions.

Creches

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list by location, where creche facilities are provided for working mothers employed in his Department; and if they have to make any payment for this service.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Department has not yet provided creche facilities but is participating in an interdepartmental study of the scope for providing creches centrally and in commuting areas.

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby of 13 December 1989, Official Report, column 651, concerning the accountancy firms employed by his Department; if he will give (a) the names of the four firms, (b) a list of the payments made to each in 1988 and 1989 and (c) details of the consultancy contracts given to each firm.

Mrs. Rumbold: The four firms and the overall amounts paid during the 1988 and 1989 calendar years are as follows:

Coopers and Lybrand Deloitte, Haskins and Sells Ernst and Whinney (now Ernst and Young) Peat Marwick McLintock	205,674	336,073

It is not possible to state the amount paid to each firm as this would break commercial confidentiality. The contracts awarded to each firm are listed below. The 1987 contracts are listed as some expenditure fell in 1988.

Coopers and Lybrand
Study of education and training databases.
Coopers and Lybrand
Financial delegation to schools.
Peat Marwick McLintock
Resource Management.

1988
Coopers and Lybrand
Management framework for the control of information system projects.
Deloitte, Haskins and Sells
Financial management advice to the University Grants Committee.
Ernst and Whinney
Management system for HM Inspectors travel and subsistence.
Peat Marwick McLintock
Study of requirements for an integrated Vote and Management accounting system.

1989
Coopers and Lybrand
Review of MRC capital expenditure systems.
Delloitte, Haskins and Sells
Assistance with the implementation of the Department's accounting system and selection of the accounts payable system.
Ernst and Young
Specification and selection of a teachers superannuation payment system and reorganisation.
Peat Marwick McLintock
Financial management survey of SERC.
Peat Marwick McLintock
Study into student loans.
Peat Marwick McLintock
Assistance with the implementation of the accounting system.

School Building Regulations

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the final date for compliance with the 1981 school building regulations; what is the extent of compliance to date in (a) Humberside, (b) West Sussex and (c) the Inner London education authority; what will be the cost of full compliance in each; what national funding is available for this work and what is his estimate of the impact on the community charge in each case necessary to comply if these costs fall on the local authority.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The operative date of the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1981 is 1 August 1981 except for certain provisions which represent a marked change from the corresponding requirements of the 1972 regulations. In these cases the regulations provide that the operative date for existing buildings is 1 September 1991.

Under section 10(2) of the 1944 Education Act, it is the duty of LEAs to secure that their schools conform to the standards prescribed in the regulations. The Department does not maintain records on the nature of the building stock in individual local education authorities which would enable the community charge implications of compliance to be estimated.

Since 1981, capital expenditure on schools, including buildings, land, plant, machinery and equipment, has totalled £3,914 million (£4,775 million in 1989-90 terms). From April 1990, funding for capital expenditure at LEA schools will cease available through local authority borrowing in respect of credit approvals announced by the Department of the Environment, from receipts from the disposal of capital assets, and from contributions from revenue expenditure. Capital grants are available for expenditure at voluntary-aided schools.

Teachers (National Curriculum)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he has taken to ensure that there are sufficient teachers to teach the national curriculum; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he has taken to ensure that there are sufficient teachers to teach the national curriculum; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Howarth: I refer the hon. Members to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Cardiff, South and Penarth (Mr. Michael) on 12 December 1989 at column 553.

ENVIRONMENT

Water Pollution

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by water authority the action that is being taken by the National Rivers Authority to monitor water contaminated by toxic chemicals discharged into the sewerage system and recycled into the drinking water system and the toxic chemicals discovered.

Mr. Trippier: The National Rivers Authority undertakes regular monitoring of consented substances discharged from sewage treatment works. Routine monitoring of the receiving waters includes analyses for a wide range of substances. This information is entered on the public register held by each region. Water undertakers are responsible for monitoring water supplies in accordance with the requirements of the Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations 1989.

Telecommunications Masts

Dr. Woodcock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to alter the permitted development regulations in relation to telecommunication masts.

Mr. Moynihan: My right hon. Friend intends shortly to issue a consultation paper on possible changes to permitted development rights for a range of telecommunications development. Any proposals for amending those rights as they relate to masts can be considered in that context.

Vocational Training

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he collects statistics relating to the allocation of discretionary grants made by local authorities for full-time vocational training; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Information about the allocation of such grants is not available.

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment further to his reply of 14 December 1989, Official Report, column 751, if he will name the seven accountancy firms engaged by his Department; what payments were made to them in 1988 and 1989; and what factors are taken into account in assessing firms' suitability to provide advice.

Mr. Patten: The seven accounting firms engaged by my Department during 1989-90 were, Spicer and Oppenheim, Price Waterhouse, Coopers and Lybrand, Deloitte Haskins and Sells, Peat, Marwick, McLintock, Touche Ross and Paul Anthony. It is not our policy to comment on aspects of individual contracts. As far as the suitability of these firms to provide advice, I can do no better than refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 14 December 1989.

Contaminated Land

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department will be represented at the conference on policy regulation and technology applications for contaminated land to be held at the Royal Lancaster hotel, London on 22 and 23 February.

Mr. Trippier: Yes, officials from the Department will be attending for each of the two days.

Lindane

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he now expects the Advisory Committee on Pesticides to report on the matter of lindane; and whether it is considering this issue as a matter of urgency.

Mr. Trippier: The Advisory Committee on Pesticides is currently reviewing a number of pesticides. It is essential that this work is done thoroughly, and to the highest scientific standards. This necessarily takes time. I understand that the review of lindane will be completed by late 1990 or early 1991.

Water

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment in what form Her Majesty's Government have responded to the requirements of the Commission of the European Economic Community consequent on the adoption of Council Directive 80/770 concerning the quality of water supplied for human consumption; and what information is available to Her Majesty's Government concerning comparable information supplied by Governments of other member states.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Government are wholeheartedly committed to complying with the requirements of the EC drinking water directive as quickly as possible taking account of practicalities and have always co-operated fully with the European Commission. In particular, we have sent them details of the programmes which water undertakers in England and Wales will be carrying out at a cost of £1·8 billion over the next five years in order to remedy current situations of non-compliance with the drinking water directive.

The Commission does not reveal what information other member states have supplied.

Child Care

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the authorities whose social services spending allocations for 1990-91 is (a) greater and (b) less than the grant-related expenditure allocation for 1988-90; what are the gains and losses in percentage and cost terms; if he will list the child care gainers and losers on the same basis and what are the average net cash allocations for both.

Mr. Chope: I have today placed in the Library a table covering both children's and total social services, which shows 1989-90 GRE's, 1990-91 SSA's and the difference between the two in cash and percentage terms for each social services authority in England.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the reasons for gains and losses in (a) social services spending allocation 1990 and (b) child care allocation between different local authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The new social services standard spending assessments are largely based on independent research evidence and were the subject of lengthy discussions with local authority representatives. The consequent changes in the method of calculating standard spending assessments (formerly grant-related expenditure assessments) between 1989-90 and 1990-91, and the complexity of the previous formula, make it impossible to identify in detail the reasons for differences in either total social services or children's services allocations between different authorities.

Social Services, Humberside

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the figures for (i) child abuse, (ii) domestic violence, (iii) proportion of lone parents, (iv) children at risk index and (v) the number of children in care for (a) Humberside and (b) the use national average as in his grant-related expenditure assessment and standard spending assessment for calculating social services expenditure.

Mr. Chope: Neither the grant-related expenditure nor the standard spending assessment formulae include information on child abuse, domestic violence or the number of children in care. The "children at risk index" is part of the SSA formula, no comparable indicator was calculated for the GRE. The proportion of children living in lone-parent households is an indicator in both the GRE and SSA formulae. It is calculated using information from the 1981 census and is therefore the same for each assessment. The national average and the Humberside values for the "children at risk" and lone-parent indicators are as follows:

(i) 'Children at risk'
National average per authority	4,516
Humberside	9,930
(ii) Proportion of children living in lone-parent house holds
National average	0·1300
Humberside	0·1355

Limestone Quarrying

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information his Department has as to the environmental impact of quarrying limestone for the limestone-gypsum flue gas desulphurisation process.

Mr. Trippier: No national assessment has been made of the environmental impact of quarrying limestone for the limestone-gypsum flue gas desulphurisation process. My Department has commissioned a research project into high purity limestone resources and the demand for non-aggregate uses. The report will also discuss environmental and planning issues and will be published later this year.

The CEGB has indicated that the complete 12GW retrofit programme would account for less than 2 million tonnes of limestone per year (less than 2 per cent. of current production).

The board also announced in August 1987 that it would not take limestone from quarries in national parks for the power stations selected for retrofitting with the flue gas desulphurisation process. The board went on to state that it hoped to follow a similar policy when obtaining limestone for new stations. That assessment was made in the knowledge of the Government's policy on mineral working in national parks set out in the statement by my then hon. Friend the Member for Bristol, West (Mr. Waldegrave) on 9 April 1987 (HC 393/394). I understand that the board's policy towards limestone supply has not changed since its August 1987 announcement.

Prefabricated Housing

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by local authority (a) the number and type of immediate post-war prefabricated housing which still forms part of the housing stock, (b) the amount of grant aid for structural improvement allocated for such housing each year since 1979, (c) clarify those types of such housing which qualify for grant aid, and the reasons and (d) indicate whether he has any plans to extend the list of types that so qualify.

Mr. Chope: Information on the numbers and location of such housing, and the extent to which it has been the subject of grant aid, is not available. From next April any privately owned housing over 10 years old could be eligible for renovation grant aid: we have no plans for further changes.

Nitrates

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what powers his Department have vested in the National Rivers Authority to monitor and control nitrate run-off from farmland into rivers.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Under section 112 and schedule 11 of the Water Act 1989, the National Rivers Authority has the power to propose that certain areas of land be designated as nitrate sensitive areas (NSAs) where it considers that the entry of nitrate into controlled waters as a result of the use of land for agricultural purposes should be prevented or controlled. In addition, section 106 of the Water Act 1989 also provides a general power for the National Rivers Authority to monitor pollution in controlled waters.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment who will represent his Department at the EC Council of Environment Ministers meetings on 22 March and 7 June; and what the agenda will be for both meetings.

Mr. Chris Patten: Subject to parliamentary commitments, I shall represent the United Kingdom at the next two Environment Councils. The Irish Presidency has not yet confirmed the agenda for the meetings on 22 March and 7 June.

Homelessness

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information his Department has gathered regarding the percentage of homeless people who (a) have no home or family to go back to, (b) were forced to leave home by an adult member of the family, (c) left home after being abused by another member of the family and (d) could go safely back to their families; and what use he makes of this information in shaping his policies.

Mr. Chope: Local authorities in England report the number of households for whom they accept responsibility to secure accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act in a summary quarterly return. They provide a breakdown of these by immediate reasons for homelessness. The categories covered include "Parents, relatives or friends no longer able or willing to accommodate"; more detailed information is not available centrally. My Department has commissioned a programme of research on homelessness and the findings were considered carefully, together with the regular statistics, as part of the recently completed review of homelessness legislation.

For information about Wales and Scotland, I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and Scotland.

Tyneside Enterprise Zone

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the present termination date of the Tyneside enterprise zone.

Mr. Moynihan: The Tyneside enterprise zone was designated on 25 August 1981 to last for 10 years from that date.

Pollution Control

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what responses he has received to his consultation document on cost recovery charging for Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution's implementation of integrated pollution control; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I received responses from 53 organisations and individuals. A list of these has been placed in the Library of the House. Copies of individual responses are available through the Library.

Respondents generally agreed the suggested basic structure of an initial charge for each application for an IPC authorisation and an annual charge thereafter. Respondents underlined that the system should be as simple and practicable as possible.

Respondents' comments have led us to reconsider the proposals in the consultation document for differential charges for different categories of authorisations. We now propose that there will be one flat rate initial charge per specified component of a process for each application for an authorisation.

There will also be a flat rate once-and-for-all charge for subsequent substantial changes in either the firm's operations or in pollution standards which require a fresh authorisation to be drawn up. There will be no charge for non-substantial changes that do not necessitate a fresh authorisation. There will be a lower flat rate charge in the case of the conversion of an existing statutory approval into an IPC authorisation. There will be an annual charge per component of an authorised process to cover costs of inspection, monitoring and enforcement.

This system, based on the number of components for a process, is simple, whilst also relating firms' charge payments to their scale of operations and Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution's costs of regulation. Larger and more complex installations involve a larger number of components. For example, a steel works will typically involve 20 or more components, whereas a metal plating works may involve only one component and will pay correspondingly smaller charges.

Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution will monitor its resources employed in dealing with different categories of authorisation to check for anomalies. The structure and level of the charges will then be reviewed in the light of experience. We will consider further developments as necessary, including the merits and practicalities of individual billing, which some respondents to the consultation paper favoured.

The charging system for IPC will be compatible with other charging systems, notably HMIP's charges under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960 and those for the NRA. There will be a broadly compatible charging scheme in respect of the new local authority air pollution controls under part I of the Environmental Protection Bill.

These proposals will cover operations in England and Wales. Comparable proposals are being considered for pollution controls in Scotland. Legislation for introducing integrated pollution control and a related charging system in Northern Ireland is being considered.

My officials will be consulting with industry and other interested parties as they work up the details of the charging scheme, with a view to its introduction in April 1991.

This new charging system will underline the Government's commitment to the principle that the polluter pays.

Urban Programme

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to improve the management of the urban programme.

Mr. Moynihan: My Department has today issued a consultation paper to the local authority associations asking for their comments on our proposals for improving the operation of the urban programme management initiative. These proposals, most of which build on the existing best practices of the DOE and local authorities involved, are intended to maximise the impact of the resources dedicated to the urban programme by ensuring that inner area programmes are efficiently prepared, approved and delivered. I have laid a copy of this consultation paper in the Library of the House.

Cash Limits

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any changes to announce to his Department's cash limits for 1989-90.

Mr. Chris Patten: Yes. I propose the following changes subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates.

The non-voted cash limit DOE/HCI (capital expenditure by the Housing Corporation) will be increased by £120,000,000 from £694,250,000 to £814,250,000. The capital resources available to the Housing Corporation in 1990-91 will be reduced correspondingly by £120,000,000 from £1,105,500,000 (as announced in the Autumn Statement) to £985,500,000. This reflects a greater speeding up of housing schemes by housing associations than had previously been forecast. It is not expected to affect the total of resources available and houses provided over the two years taken together. The increase in 1989-90 provision will be charged to the Reserve.

The cash limit for class X, vote 2 (Central Environmental Services, etc) will be increased by £3,813,000 from £312,597,000 to £316,410,000 to cover increased grant in aid of £3,943,000 to the National Rivers Authority to carry out capital works inherited from the former water authorities. This increase will be fully offset by a reduction in the exit external financing limit of the former authorities and minor savings within the vote.

There will be a token Supplementary Estimate for class X, vote 5 (Department of Environment: administration) and the running cost limit for my Department will be increased by £6,580,000 from £162,154,000 to £168,734,000 which reflects increased expenditure on additional staff and consultancy work and the recent transfer of inner cities work from the Cabinet Office and the Department of Trade and Industry to my Department.

There will also be a token Supplementary Estimate for class X, vote 9 (Sale of shares in the water holding companies, etc). There will be a further announcement soon to Parliament giving details of the costs of water privatisation.

The non-voted cash limit DOE/UA1 (Urban aid and derelict land) will be reduced by £250,000 from £723,254,000 to £723,004,000 to cover a transfer from my Department to the Department of Transport to meet half the cost of a £500,000 grant to Thames Line plc. A matching increase will be made to the Department of Transport's cash limit for class VIII, vote 2.

The cash limit for class IX, vote 2 (Miscellaneous housing administration and grants) will be reduced by £1,000,000 from £79,417,000 to £78,417,000 reflecting reduced forecast expenditure on housing and construction research.

North Sea

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the quality of marine life and water in the North sea, what proposals he has for their improvement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 26 January 1990]: A full quality status report on the North sea was prepared for the second North sea conference held in 1987. As a result of a United Kingdom initiative at that conference, a North sea task force was established to co-ordinate North sea research, identify gaps in knowledge and prepare an updated and improved quality status report for the fourth conference which is expected to be held in 1995. Work on this is under way and in the meantime an update of scientific material will be submitted to the third North sea conference in March 1990, together with reports from the task force on sensitive issues such as seals and algal blooms.

The Department of the Environment is co-ordinating the United Kingdom's input to the task force together with the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland and the National Rivers Authority. Additional research is being undertaken on a range of topics including fish disease, seabird breeding failures, the seal epidemic, the role of nutrients and transport of contaminants; and there is a special Anglo-French study of the English channel.

I am confident that the third North sea conference to be held in March this year, primarily to review the work undertaken by member states in implementing the recommendations of the second conference, will also generate valuable new measures to improve protection of the North sea.

Eastbourne Water Company

Mr. Gow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with the Eastbourne Water Company about the level of its charges for the year ending 31 March 1991; and whether he will make it his policy to consult the hon. Member for Eastbourne before he decides whether to instruct the company to abate its proposed charges.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 26 January 1990]: The Department's officials have had three meetings and detailed correspondence with the Eastbourne Water Company on this matter. Under the provisions of the Water Act 1989, the limits on charges must be set by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State at a level which enables each company to finance its functions but ensures that the interests of customers are properly safeguarded. There is no formal process of consultation with right hon. and hon. Members, but I am available to discuss the issues with those who wish to do so and would welcome a visit from the hon. Member for Eastbourne.

Animal Imports

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration he has given to the report of the Wildlife Trade Monitoring Unit in relation to the shortage of expertise to identify suspect species being imported contrary to CITES regulations.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 29 January 1990]: When the WTMU report was published, we had already started work on the establishment of a panel of consultant expert identifiers to assist the Department's wildlife inspectorate, Her Majesty's Customs and Excise or the police with the identification of wildlife species. The wide range of expertise already available within the Department's wildlife inspectorate will be further extended by the establishment of the panel.

Non-smokers

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what provisions are being made in all the offices and other places under his Department's control for the convenience and comfort of non-smokers; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy for non-smokers.

Mr. Chris Patten [holding answer 29 January 1990]: My Department's policy is to respond to the wishes of staff in developing policies on smoking in the offices and buildings which it administers and to prohibit smoking in places where it could be a safety hazard. With this in mind consultations are in hand to establish an agreement on the designation of "no smoking" areas within office buildings where this is wanted by staff and in individual offices where this is the choice of staff.

Sulphur Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are his most up-to-date estimates of the reductions in the level of sulphur dioxide emissions from Britain's electricity generating plant by the year 1995, 2000 and 2003.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 29 January 1990]: The Government have agreed to the European Community directive on large combustion plants. It commits us to reducing sulphur dioxide emissions from existing plants of this type, which includes electricity generating plants, by 20 per cent. by 1993, 40 per cent. by 1998 and 60 per cent. by 2003 from their 1980 base line. The details of the contributions to this reduction from different sectors of industry have yet to be decided.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average level of poll tax for households in Liverpool.

Mr. Chope: The information requested is not available.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the 1990-91 revenue support grant entitlement per head of population, before safety net adjustments, for each borough and district council in Kent in descending order of magnitude.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 29 January 1990]: The information requested is set out in the table. For the purpose of this reply the population figures used are those for the relevant population of each council.

1990-91 revenue support grant entitlement per head of population, before safety net adjustments

ENERGY

Electricity Supply Industry

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his Department's estimate as to the tonnage of limestone required per year if the limestone-gypsum process of flue gas desulphurisation were to be used on 12,000 MW of electricity generating capacity.

Mr. Baldry: I am advised by the CEGB that the estimated annual limestone requirement for a 2,000 MW power station is 300,000 tonnes. On this basis a 12,000 MW programme would be likely to require the purchase of around 1,800,000 tonnes of limestone annually.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what percentage of the annual output of sulphur dioxide would be stopped from being discharged if 12,000 MW of generating capacity were fitted with flue gas desulphurisation equipment.

Mr. Baldry: Flue gas desulphurisation equipment can remove up to 90 per cent. of a power station's annual emissions of sulphur dioxide. The actual percentage of overall annual output abated would depend on the operating characteristics of the stations to which the equipment was fitted, including the sulphur content of the coal burnt.

Natural Gas (Water Removal)

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) how many installations on the United Kingdom continental shelf use triethylene glycol as a part of the process of water removal from natural gas; and how many of these installations use cold vent stripper gas;

(2) how many offshore installations on the United Kingdom continental shelf use the DRIZO process of water removal from natural gas; and what other methods of water removal are currently in use on offshore installations.

Mr. Peter Morrison: This information is not held within the Department. I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what steps have been taken by his Department, under its obligations under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974, to monitor the effect of triethylene glycol in water removal processes from natural gas.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Primary responsibility for safety of persons on offshore installations rests with the operator. My inspectors, in carrying out inspections of installations, monitor all aspects of safety including employers' responsibilities under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 and the Mineral Workings (Offshore Installations) Act 1971.

Offshore Installations (Discharges)

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many prosecutions under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act he has initiated against operators of offshore installations on the United Kingdom continental shelf for the discharge of unsafe quantities of benzene and toluene into the atmosphere.

Mr. Peter Morrison: None.

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what studies have been undertaken by him into the exposure of offshore workers to benzene and toluene, the effects on the health of workers of such exposure, and into the present and future hazard such exposure presents to the health of offshore workers;

(2) whether he has made any assessment of the carcinogenic properties of benzene and toluene; and what steps he has taken to prevent the release of benzene and toluene into the atmosphere on oil and gas installations on the United Kingdom continental shelf.

Mr. Peter Morrison: It is the responsibility of the operator to ensure that all reasonably practicable precautions have been taken against any danger to which persons on an offshore installation may be exposed by the use of any dangerous substance.

There is a wide range of information available on these matters, which are not exclusive to the offshore industry. In particular, the Health and Safety Commission's Advisory Committee on Toxic Substances has considered the effects of both benzene and toluene on workers generally. Additionally, a study has been undertaken by this Department of the hazards of contaminants in diving breathing gases and in decompression systems. A follow-up study set out safe exposure limits for divers in decompression on a wide range of contaminants, including benzene and toluene. A survey has been undertaken of methods of accurately sampling gas contaminants in hyperbaric chambers.

Central Electricity Generating Board

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will call for a report from the Central Electricity Generating Board as to how much it has paid British Nuclear Fuels plc for (a) reprocessing and (b) decommissioning for each year from 1985 to 1989.

Mr. Baldry: This is a commercial matter for the CEGB. I have therefore asked the chairman to reply direct to the hon. Member.

Nuclear Power

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will provide a breakdown of his current assessment of total fuel cycle cost for nuclear power per kilowatt hour including the cost of uranium, reprocessing, enrichment, where applicable, and waste disposal.

Mr. Baldry: This is a commercial matter for the nuclear industry.

Gas-fired Power Stations

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what assessments he made of the effect of methane leakages associated with gas-fired power stations, before consents were granted for the projects listed in his answer of 8 January, Official Report, column 475.

Mr. Wakeham: Environmental considerations are taken into account when considering gas burn consent proposals. Our assessment in general is that methane leakages from the high pressure distribution system are very low; and new gas-fired generation plant is not expected to add to the overall emissions of methane from the United Kingdom system.

Electricity Generation

Mr. Frank Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, what is his estimate of the current maximum electricity generating capacity in England and Wales in the public and private sectors, respectively; and what is his estimate for each year up to 1995-96.

Mr. Wakeham: The declared net capacity of (commissioned) generating plant in England and Wales is 55.1 GW in the public sector; private generating capacity for Great Britain as a whole is 3.7 GW. Capacity in subsequent years is a matter for future electricity generating companies.

Mine Closures

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give the closure dates of Danygraid mine, Nant Medlyn mine, Darren mine (West Glamorgan), Hall of Auchinross mine (Ayrshire), Wrytree drift mine and Robin Rock mine (Northumberland).

Mr. Wakeham: The Department does not have this information. I have therefore asked the chairman of British Coal to write to the hon. Member.

NHS Ambulance Staff

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what National Health Service ambulance staff based in South Yorkshire have participated in any exercises of local emergency plans at nuclear installations; from which stations staff came; and what was the exercise location in each case;

(2) what specialist equipment, including personal dosimeters, radial survey meters and decontamination meters are available for National Health Service ambulance staff in South Yorkshire; and what specialist training they have received.

Mr. Freeman: I have been asked to reply.

Equipment for Health Service staff and emergency planning is a matter for health authorities. I suggest the hon. Member contacts the chairman of Trent regional health authority for the information he seeks.

WALES

Medical Laboratory Scientific Officers

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many medical laboratory scientific officers have been newly appointed to each health authority in Wales in each year since 1982.

Mr. Grist: Information on the number of newly appointed medical laboratory scientific officers is not available centrally. However, information on staff in post is shown in the following table:

Medical laboratory scientific officers in post as at 30 September (whole-time equivalents)

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Parliamentary Salaries

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Lord President of the Council what information he possesses on comparable parliamentary salaries, exclusive of allowances in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) France, (c) Germany, (d) Australia and (e) the United States of America, for the latest published figures available.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The information requested is as follows:

Country	Salary (per annum)
United Kingdom Member of the House of Commons	£26,701. All Taxable
France Deputy in the National Assembly	FFr 424,111 (£44,776) of which 45 per cent., FFr 190,850 (£20,149), is tax-free
Federal German Republic Member of the Bundestag	DM 110,652 (£39,693). All taxable
Australia Federal Member of the House of Representatives	A$ 55,000 (£25,439). All taxable

Country	Salary (per annum)
United States of America Member of the House of Representatives	[1]US$ 89,500 (£54,039). All taxable

[1] Congressmen's salaries have not been increased since 1988.

Note: The sterling figures calculated using rates of exchange at the close of business on 24 January 1990.

Office Accommodation

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many personal offices are available and assigned to hon. Members of Parliament (a) within the Houses of Parliament, (b) within the Norman Shaw building and (c) elsewhere.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Rooms are available and allocated for right hon. and hon. Members' personal use as follows:

	Number
(a) Palace of Westminster	163
(b) Norman Shaw North and Norman Shaw South	129
(c) St. Stephen's House, 3 Dean's Yard, 2 The Abbey Garden and 7 Old Palace Yard	42

Secretarial and Research Allowances

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Lord President of the Council what is the level of secretarial and research allowance available to a Member of (i) the United Kingdom Parliament, (ii) the United States Congress and (iii) the Federal Republic of Germany Bundestag.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Members of the House of Commons are eligible to claim the office costs allowance for general office expenses and secretarial and research assistance up to a maximum of £24,903 per annum, with an additional maximum of £2,490 (10 per cent.) provided for employer pension contributions of any staff employed. I will provide the additional information requested as soon as possible.

Hong Kong

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Lord President of the Council, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Northampton, North, of 25 January, Official Report, column 1054, if he will give the Hansard reference for the answer to which he referred.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The clarity and distinction to which I intended to refer was of course that of my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary on 17 January at columns 291-304.

Televising of Proceedings

Mr. Page: To ask the Lord President of the Council what consideration the Select Committee on Televising of Proceedings of the House has given to changes in the rules of coverage for the televising experiment.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: At its meeting on 29 January, the Select Committee on Televising of Proceedings of the House considered a number of representations from the broadcasters for experimental modifications to the rules of coverage (the guidelines to the television director as to the types of shots which may or may not be used). On this basis, the following changes to the rules set out in the Committee's first report of Session 1988-89 have been approved.

1. Reaction Shots

The rule which permits a reaction shot of a Member who has been referred to will be interpreted less strictly so that a specific mention of the Member's constituency, or in the case of a Minister, his office, will not be necessary; so long as it is clear to the director which member is being referred to, a reaction shot will be permitted. As under the existing rules, this change will not apply at Question Time or during ministerial statements and subsequent questioning.

2. Group Shots

A group shot—mid way between the standard head and shoulders shot and the wide-angle shot—will be permitted; such shots may be used either for the purposes of showing the reaction of a group of Members or in order to establish the geography of a particular part of the Chamber. This shot will be available to the director at any time, including Question Time and during ministerial statements and subsequent questioning.

3. Second Feed of Wide-Angle Shot

A second feed, showing a continuous single wide-angle shot from the end of the Chamber, will be provided as soon as the necessary technical facilities are available. This feed may be used only for editing purposes; it may not be used for separate live transmission, or for mixing electronically with the main feed for live transmission. The second feed will be time-coded, and extracts from it may only be employed in their correct chronological sequence within the proceedings of the House.

4. Zoom Shots

The Committee has also decided that the director should be encouraged to make appropriate use of his ability, under the existing rules, to zoom in on a Member speaking or to zoom out to show the same Member in relation to colleagues in his or her vicinity.

All these changes, including the supply of the second feed, will be subject to the existing rules relating to the coverage of incidents of disorder. During such periods when the director is required to focus on Mr. Speaker, the second feed will be withdrawn.

In deciding to approve all these changes, the Committee has been particularly swayed by the argument that the House has agreed to an experiment and that the only way of establishing whether certain shots are appropriate is to see them in operation. The House will, of course, be the final judge when it considers the Committee's detailed Report on the outcome of the experiment.

It is hoped that these revised guidelines for the television director will be brought into effect on Thursday 1 February. Although no time limit has been set at this stage on the duration of the changes, the Select Committee will monitor very closely their impact on the way in which the House's proceedings are covered and will review their operation as the experiment continues. As the Committee's report made clear, further modifications during the course of the experiment, whether in the direction of greater latitude or increased strictness, cannot be ruled out.

The report also stipulated that the rules of coverage for the Chamber (and, by implication, any changes in the rules)

"should apply mutatis mutandis to Committees".

I should stress, however, that there is no question at this stage of a second feed from Committees.

Officers of the House (Salaries)

Mr. Dykes: To ask the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, if he will give figures, grades, titles and ranks for all officers of the House whose salaries are (a) higher and (b) lower than those of hon. Members.

Mr. Beith: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Hampstead and Highgate (Sir. G. Finsberg) on 16 November 1989 at columns 374-77.

House of Commons Library

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, how many professional librarians in the Library are (a) full-time and (b) part-time.

Mr. Beith: Of the 32 professional librarian posts in the Library, 30 are filled by full-time staff. Four part-time staff share the remaining two posts.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, how many researchers in the Library are (a) full-time and (b) part-time.

Mr. Beith: There are 27 research posts in the Library. Of these, 24 are filled by full-time staff. Six part-time staff share the remaining three posts.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, how many researchers in the Library are currently working in the fields of defence and foreign affairs.

Mr. Beith: Four full-time research staff (one of whom specialises in defence matters) currently work in these areas. Certain aspects of defence and foreign affairs—for example, those inquiries involving statistical and economic expertise—are handled by research staff in other sections of the Library.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, what is the current annual budget of the Library; and how much is allocated to (a) research activities and (b) librarian activities.

Mr. Beith: The current annual budget of the Library Department, which includes the Vote Office as well as the parliamentary and research divisions, stands at £3,241,000. This figure covers staff costs, the cost of purchase, binding and repair of books, and other Library services. The Library runs an integrated service, and it is therefore not practicable to separate the costs of research activities from those of librarian activities.

WALES

Midwives

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many staff midwives were in post on 30 September in each health authority in Wales in 1985, 1986, 1987 and 1988.

Mr. Grist: Information is available centrally only on the total staff in post for all nursing and midwifery staff. Currently, breakdowns of these figures into occupation category are not considered reliable.

Medical and Dental Staff

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the number of medical and dental staff whole-time equivalents in Wales in each year between 1978 and the latest available year, by health authority.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is shown in the following table:

Medical and Dental Staff (W.T.E.)

Cardiac Surgery

Mr. Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make a statement on the availability of coronary bypass surgery facilities in West Glamorgan;

(2) whether he will initiate policies to improve the development of cardiac surgery services in south-west Wales.

Mr. Grist: Cardiac surgery facilities are presently available to patients from West Glamorgan at the regional cardiac unit at the University hospital of Wales, Cardiff. Our policies for the improvement of cardiac services, based on the report of the cardiology committee of the Royal College of Physicians, were announced in July 1989. They include the development of the regional unit, which is presently in hand, and the appraisal of options for a second unit in south Wales, which will commence shortly.

Creches

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether creche facilities are provided for working mothers employed in his Department; in what locations; and if they have to make a contribution to this service.

Mr. Grist: The Department does not currently provide creche facilities for its staff. It is looking at the possibility in conjunction with other Government Departments in Cardiff.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his letter of 12 January 1990 to the hon. Member for Alyn and Deeside on employment in Wales, if he will state in the Official Report (a) total civilian work force in employment in Wales, and sub-divided by males and females, in (i) March 1979, (ii) June 1979, (iii) September 1979 and (iv) December 1979; (b) the actual and percentage quarterly changes for each in (a); the actual and percentage quarterly change between March 1980 and June 1980 and (d) the actual and percentage annual change for each in (a).

Mr. Peter Walker: The information requested is shown in the following tables:

Storm Damage

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he proposes to make special financial allocations to Welsh local authorities to assist them in tackling the storm damage of 25 January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I announced on Friday 26 January that special financial assistance under the Bellwin scheme would be available to local authorities in Wales which would otherwise suffer an undue financial burden because of the effects of the severe weather on 25 January. The Welsh Office will shortly be writing to all local authorities with full details of how the scheme will apply in Wales.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the estimated extent of damage in Wales concerning the 25 January storm; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: It is still too early to quantify the cost of damage for Wales as a whole.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Mr. Kevin Taylor

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Attorney-General whether he will make a statement on the discontinuance of the trial against Mr. Kevin Taylor.

The Attorney-General: No.

Queen's Counsel

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Attorney-General how many Queen's counsel there are at the English Bar; and, of these, how many are (a) men, (b) women, (c) black and (d) Asian.

The Attorney-General: As at 1 October 1989, there were 640 Queen's counsel at the English Bar, of whom 610 were men and 30 were women. Neither the Bar Council nor the Lord Chancellor's Department keeps records of the ethnic origin of Queen's counsel, but it is understood that there are three black and three Asian silks.

Serious Fraud Office

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Attorney-General whether he proposes any changes to the Serious Fraud Office's cash and running cost limits for 1989-90.

The Attorney-General: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimate, the cash limit for class XI, vote 12 will be increased by £50,000 from £5,764,000 to £5,814,000. Within this total the running costs limit of the Department will increase by £50,000 from £5,372,000 to £5,422,000. This increase will enable the Serious Fraud Office to meet extra costs arising from its casework. The increase will be charged to the reserve.

Management Consultants

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Attorney-General (1) if he will list any research reports or policy analyses received from outside management consultants after January 1985, but commissioned by his Department before that date, and the date of completion and cost of each contract;

(2) if he will list the contracts his Department has given to outside management consultants in policy areas concerning his Department since January 1985, and the date of completion and cost of each contract.

The Attorney-General: The legal secretariat to the Law Officers, the Treasury Solicitor's Department and the Serious Fraud Office have not received such research reports or policy analyses and have not given contracts to outside management consultants in policy areas. The Crown prosecution service has given the following contracts to outside consultants, largely in management areas, since the service was created in 1986:

Strategic planning and budgeting study by Hay Management Consultants, completed April 1987, cost £37,000;

Telecommunications strategy study by Logica, completed January 1987, cost £20,000;

Internal communication study by Charles Barker Communications, completed December 1987, cost £29,000;

Information study, asistance from the Mindworks Partnership, completed March 1989, cost £40,000;

Staffing model feasibility study by P. A. Management Consultants, completed December 1988, cost £37,000;

Staffing model development by P. A. Management Consultants, completed January 1990, cost £135,000;

Evaluation of the use of information technology to present evidence in court by the human science and advanced technology research centre, Loughborough university, for completion February 1990, cost £15,000.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Ethiopia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what action the Government are taking to persuade the Ethiopian Government to allow church workers to provide famine relief in Tigray;

(2) what aid the Government intend to provide to the Joint Relief Partnership of church agencies to provide famine relief in rebel-controlled areas of Ethiopia.

Mrs. Chalker: The Government very much welcome the announcement on 18 January of agreement between the Ethiopian Government's relief agency and the Joint Relief Partnership (JRP) of local church groups on arrangements for the distribution of relief supplies within Tigray. A positive response from the rebel side is vital, and we have been in touch with their representatives here to this end. The Ethiopian Government meanwhile issued a fresh appeal for food aid on 26 January, taking account of the needs of Tigray. I have approved an immediate response to this appeal of 10,000 tonnes of wheat flour (equivalent to 13,700 tonnes of wheat) to be channelled through British NGOs in support of this JRP operation. The cost of this will be about £2·6 million. I have also approved a further £1 million of emergency aid. Much of this will be used to support JRP operations in Tigray and Eritrea. This new aid is in addition to commitments totalling £18·5 million in 1989.

Cambodia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what decision has been made in response to a request from Medical and Scientific Aid for Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, for a grant to send oral rehydration sachets to Cambodia.

Mrs. Chalker: Supplies for oral rehydration treatment are already available in south-east Asia. It would not be cost effective to supply them from the United Kingdom as proposed. We are ready to consider proposals from NGOs for primary health care activities in Cambodia under the joint funding scheme.

Foreign Aid

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report a table or chart showing for the last five years (a) the flows of aid from the United Kingdom to (i) South America, (ii) Africa and (iii) Asia and the middle east and (b) the proportions in each case of this aid tied to trade deals involving United Kingdom companies.

Mrs. Chalker: The answer is as follows:

United Kingdom gross bilateral aid 1984-88 (£,000)

1984	17,755	6,427	36·2

[1] Expenditure under the Aid and Trade Provision.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing in United States dollars for each year since 1980 and for 1989 to the latest available date, the annual amounts allocated to Third-world development aid by (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the EEC, including the United Kingdom, (c) the EEC, excluding the United Kingdom, (d) the United States of America, (e) Japan and (f) Australia and New Zealand, and the proportions these amounts represent of each nation's gross national product.

Mrs. Chalker: This information is set out in the table. Figures for 1989 are not yet available. The figures for the EC relate to those EC countries which are members of the Development Assistance Committee of the OECD:

Eastern Europe

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Government will include aid to eastern Europe when calculating the percentage of gross national product spent on aid for figures collected by the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development's Assistance Committee.

Mrs. Chalker: The reporting of aid to eastern Europe is currently under discussion in the Development Assistance Committee of the OECD.

Yanomami Indians

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking to make known to the Government of Brazil the concern in Britain about the treatment of the Yanomami indians.

Mrs. Chalker: I believe the Government's views about the treatment of indigenous minority groups are well known to other Governments, including Brazil. We shall take all suitable opportunities to express our legitimate concern about the plight of the Yanomami indians. However, we must respect the rights of sovereign countries to conduct their own affairs in accordance with their laws. In this case, we must await the outcome of the due legal processes in Brazil.

I hope that the environmental technical co-operation programme now being developed, in the context of the memorandum of understanding signed in Brasilia last July by my right hon. Friend the Member for Bath (Mr. Patten), will enable us to contribute directly or indirectly to solving some of these problems. I am ready to consider proposals from relevant organisations for medical or other humanitarian assistance for the Yanomami. None has so far been received, but proposals will be welcomed.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Creches

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list by location where creche facilities are provided for working mothers employed in his Department; and if they have to make any payment for this service.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The Duchy of Lancaster does not provide creche facilities for working mothers.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Disabled People

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what eligibility criteria he used in estimating in paragraph 4.13 of "The Way Ahead" that 150,000 people would benefit from the proposed mobility component.

Mr. Scott: It is assumed that the lower level of the mobility component will be awarded to people aged between five and 65 at the time of their claim who, by virtue of a physical or a mental disability, are not independently mobile. Precise details of the eligibility criteria will be considered in working up proposals for the disability allowance.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consideration was given in the Government's proposals for disability benefits to the introduction of an allowance for disabled people for costs not arising from mobility or attendance needs but which are nevertheless associated with a person's disability; and what were the reasons for rejecting it.

Mr. Scott: In re-examining benefits which help with the extra costs of disability we considered ways in which these benefits might be restructured, including a range of points-based assessment schemes which took into account disabilities other than locomotion and self care. When related to existing benefit entitlements these produced widespread changes in people's entitlements to benefit, with unacceptably high numbers of losers. Such a scheme would also involve considerable administrative complexity.

The proposed disability allowance builds on the existing benefits. As paragraph 4.2 of "The Way Ahead" Cm. 917 explained, the surveys of disability carried out by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys suggest that the existing benefits are well directed towards the most common of the more costly disabilities. Equally important, the benefits provide help to people with other disabilities which are frequently combined with locomotion or self-care disabilities.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what eligibility criteria he used to estimate in paragraph 4.12 of "The Way Ahead" that 140,000 people would benefit from the proposed care component.

Mr. Scott: It is assumed that the lower level of the care component will be awarded to people aged 65 or under at the time of their claim who need repeated help in connection with their bodily functions but who need that help less frequently than those who currently qualify for attendance allowance. Precise details of the eligibility criteria will be considered in working up proposals for the disability allowance.

National Insurance Fund

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the surplus or deficit in the national insurance fund for each financial year since 1979; and what is his estimate for the current year and for 1990-91.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information requested is in the table.

	Surplus/deficit of fund income against expenditure for each year £ billion	Balance held in the national insurance fund at the end of each year £ billion
1979-80	+0·54	4·63
1981-82	−0·99	4·05
1982-83	−0·03	4·02
1983-84	+0·58	4·60
1984-85	+0·38	4·98
1985-86	+0·31	5·29
1986-87	+0·42	5·71
1987-88	+1·58	7·29
1988-89	+3·08	10·37
1989-90[1]	−0·96	9·41
1990-91[1]	−1·70	7·69

[1] Figures for 1989-90 and 1990-91 are estimates by the Government Actuary.

Creches

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list by location where creche facilities are provided for working mothers employed in his Department; and if they have to make any payment for this service.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: No creche facilities are available at present but there are plans for a nursery to open at our Hertford office in February 1990. This nursery will cater for 10 children under five years of age. Other locations are considering the introduction of nursery facilities and the development of new holiday play schemes. We have already established holiday play schemes in several different parts of the country, often in collaboration with other Government Departments and other local employers. All staff using child care facilities are required to make a financial contribution.

Mobility and Attendance Allowance

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how existing levels of benefit for mobility allowance claimants will be protected.

Mr. Scott: People will qualify for the upper level of the mobility component and the upper two levels of the care component and the upper two levels of the care component on the basis of assessment criteria similar to those currently employed for mobility allowance and attendance allowance respectively. The introduction of the disability allowance will produce only gainers, and we do not envisage any need for transitional protection.

Social Fund

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will give details of the formula by which social fund local office allocations will be calculated for the year 1990-91;

(2) when he expects to announce the local office allocations for the social fund for 1990-91;

(3) whether the additional allocations made to certain local offices for their social fund expenditure in 1989-90 will be taken into account when allocations for 1990-91 are calculated.

Mr. Scott: Individual social fund allocations to local offices for 1990-91 and details of the basis on which they are made will be announced in due course.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what criteria were used to determine which local offices would receive an extra allocation in December for their social fund budgets.

Mr. Scott: The extra allocation was made to those local offices whose budgets had come under exceptional pressure as a result of high levels of demand. Particular factors taken into account included the extent to which the expenditure of individual offices exceeded their expenditure profiles, and changes in the levels of priority they were able to meet during the course of the year.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when it is expected that the social fund loans element will achieve a balance between the value of loans paid out and the value of repayments received.

Mr. Scott: It is not envisaged that the loans budget should achieve such a balance.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will take further action to ease the difficulties experienced by those local offices which were not given extra allocations for their social fund budgets in December and which are now experiencing difficulties as great as those that were given extra allocations in managing their budgets.

Mr. Scott: Additional allocations have been made to a further 10 offices bringing the total number of offices helped to 106. We are continuing to monitor the situation closely. A revised list of offices has been placed in the Library today.

State Pensions

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which countries of the European Economic Community have state pension schemes that include (a) an earnings-related retirement component, (b) an earnings-related component with a widow's pension on death before retirement and (c) an earnings-related component with invalidity pension.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the right hon. Member to the Department's annual publication "Tables of Social Benefit Systems in the European Communities", copies of which are available in the Library.

Benefits (Charitable and Voluntary Payments)

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement about the treatment of charitable and voluntary payments in the income-related benefits.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We propose to double to £10 a week the current disregard for charitable and voluntary payments made to people in receipt of an income-related benefit. In addition, we intend to disregard completely any regular charitable or voluntary payment which is intended and used for an item other than certain accommodation costs already met by benefit, food, ordinary clothing or footwear, and household fuel.

Regulations will be introduced shortly to give effect to both these proposals in income support and family credit from April 1990. Housing benefit and community charge benefit regulations will also provide for a £10 a week disregard from April 1990 and for a disregard of regular payments for certain items from October 1990.

These proposals will enable charities, voluntary bodies and relatives to give more help to people without affecting their benefits.

Community Charge

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people who are eligible for a rebate of the community charge will not receive the rebate because it falls under the minimum amount payable; and what is the total sum involved.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 24 January 1990]: The most recent estimates for Great Britain for 1990-91 suggest that 130,000 benefit units or 170,000 individuals will be eligible for community charge benefit but not receive benefit because it falls under the minimum amount payable. The sum involved is about £1·5 million. These figures compare with current estimates of an expected caseload in Great Britain of some 7·9 million benefit units and 9·75 million individuals, with a total cost to central Government, in terms of community charge benefit, of £1·75 billion.

EMPLOYMENT

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Lee: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what importance he attaches to the involvement of the tourism and hospitality industry in the development of the training and enterprise councils; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: It is very much in the interests of the tourism industry to become involved in the new training and enterprise councils so that the councils properly address the issues relevant to that industry. From 1 April regional tourist boards will be given much more Government money to help with this process; the North West tourist board, in particular, is already very active in this regard.

Employment Training

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the average weekly training allowance, including the training premium, for each ET trainee.

Mr. Nicholls: The average weekly training allowance including the training premium is estimated to be around £50 per trainee on employment training.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give for each region and for Great Britain as a whole the number of filled and contracted places in ET in the health and personal social services fields; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: Information about the number of filled and contracted places in employment training is not available broken down into health and personal social services or other occupational categories.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much has been paid by his Department in training bonuses to ET trainees since the start of the programme.

Mr. Nicholls: To the end of December 1989 the Training Agency had paid out £2·2 million in training bonuses.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much has been paid out through the underpinning arrangements to ET managers and agents; and how much has been paid to those organisations to cover redundancy payments, since the start of ET.

Mr. Nicholls: From September 1988 up to and including December 1989, some £1·19 million has been paid to employment training training agents and £31 million to employment training training managers under underpinning arrangements. In the same period £2·7 million has been paid to former community programme managing agents in redundancy payments, for employees in community programme schemes who transferred to employment training and were subsequently made redundant.

Factory Inspectorate

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many enforcement visits it is envisaged will be paid by the factory inspectorate in 1990 in order to enforce (i) the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1988, (ii) the Control of Noise at Work Regulations 1989 and (iii) the Electricity at Work Regulations 1989.

Mr. Nicholls: The 1990-91 plans provide for factory inspectors in the Health and Safety Executive's new field operations division to make some 159,000 preventive inspections, at all of which inspectors will consider compliance with the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1988, the Noise at Work Regulations 1989 and the Electricity at Work Regulations 1989 where these regulations apply, and take enforcement action where appropriate. Compliance with these regulations may also be considered at visits for other purposes, such as to investigate accidents, complaints and dangerous occurrences.

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many safety cases under regulation 7 of the 1984 CIMAH regulations are awaiting approval or examination by the Health and Safety Executive, by area office; when any backlogs are likely to be cleared; and if it is envisaged that any extra staff will be recruited in 1990-91 in this area of activity.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) assesses but does not approve safety reports submitted under regulation 7 of the 1984 Control of Industrial Major Accidents Hazards Regulations (CIMAH). Work has started on assessing all the reports which have been submitted but it is not possible to say when this process will be completed. Information about the current position concerning those reports where completion of the assessment is outstanding could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, the table shows the position in August 1989, the latest date for which information is available, and gives a breakdown by area office.

Total number of reports submitted = 331

Area office	Number of reports where assessment not completed
01 South	3
02 South West	—
03 South East	—
05 London North	2
06 London South	2
07 East Anglia	10
08 Northern Home Counties	—
09 East Midlands	4
10 West Midlands	3
11 Wales	21
12 Marches	1
13 North Midlands	6
14 South Yorkshire and Humberside	26
15 West and North Yorkshire	5
16 Greater Manchester	8
17 Merseyside	30
18 North West	5
19 North East	24
20 Scotland East	38
21 Scotland West	3
Total	191

A substantial number of reports was submitted to HSE just before the deadline of 8 July 1989 set by the 1984 regulations despite encouragement to industry to phase their submissions. This has led to a short-term peak in assessment work which was anticipated and is being met from existing resources.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will establish an external inquiry, by a firm of management consultants, into the Health and Safety Executive; and if he is at present satisfied with the current ratio of management to inspection staff.

Mr. Nicholls: No. Under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974, responsibility for ensuring the efficient organisation and management of the staff of the Health and Safety Executive lies with the Health and Safety Commission and HSE. My right hon. and learned Friend is satisfied that HSE has in place the systems and expertise needed for this purpose. A detailed account of organisational improvements, and other actions to increase efficiency and effectiveness, will be included in the HSC/E's annual report for 1988-89, to be published on 26 February.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will place in the Library (a) the report of the central policy review staff on the Health and Safety Executive and (b) the report on the recruitment and retention of specialists in the technology division of the Health and Safety Executive of September 1989.

Mr. Nicholls: The Government have no plans to publish the report of the review carried out by the central policy review staff in 1980 on the cost effectiveness of methods of implementing policy on health and safety at work. I have not received a copy of the report on the recruitment and retention of specialists in the technology division of the Health and Safety Executive. This was commissioned by the executive which I understand is currently considering its recommendations.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the current maximum exposure limits for (i) ceramic dust, (ii) cotton dust and (iii) dust and fumes in the rubber, steel and foundry work areas; and how many enforcement visits it is envisaged will be paid in 1990 by staff of the Health and Safety Executive.

Mr. Nicholls: There are no maximum exposure limits (MELs) for ceramic dust and cotton dust. The MELs for "rubber fume" and "rubber process dust" are 0·75 mg/m³ and 8 mg/m³ respectively for eight-hour time weighted average reference periods (eight-hour TWAs).

There are no MELs for general airborne emissions in steel and foundry work areas, although some specific processes may give rise to substances for which MELs have been set.

It is not possible to provide a breakdown of the number of visits that will be made during 1990 to each sector of industry.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the total budget of the Health and Safety Executive; and how many Health and Safety Executive employees possess formal purchasing qualifications.

Mr. Nicholls: Gross financial provision to the Health and Safety Executive for 1989-90 is £119 million; of this an estimated £35 million will be spent on the purchase of goods (capital and current), services and general contracts. The Health and Safety Executive's director of purchasing and supply, appointed in February 1989, is a member of the Institute of Purchasing and Supply.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of the chairmen and secretaries of the Health and Safety Commission's advisory committees have any formal professional qualifications in the industries or subjects with which they deal.

Mr. Nicholls: There are currently 18 commission advisory committee chairmen and 19 secretaries; 33 per cent. of all chairmen and 26 per cent. of all secretaries have formal professional qualifications in the industries or subjects with which they deal.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion, by area office, of factory inspectors, excluding principal inspectors, are trainees and if it is the policy of the Health and Safety Executive for trainee inspectors to make their trainee status known when visiting a factory.

Mr. Nicholls: Factory inspector IIs (for their first two years) are designated as trainee inspectors. The number of trainee inspectors, expressed as a percentage of the total number of factory inspectors (excluding principal inspectors), in each Health and Safety Executive area on 1 January 1990 is as follows:

Area	Trainees as percentage of total
South West	30·4
South	26·3
South East	12·1
London North	17·0
London South	18·2
East Anglia	18·7
North Home Counties	23·5
East Midlands	25·0
West Midlands	9·1
Wales	29·2
Marches	40·0
North Midlands	30·0
South Yorks and Humberside	26·1
West and North Yorks	17·4
Greater Manchester	25·0
Merseyside	19·0
North West	31·1
North East	27·9
Scotland East	31·1
Scotland West	22·9

Health and Safety Executive inspectors do not normally announce their status or rank during visits.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he is taking to raise substantially the bi-annual recruitment of trainee factory inspectors; and what is the current target for the total number of inspectors.

Mr. Nicholls: Measures taken by the Health and Safety Executive to increase recruitment of trainee factory inspectors include improvement of salaries for inspectors at the basic grade, more effective targeting and advertising of recruitment campaigns, and new procedures to reduce delays between interviews and offers of appointment. The HSE's target is to have 640 factory inspectors by 1 April 1990.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment why the Bootle health and safety office public inquiry point is open for telephone inquiries only between the hours of 10 am. and 3 pm; and if he has any proposals to extend these hours.

Mr. Nicholls: Restricted hours of opening of HSE's public inquiry points at Bootle, Sheffield and London are necessary to allow staff time to gather information and do research to answer inquiries satisfactorily. I understand that the executive has no proposals at present to extend opening hours beyond 10 am to 3 pm.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the current level of job vacancies in Rochdale borough.

Mr. Nicholls: In December 1989 the number of unfilled vacancies at jobcentres in the Rochdale local education authority (the closest approximation to the borough for this data source) was 641. Vacancies at jobcentres do not represent the total number of vacancies in the economy. The latest research shows that nationally only about one third of vacancies are registered at jobcentres.

Tourism

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he has received for the development of tourism in the north-west of England; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: Ministers from my Department have on a number of occasions met representatives from the tourism industry in the north-west, and have received correspondence on a wide range of issues affecting tourism in the area.

Mines (Accidents)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, further to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 721-22, if he will now publish the equivalent figures for 1988-89.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested will form part of the HSC/E annual report for 1988-89 to be published on 26 February.

Mine Closures

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the closure dates of Danygraid mine, Nant Medlyn mine, Darren mine (West Glamorgan), Hall of Auchinross mine (Ayrshire), Wrytree Drift mine and Robin Rock mine (Northumberland).

Mr. Nicholls: I will write to the hon. Member.

PRIME MINISTER

Privacy and Individual Choice

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Prime Minister what is the Government's policy on individual privacy and on individual choice as to who, or who may not, hold, use or disclose information that relates to that individual; and whether she will establish a Cabinet Committee to review legislation across the whole range of Government on these issues.

The Prime Minister: The Data Protection Act 1984, introduced by this Government, has greatly extended the safeguards relating to personal information held on computer; and privacy in the context of press activities is currently being examined by a committee under the chairmanship of Mr. David Calcutt QC. There are also sanctions against disclosure or misuse of information in particular circumstances, such as breach of confidence.

The Government subscribe to the conclusion of the Younger committee (1972) that a general right of privacy would be very difficult to define in law, given in particular the variety of situations to which it would have to apply and the inherent conflict with other principles such as freedom of expression. It keeps the issues under continual review, and believes that problems which arise are best considered in the context of particular aspects of people's lives.

General Sikorski

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Prime Minister what recent representations she has had in regard to reconsideration by the Government for the repatriation to Poland of the remains of General Sikorski; and what reply she is sending.

The Prime Minister: We periodically receive representations both for and against transfer of General Sikorski's remains to Poland. I told General Jaruzelski last June that we had reconsidered this question but felt the time was not yet right. We will continue to review our policy in the light of developments in Poland.

Rain Forests

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions she has had with the President of Mexico on rain forest problems.

The Prime Minister: The Mexican Government are well aware of our concern for rain forest conservation. Last year the Government, at Mexican request, financed a forestry expert to advise on reforestation in the state of Quintana Roo.

Parliamentary Answer (Cost)

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Prime Minister what was the cost of providing the answer to the hon. Member for Daventry (Mr. Boswell), Official Report, 18 January, columns 384-391.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 29 January 1990]: The reply was assembled from material provided by a wide range of Departments. The total cost of time of those who contributed, including secretarial staff, measured by salary, overheads and other costs, including printing, is estimated at £2,620.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Firearms

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers in the country carry firearms.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: In 1988—the latest year for which figures are available—7,194 police officers in England and Wales were qualified to carry firearms. Firearms were issued to police officers in 2,227 operations against criminals known or believed to be armed.

Gallows

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the reason for the keeping of gallows at Wandsworth prison; when these gallows were last used; how old are they; how often they are examined and tested and how this is done; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: Gallows are kept at Her Majesty's prison, Wandsworth, for use if required. These particular gallows were last used on 8 September 1961. No record has been kept of when they were constructed. They are examined and tested every six months. The testing is undertaken by checking the equipment to see that it is functioning correctly.

Secondary Immigration

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment has been made of the ratio of secondary immigration to primary immigration since 1960; what studies have been undertaken to assess the likely levels of secondary immigration in different circumstances and with what results; and what estimates he has made of the likely level of secondary immigration per 100,000 primary immigration from different sources.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I would refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Warrington, South (Mr. Butler) on 22 January at column 518.

Death Sentence

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the offences for which a person can be sentenced to death by courts in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The death penalty is still available for offences of treason, piracy with violence and certain treasonable and mutinous offences re-enacted under the Armed Forces Act 1971.

Management Consultants

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list any research reports or policy analyses received from outside management consultants after January 1985, but commissioned by his Department before that date, and the date of completion and cost of each contract.

Mr. Waddington: Information is not readily available before 1984. The Home Office awarded one contract in 1984 concerning research and policy analyses to Price Waterhouse for a review of marketing and sales effectiveness in the prison service industries and farms. The contract was completed in August 1985 at a cost of £16,100 (exclusive of VAT).

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the contracts his Department has given to outside management consultants in policy areas concerning his Department since January 1985, and the date of completion and cost of each contract.

Mr. Waddington: The Home Department has let the following contracts to management consultants in policy areas since January 1985:

Gwent Constabulary

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Gwent as to the whereabouts of the shotgun, the property of a Mr. G. W. Phillips, taken into the possession of the police by PC 853 Fairie of the Gwent constabulary on or before 10 November 1989.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the chief constable that the shotgun is being held at Newport police headquarters pending the outcome of further discussions with the owner.

Guildford and Woolwich Bombings

Mr. Couchman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements are being made to finance the cost of Sir John May's inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the convictions arising out of the bomb attacks in Guildford and Woolwich in 1974.

Mr. Waddington: Parliamentary approval to expenditure on this inquiry will be sought in a Supplementary Estimate for the Home Office Vote for administration etc. (class XI, vote 3). Pending that approval, expenditure estimated at £222,000 will be met by a repayable advance from the Contingencies Fund.

Immigration and Nationality Department

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether a decision has been reached on the relocation of the immigration and nationality department from Croydon.

Mr. Waddington: We have decided that those parts of IND which are at present located in Lunar house, Croydon, should for the most part remain there. This decision has been taken in the light of a report by consultants on the feasibility and desirability of the relocation of IND and further work on costings and benefits. That further work has revealed that most of the financial and other benefits of relocation were taken when IND moved to Croydon in the first place.

We have however decided that the nationality work of the Department can with advantage be brought together in the existing Liverpool nationality office which would otherwise not be needed beyond April 1991. In reaching this decision we have taken account of the likely reduction in the future volume of nationality work. We should complete the process of transferring the nationality work to Liverpool during 1991.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Creches

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether creche facilities are provided for working mothers employed in his Department; in what locations; and if they have to make a contribution to this service.

Mr. Ryder: No nursery facilities are yet available to staff in the Treasury, but London-based staff have access to a holiday play scheme financed by both parental and departmental contributions.

Drug Seizures

Mr. Butler: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many illicit drug seizures, broken down by drug category, have been made in United Kingdom ports in each of the last five years.

Mr. Ryder: Seizures made by Customs officers at United Kingdom ports and airports in the last five years have been as follows:

	Heroin	Cocaine	Cannabis	Amphetamine	Other
1987	193	174	4,609	62	306
1988	279	221	4,934	74	177

[1] All 1989 figures are provisional.

The total numbers of drugs seizures made by Customs officers in 1985 and 1986 were 3,910 and 5,534 respectively, but a breakdown by drug category for these figures is not available.

European Bank for Reconstruction and Development

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has hitherto put forward for the United Kingdom's contribution to the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development; and what proportion of the United Kingdom's contribution he intends should come (a) from the existing budget for overseas aid and development and (b) from new allocations of resources.

Mr. Ryder: The details of the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development are still being discussed. The United Kingdom will be a generous and enthusiastic contributor. How the contribution is met will be decided in future public expenditure surveys.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish his best estimates of the effects on the retail prices index in 1990-91 of (a) the introduction of the community charge and (b) the combined impact of non-domestic property revaluation and the introduction of the uniform business rate.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 30 January 1990]: The Autumn Statement forecast is for RPI annual inflation to fall to 5¾ per cent. by the fourth quarter of 1990. It is not the practice to provide more detail than published in table 2.7 of the Autumn Statement.

DEFENCE

Number Plates

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of whether the use of United Kingdom number plates on cars owned by British personnel serving in West Germany represents the best available security arrangement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not the practice to comment on security matters. However, all security measures, including the question of number plates, are kept under close and continuous review.

Radar System, Fylingdales

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the purpose of the large phased-array radar system being installed at Fylingdales RAF station; when installation work started; what is the total cost of the installation; whether the United States of America is making any financial contribution to this installation; whether the phased-array radar is to become part of a battle management system linked to the SDI programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answers my hon. Friend the Member for Romford (Mr. Neubert) gave the hon. Member for Denton and Reddish (Mr. Bennett) on 20 June 1989 at column 71. Installation work for the modernised facility started in August 1989, and at present exchange rates is expected to cost in the order of £160 million, of which the United States will pay in the order of 70 per cent. for the radar, and the United Kingdom approximately 30 per cent. for the supporting infrastructure. The modernised radar will provide an improved early warning system. It will not form part of a battle management system linked to the SDI programme.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will outline the procedures for the sale and disposal of surplus chemical type waste of the kind found stored on the Cleveland industrial estate, Darlington on Saturday 20 January.

Mr. Alan Clark: The material referred to comprised paints, pre-treatment solvents and adhesives. These had been purchased by a general trader from auctions held by the Ministry of Defence, which is the method by which low-value materials of this sort are disposed of. Hazardous and dangerous materials are dealt with under special disposal contracts placed by the Ministry.

Creches

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list by location where creche facilities are provided for working mothers employed in his Department; and if they have to make any payment for this service.

Mr. Neubert: We are planning to open nurseries for the children of MOD civil servants in central London and at the Royal Aerospace Establishment Farnborough. We are also considering what might be done at other locations. The level of charges to parents has yet to be determined.

Trident

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his latest estimate of the cost of the Trident programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tom King: I am pleased to announce that for the fourth year running there has been, in real terms, a reduction in the estimated cost of the Trident programme. The revised estimate now stands at £9,380 million, based on the exchange rate used for the long-term costing of the defence programme, which this year is taken to be £1 = $1·62.

Although this estimate represents a cash increase of £291 million compared with the estimate announced in 1989, after allowing for the effects of inflation and exchange rate variations, there has been a real reduction of £432 million compared with that estimate, and a real reduction of £1,631 million over the original 1982 estimate. This is additional to the savings resulting from the decision to have United Kingdom missiles processed in the United States facility at Kings bay, Georgia.

The proportion of the programme to be undertaken in the United Kingdom has risen to its highest level so far —69 per cent.

The Select Committee on Defence previously asked that when announcing the annual revised estimate, I should report on the state of the project as a whole. I am pleased to say that the Trident project remains on programme to enter service in the mid-1990s. There has been no slippage in the in-service date since the decision to purchase Trident II was announced in March 1982. I am, as in the past, sending to the Chairmen of the Select Committee on Defence and the Public Accounts Committee a more detailed report covering the points on which the Select Committee on Defence sought advice. I am also placing a copy of this report in the Library of the House.

CIVIL SERVICE

Reconstruction Competitions

Mr. Stanbrook: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if he will give the precise date or dates of the last reconstruction competition or competitions held for administrative and professional officers for the Home Civil Service, and the dates of the last appointments resulting from these competitions.

Mr. Luce: I regret that the information requested is not available and cannot be obtained except at disproportionate cost. The 88th annual report of the Civil Service Commissioners mentioned that "one or two" reconstruction" competitions for technical grades were in progress due in 1953-54, but I am advised that the Civil Service Commission has no information subsequently.

THE ARTS

Creches

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will list by location where creche facilities are provided for working mothers employed in his Department; and if they have to make any payment for this service.

Mr. Luce My Department does not yet provide facilities for the use of its staff, but they have access to a local holiday play scheme financed by parental and departmental contributions.

SCOTLAND

National Health Service

16. Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next expects to meet Health Service unions in Scotland to discuss Health Service matters.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There are no plans at present.

54. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of the increase in National Health Service expenditure in Scotland since 1979.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Gross expenditure on the Health Service in Scotland has risen by an estimated 31 per cent. in real terms between 1979-80 and 1989-90.

51. Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was National Health Service expenditure in Scotland for 1979 and 1990; and what increase or decrease this represents over and above inflation.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Gross expenditure on the Health Service in Scotland was £1,064 million in 1979-80, and is planned to rise to £3,041 million in 1990-91. This represents an increase of about 35 per cent. in real terms.

44. Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current Health Service expenditure in Scotland; and what increase this is in real terms over 1979 expenditure.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Gross expenditure on the Health Service in Scotland in 1989-90 is estimated to be £2,816 million, representing an increase of about 31 per cent. in real terms since 1979-80.

33. Mr. Eadie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to meet the Scottish Trades Union Congress to discuss the National Health Service.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None.

23. Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met trade unions from the National Health Service; and what was discussed.

47. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met trade unions from the National Health Service; and what was discussed.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend met the British Medical Association last month to discuss the new contract for general practitioners.

Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of the current Health Service expenditure programme in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Expenditure on the NHS in Scotland will exceed £3 billion for the first time in the coming year; almost three times the budget we inherited on taking office.

Devolution

17. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has had from the business community in Scotland on devolution.

Mr. Lang: The senior management of many important companies in Scotland have repeatedly expressed their concern about the adverse effects which any form of devolution would have on the Scottish economy.

Rail Electrification

18. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last discussed the electrification of the Edinburgh-Linlithgow, Falkirk High-Glasgow and Edinburgh-Aberdeen lines with ScotRail.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Decisions on electrification schems are for British Rail working within guidelines set by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport.

Self-governing Hospitals

19. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many hospitals have expressed an interest in the self-governing hospital proposals.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: We have had serious expressions of interest from Forfar and the Royal Scottish National hospital at Larbert whilst a number of others are seeking further information.

Craig Dunain Hospital

20. Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the future of Craig Dunain hospital, Inverness.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No. Action is presently with the Highland health board.

ScotRail

21. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the general manager of ScotRail; and what matters were discussed.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend and I discussed various topics relating to rail transport when we met the general manager of ScotRail in the company of the chairman of British Rail, Sir Robert Reid, on 31 October 1989.

63. Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next expects to meet the general manager of ScotRail; and what will be discussed.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend and I have met the general manager of ScotRail from time to time and we expect to continue this practice with Mr. Bleasdale, the new director. Discussions at such meetings normally cover a wide range of topics.

Forestry Commission

22. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what planting incentives are currently offered by the Forestry Commission.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Forestry Commission currently offers the following planting grants, payable in instalments over 10 years, for both new planting and restocking, including natural regeneration, under its woodland grant scheme.

Rate of Grant (£ per hectare)

Area (hectares)	Conifers	Broadleaves (including Native Pinewoods)
0·25-0·9	1,005	1,575
1·0-2·9	880	1,375
3·0-9·9	795	1,175
10 and over	615	975

A better land supplement of £200 per hectare is payable where planting under the woodland grant scheme takes place on arable land or improved grassland (as defined for the farm woodland scheme). In addition, the following grants are offered by the Forestry Commission under its woodland grant scheme for new planting in association with the farm woodland scheme.

Rate of Grant (£ per hectare)

Area (hectares)	Conifers	Broadleaves
1·0-2·9	505	1,375
3·0-9·9	420	1,175
10 and over	240	975

The better land supplement is not available for planting under the farm woodland scheme through which annual payments are made by the agriculture Departments.

61. Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the Forestry Commission's proposals for farm tree planting grants.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Grants for planting trees on farms are available under the Forestry Commission's woodland grant scheme, including grants for planting done in association with the farm woodland scheme. Full details of both schemes are given in the explanatory booklets which are in the Library.

Kelvin Central Bus Company

24. Dr. Bray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will make a grant to employees on the same terms as to management to assist in the preparation of an employee bid for the Kelvin Central bus company.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply to the hon. Member for East Kilbride (Mr. Ingram) on 22 January at column 545.

National Health Service (Waiting Times)

25. Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the average waiting time for patients in the Scottish Health Service in 1979; and what it is now.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Average waiting times for non-urgent patients have fallen by 10 per cent. since 1979; around half of all patients admitted to hospital are admitted immediately.

Competitive Tendering

26. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has had regarding competitive tendering in the National Health Service in Scotland.

37. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received regarding competitive tendering in the National Health Service in Scotland.

45. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received regarding competitive tendering in the National Health Service in Scotland.

46. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has had regarding competitive tendering in the National Health Service in Scotland.

55. Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received regarding competitive tendering in the National Health Service in Scotland.

56. Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received regarding competitive tendering in the National Health Service in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer to the answer given earlier today to the hon. Member for Cumbernauld and Kilsyth (Mr. Hogg).

Operations (Commercial Sponsorship)

27. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if there are any plans for health boards in Scotland other than Lothian to seek commercial sponsorship for operations.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There are no plans for commercial sponsorship for operations.

Scottish Economy

28. Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the Scottish Council for Development and Industry to discuss the Scottish economy.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend met representatives of the Scottish Council for Development and Industry when he addressed the council's international forum at Aviemore on 29 September 1989.

43. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the rate of economic growth for Scotland for the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Lang: Using United Kingdom price deflators, the latest income-based estimate of Scotland's gross domestic product shows that in 1988 the Scottish economy grew by some 4·7 per cent.

Transport Links (Europe)

29. Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to improve Scotland's road, rail and air links with Europe prior to 1992.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Current plans for the Scottish motorway network, linked to the proposed widening of the M6, M1 and M25, will substantially improve access to Europe. The Scottish Development Department is undertaking a review to ensure that the strategic Scottish trunk and key principal road network can meet demands. We are encouraging potential Scottish rail customers to make their requirements for services to the Channel tunnel known to British Rail. The Government's policy of liberalising air services will assist operators to provide improved services where demand exists.

Regional and District Councils (Elections)

30. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will instruct a study to be carried out of the number and characteristics such as age, sex and occupation of persons seeking election to regional and district councils in 1990 and 1992, respectively.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to do so at present. We do, however, have it in mind to update in due course the substantial programme of research commissioned by the Widdicombe committee of inquiry into the conduct of local authority business in 1985 and published in four volumes in 1986. Volume II contained a wide range of information on the personal and occupational characteristics of local government councillors.

Natural Heritage Agency

31. Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the latest progress towards the establishment in Scotland of a unified and autonomous natural heritage agency.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend announced his intention to appoint Magnus Magnusson KBE as chairman of the Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland, and thereafter as first chairman of the proposed Scottish natural heritage agency, provided the Government's proposals to reorganise the Nature Conservancy Council receive parliamentary approval. These proposals are provided for in the Environmental Protection Bill now before Parliament.

Health Boards (Expenditure)

32. Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the actions which some health boards are taking to curtail their level of provision in order to remain within budget in the current year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: All health boards are given an allocation of resources for capital and current expenditure before the start of each financial year. Boards plan their services accordingly.

Motorways

34. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many miles of dual carriageway he plans to upgrade to motorway standard in 1990.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No new section of road upgraded to motorway is programmed to be opened during 1990. However, the 4·5 mile M80 Stepps bypass, which will relieve the existing heavily congested road at Stepps, is currently under construction and is expected to be open in April 1992. Further motorway schemes, including upgrading from dual carriageway, are expected to commence during 1990-91 and details will be announced in March by my right hon. and learned Friend.

Sewage Disposal

35. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to meet Scottish regional councils to discuss the matter of sewage disposal.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No. The Government are aware of developments in this field and my officials have regular meetings with regional and islands council staff at which sewage disposal matters are discussed. My right hon. and learned Friend holds regular meetings with the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities on local government finance matters.

Local Government Expenditure

36. Mr. Younger: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a list of those local authorities in Scotland which are planning to increase their expenditure above the rate of inflation.

Mr. Rifkind: Once details of local authorities' budgets for 1990-91 are available to my Department, I will make a statement.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has issued or proposes to issue any regulations or guidance under section 16(1) of the Abolition of Domestic Rates Etc. (Scotland) Act 1987.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Regulation 9 of the Community Charges (Registration) (Scotland) (No. 2) Regulations makes provision relating to community charge appeals made under section 16(1) of the 1987 Act. The notes prescribed under these regulations informing people of their register entry or an amendment to that entry include information about a person's rights of appeal.

57. Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many warrant sales have been carried out as a result of poll tax non-payment in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not held centrally.

52. Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make an estimate of the amount which a police officer in Scotland will on average have to pay in respect of the personal community charge following abolition of the rates element of the police rent allowance on 31 March.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Like other members of the community, police officers in Scotland have been liable to pay the community charge since April 1989. The level of the charge depends on the area in which they live.

Regulations made last November had the effect of restoring the rates element of rent allowance, on an interim basis, to those officers who were in receipt of rent allowance on 31 March 1989 for such period as their circumstances remain unchanged. Draft regulations now sent to the police negotiating board provide for the sum payable by way of rates on 31 March 1989 to continue to be included in the calculation of an officer's rent allowance and in any transitional rent allowance payable from 1 April 1990.

42. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his Department's latest estimate of the additional resources required to cover the administrative costs of poll tax collection in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Based on the latest local authority figures available, the increase in the administrative costs of collecting the community charge in 1989-90, as against rates collection in 1988-89, is estimated at £14·5 million.

Northern Ireland

38. Mr. Gow: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next intends to visit Northern Ireland.

Mr. Rifkind: I have no immediate plans to do so.

Fishing Industry

39. Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received on the crisis in the Scottish fishing industry.

Mr. Lang: Since the hon. Member last inquired about this on 20 December 1989 the Government have received a variety of representations from organisations representing different sectors of the fishing industry, from MPs and MEPs and from local authorities and other bodies. Many of these expressed appreciation of the success achieved by the Government at the Council of Fisheries Ministers on 18 and 19 December 1989.

Violent Prisoners

40. Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to be able to publish the conclusions of the consultative document "Assessment and Control: the Management of Violent and Disruptive Prisoners".

Lord James Douglas Hamilton: We have received a wide range of comments on the consultative document which aroused considerable interest. My right hon. and learned Friend and I are still considering the responses, but we expect to reach our conclusions within the next few weeks.

Lothian Health Board

48. Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the finances of Lothian health board.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No.

Students (Housing Benefit)

49. Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to provide suitable low-cost accommodation for those students displaced by the loss of housing benefit from September.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Government's housing policies for both the public and the private sector will help to ensure an adequate supply of low-cost accommodation. The proposed top-up loans for student support will be at a level well in excess of a student's average likely entitlement to benefits.

Central European Time

49. Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his Department's policy towards the imposition of central European time in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas Hamilton: The introduction of central European time throughout the United Kingdom is one of the options set out in the Green Paper "Summer Time—A Consultation Document" published last June. A decision on future summer time arrangements will not be taken until the responses, including those from Scotland, have been fully considered.

Knitwear and Textile Industry

50. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received on the state of the knitwear and textile industry in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: During the past six months my right hon. and learned Friend has received representations from Berwickshire district council, Ettrick and Lauderdale district council, and the Scottish Trades Union Congress. These representations expressed concern about the current state and future prospects of the knitwear and textile industry and suggested that renewal of the multi-fibre arrangement is essential to the future well-being of the industry. In addition, my right hon. and learned Friend received representations from two members of the public about the knitwear industry in the Hawick area, one of which stressed the importance of the multi-fibre arrangement.

Farm Incomes

53. Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussion he has had with the National Farmers Union of Scotland about the level of farm incomes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: My noble Friend the Minister of State met the president and senior officials of the National Farmers Union of Scotland on 15 January for a discussion on a range of issues, including the EC price-fixing proposals, which have a significant bearing on farmers' incomes. The union represented that a substantially greater green pound devaluation than was proposed by the EC Commission was justified. My noble Friend reaffirmed the Government's commitment to the removal of monetary compensatory amounts by 1992 and assured the representatives of the union that the need for our farmers to be able to compete on fair terms in the Community would be borne in mind in the negotiations in Brussels. My noble Friend and colleagues from other Departments yesterday met the United Kingdom farming unions to discuss further the price-fixing proposals.

Local Enterprise Companies

58. Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with people interested in forming a local enterprise company for Renfrewshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Neither I nor my right hon. and learned Friend have personally had discussions with people interested in forming a local enterprise company for Renfrewshire, but officials from my Department and from the Training Agency and the SDA have been working closely with the steering group led by Mr. John McClelland, director IBM, Greenock, which has now submitted an application for development funding for a local enterprise company for Renfrewshire.

Maternity Facilities (Glasgow)

59. Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to improve maternity facilities in the east end of Glasgow.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Greater Glasgow health board is presently consulting on its proposals to improve maternity services in its area.

National Museums of Scotland

60. Mr. Buchan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the chairman of the board of trustees of the national museums of Scotland.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend last met the chairman of the board of trustees of the national museums of Scotland on 30 November 1989.

Elderly People (Glasgow)

62. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what requests he has received from Greater Glasgow health board for additional revenue or capital allocations to meet the costs of dealing with the care of the growing elderly section of the population.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Requests for allocations of capital are contained within the health board's capital plan submitted yearly to the Department. No requests for additional revenue resources have been received.

Ravenscraig

64. Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what investment there has been in Ravenscraig steel plant in each of the past five years.

Mr. Lang: Significant investment approved for Ravenscraig plant prior to privatisation of the British Steel Corporation was as follows:

1985—nil
1986—£17 million
1987—nil
1988—nil

Since privatisation, investment decisions have been a matter for British Steel.

North East River Purification Board

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will make a statement on the current situation in the North East river purification board and the situation regarding the cancelled appointment to the post of general manager;

(2) if he will make a statement regarding the current duties and structure of the North East river purification board; and if there have been any changes in these duties and the structure of the board.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: River purification boards have powers under statute to appoint such officers as they think necessary for the proper discharge of their functions. This is not a matter for which the Secretary of State is reponsible. Any queries about the staffing of a river purification board or the duties of its officers should be addressed to the board.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the rivers the North East river purification board is responsible for; and which are used as part of the Grampian water supply.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The boundary of the North East river purification board defines the catchments draining to the coast between Hopeman and Milton Ness. These cover the Rivers Lossie, Spey, Deveron, Ugie, Ythan, Dee, Don and Bervie, together with their tributaries and the coastal streams encompassed by the boundary. Except for the Rivers Ythan and Bervie, all these rivers, or tributaries of them, are used as sources of public water supply by Grampian regional council.

Manufacturing Investment

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the latest figures for levels of manufacturing investment in Scotland in (a) cash and (b) constant prices; and what are the annual figures for each of the previous 10 years.

Mr. Rifkind: The table gives estimates of gross domestic fixed capital formation by manufacturing industry in Scotland at current prices for each year from 1977 to 1987, the latest year for which estimates are available. There are no separate price deflators for Scotland and the use of United Kingdom deflators does not give sufficiently reliable constant price estimates.

Gross domestic fixed capital formation by manufacturing industry in Scotland

1977	491
1978	523
1979	561
1980	645
1981	586
1982	541
1983	470
1984	597
1985	861
1986	788
1987	738

Trunk Road Improvements

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which trunk road improvement schemes in Scotland are expected to start in the financial year 1990-91.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend expects to make an announcement to the House, as is his usual custom, in March.

Timothy Williams

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the Lord Advocate will order a fatal accident inquiry into the death of Timothy Williams, radio operator on the Ocean Odyssey drilling rig.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate hopes to make an announcement shortly about this matter.

Piper Alpha

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what surveys have been undertaken by the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland in respect of pollution following the Piper Alpha tragedy; and what were the results.

Mr. Lang: I refer to the reply given to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman) on 25 January 1990. The results of initial monitoring work by DAFS scientists were published on 6 June 1989 and copies of the reports were placed in the Library.

Nature Conservancy Council

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received recently about the proposed Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Since the publication of our proposals to reorganise the Nature Conservancy Council in the Environmental Protection Bill, my right hon. and learned Friend has received a number of representations covering a variety of views.

ENVIRONMENT

Rating Revaluation

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the average revaluation factors by property type for the top 20 and the lowest 20 rating authorities in England and Wales; if he will list the national average by property type; and if he will place the complete list in the Library.

Mr. Chope: I have today placed in the Library a table showing revaluation factors by property type in English local authority areas and nationally. The figures are based on the 1990 rateable values for properties as shown on the rating lists deposited with local authorities on 20 December. The new rateable values are based on market rents in each area in April 1988, the date by reference to which the valuation has been carried out under the Local Government Finance Act 1988.

The 20 authorities with the highest average revaluation factors are

Control of Pollution

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what provisions to make regulations under the Control of Pollution Act have still not been used.

Mr. Trippier: Sections 6, 11, 18, 23, 29, 45, 68, 93, 94, 102 and 103.

Humberside

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the total cost of (a) splitting county Humberside into two new counties and (b) merging the south bank into Lincolnshire and the north bank into North Yorkshire and what central Government financing is available for such changes.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My Department has made no such estimates: it is one of the matters that we expect to be covered in the report on the further review of the county of Humberside which the Local Government Boundary Commission is now undertaking. Apart from grant for specific services, central Government support to local government is concentrated in the revenue support grant, which is distributed on the basis of assessed needs which contain no specific provision for the costs of administrative reorganisation.

Creches

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by location where creche facilities are provided for working mothers employed by his Department; and if they have to make any payment for this service.

Mr. Chris Patten: My Department is undertaking a feasibility study of the provision of a nursery in Westminster and is also looking for opportunities to co-operate with other employers to provide nurseries in areas of the south-east from which staff commute into central London and at locations in the regions where the Department has offices.

Ordnance Survey Maps

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the percentage increase, in real terms, in the retail price of the Ordnance Survey map sheets for a comparable area on the scale of 1:1,250 from 1979 to 1989; what is the current cost of maps for the parliamentary division of Finchley; and what is his policy for the pricing of this map series.

Mr. Trippier: The retail price of Ordnance Survey 1:1,250 quality paper maps has increased by 83 per cent. in real terms over the 10-year period between 1979 and 1989. The main use of these maps is by local authorities, land developers and utilities.

The current cost of these maps to cover the parliamentary division of Finchley is £1,197.

These maps form part of Ordnance Survey's core activities and are priced to help achieve the cost recovery target set by the Secretary of State.

Nitrates

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the areas in which drinking water is contaminated with nitrates in excess of European Community limits; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Copies of the undertakings accepted by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State from the water service companies under section 20 of the Water Act 1989 are available in the Library, including the undertakings in respect of those areas where there is a breach of the standard for nitrate, or where there has been a past breach which is likely to recur.

As soon as my right hon. Friend has accepted undertakings from all the statutory water companies, which he is in the process of doing, copies of these will also be placed in the Library.

Nature Conservancy

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what organisations were consulted prior to his Department's announcing the changes to the Nature Conservancy Council and the Countryside Commission.

Mr. Trippier: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) —Official Report 4 December 1989, column 39. The necessary legislation was put before the House on 20 December, and received a Second Reading on 15 January.

Hazardous Substances (Conference)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department was represented at the conference on the control of substances hazardous to health organised by Thames Events, held on 10 and 11 January.

Mr. Trippier: No.

Rates

Mr. Richard Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if, further to table 4, "Changes in Rates Bills by Property Type", England and Wales, deposited paper NS5522, he will provide the changes in rates bills by property type for each economic area in England and Wales, both in percentage terms and money terms.

Mr. Chope: The information for which my hon. Friend asks is given in table 6 of the paper to which he refers.

HAT (Sunderland)

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress he is making towards the establishment of a housing action trust for Sunderland.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Following consultations with the tenants and after discussions with Sunderland borough council, my right hon. Friend has decided to proceed to a ballot of the tenants on the proposals to set up a housing action trust for the Downhill, Town End Farm, Hylton Castle and part of Red House estates in Sunderland. The ballot, which will be a postal ballot conducted by the Electoral Reform Society, will take place between 12 March and 4 April. The Electoral Reform Society will be writing shortly to the tenants of these estates, setting out the arrangements for the ballot.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Know-how Funds

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's Government have any plans to alter the timing or application of the know-how fund to eastern European states.

Mr. Waldegrave: The know-how fund for Poland is already in operation. That for Hungary starts in April. The fund will be extended to other east European countries once they are fully committed to reform. The principal aim of the fund will be the same in all cases: to provide advice and training to help with the transition to democracy and a market economy.

Rain Forests

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his assessment of the extent to which the Brazilian Government are providing the resources and manpower needed to protect the rain forests and their inhabitants.

Mr. Maude: The Brazilian Government have made considerable efforts to protect the rain forest and its inhabitants. The hon. Member will be aware of the creation of IBAMA—the environmental umbrella organisation—in 1988, which has levied heavy fines on a number of enterprises convicted of polluting the rainforest. He will also be aware of the decision on 24 January to relocate gold prospectors outside the Yanomami area.

In July 1989, the then Minister for Overseas Development signed a memorandum of understanding with the Brazilian authorities, under which a number of environmental co-operation projects are being agreed. We hope thereby to contribute to a solution of these problems.

South Africa

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Central (Mr. Caborn), Official Report, 16 January, columns 167-8, how many representations he has received concerning the Upington 14 in South Africa; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have received approximately 500 representations about the Upington 14. The 14 have been granted leave to appeal by the South African Appeal Court. While legal processes continue, it would be wrong for the Government to intervene.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has made any representations to the South African Government concerning the treatment of their political prisoners; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are concerned at the plight of political prisoners in South Africa. We have called repeatedly on the South African Government to release all political prisoners.

Creches

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list by location where creche facilities are provided for working mothers employed in his Department; and if they have to make any payment for this service.

Mr. Maude: There is no creche facility in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Cambodia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will be issuing a statement on the outcome of the Paris meeting on Cambodia on 15 and 16 January; and when the report of the British mission to Cambodia in 1989 will be published.

Mr. Waldegrave: The informal discussions in Paris on 15-16 January were between the Asia directors of the five permanent members of the UN Security Council. They agreed a set of principles to guide them in working for a resolution of the Cambodia problem, including an enhanced role for the United Nations. This has been made public, and I am arranging for a copy to be placed in the Library of the House.

There are no plans to publish a written report on the visit to Cambodia by two British officials in December. The Overseas Development Administration briefed leading NGOs on 5 January, and will make available information of specific programme/project opportunities.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whom the Minister of State is meeting during his visit to the refugee camps on the Thai-Cambodian border; which camps he is visiting; whether he is meeting representatives of British non-governmental organisations in private; and if he will be making a statement on this visit.

Mr. Waldegrave: During his visit to Thailand, my noble Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs visited site 2, near Aranyaprathet, on 20 January. He was briefed by the displaced persons protection unit and the United Nations Border Relief Operation, toured the encampment and handed over a donation of British humanitarian assistance. He visited projects run by Christian Outreach and Concern, and met representatives of the International Committee of the Red Cross. In the evening, he gave a private dinner for representatives of British NGOs and the British staff of other organisations.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his Department's assessment as to the implications for the chemical weapon convention talks of the United States' policy to continue production of binary chemical weapons after a chemical weapon convention has been signed.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are aware of the press speculation last year about United States policy. However, the United States has made no proposal to amend the provision in the draft chemical weapons convention under negotiation in Geneva that would prohibit the production of chemical weapons immediately upon the convention's entry into force.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Business Innovation Grant

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will estimate the amount of expenditure on the business innovation grant scheme to be paid out in each of the standard English regions and Wales for each year 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92;

(2) if he will estimate the amount of expenditure on the business investment grant to be paid out in each of the standard English regions and Wales for each year 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92;

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The estimated expenditure for the two elements of the regional enterprise grant scheme for 1989-90 are £4·78 million for investment grants and £2·25 million for innovation grants for England as a whole. Information about planned expenditure on regional assistance in 1990-91 and 1991-92 was published in the public expenditure White Paper on 30 January.

Current year figures and estimates for future expenditure in England are not broken down by regions. Questions about the operation of regional enterprise grants in Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he was consulted by Sir Leon Brittan about the proposal to launch a European Commission inquiry into price fixing, monopoly practices, market shares and fee levels of the quality of audits into the accountancy profession.

Mr. Redwood: No. I understand that the Commission is asking outside consultants to conduct a study into the general implications for competition of the increasing concentration of the major accountancy firms. This is not a formal investigation under the competition rules of the EC treaty.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will be providing evidence for or contributing to the inquiry by the European Community Commission into price fixing and monopoly abuse in the accountancy profession; and whether he has any proposals for a similar inquiry in Britain.

Mr. Redwood: The United Kingdom authorities will of course give any assistance they can to those conducting the study. Neither I nor the Director General of Fair Trading have proposals for a similar inquiry in Britain.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what new rules he proposes to deal with the concentration of audit business and the attendant inside information about mergers in a few large firms.

Mr. Redwood: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has available to him the merger control provisions of the Fair Trading Act 1973 to scrutinise mergers of major economic significance between accountancy firms. Auditors have a professional duty of confidence. If the hon. Member has any evidence of a breach of that confidence he should draw it to the attention of the relevant professional body; but if he has reason to believe that there might have been an insider dealing offence he should provide my Department with full details.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what powers he has to vet or investigate mergers of accountancy firms to prevent the concentration of power in a few firms in this area; and how many mergers or takeovers in this field he has referred to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Mr. Redwood: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has the normal merger control powers available to him under the provisions of the Fair Trading Act 1973. In accordance with the advice of the Director General of Fair Trading, he has not so far decided to refer any mergers between accountancy firms to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Cambodia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on Cambodia and export credit guarantees; and if he will list all instances in the last 10 years in which export credit guarantees have been granted for trade with Cambodia.

Mr. Redwood: Since June 1975, ECGD cover for exports to Cambodia has been limited to business on maximum terms of 180 days where payment is secured by means of an irrevocable letter of credit confirmed, before shipment, by a bank in the United Kingdom.

On this basis, business insured in each of the past 10 years, with the exception of 1983, was less than £1,000. In 1983, exports totalling £200,000 were covered.

No relaxation of ECGD's terms of cover is envisaged in the foreseeable future.

Insider Dealing

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has any plans to develop new proposals for dealing with insider trading; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The Government will continue to pursue all insider dealing cases where prosecution is justified under the code of conduct for Crown prosecutors. Convictions have been obtained in 10 out of 19 cases brought under the legislation. Inspections are being carried out in a further 16 potential cases.

In the latest two cases the outcome turned on factors which have nothing to do with the law on insider dealing, namely the law on public interest immunity, and procedural matters relating to the conduct of criminal trials.

As I told the House on 8 December (OR column 407) the Government that day published a consultative document on proposals for changes to the insider dealing law, and a copy is in the Library. The proposals reflect the requirements of the EEC insider dealing directive and experience of the present law. The Government will consider carefully any constructive proposals that may emerge from the consultation.

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many cases of insider dealing have been brought since the introduction of the legislation; how many cases are outstanding; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Insider dealing became a criminal offence since July 1980. Since then there have been 19 prosecutions for insider dealing offences, involving 26 defendants. Ten cases produced convictions. At present there are three cases where prosecutions have begun but not concluded. The Government will continue to pursue all insider dealing cases where prosecution is justified under the code of conduct for Crown prosecutors.

Barlow Clowes

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether all investors in Barlow Clowes should now have received the offer letter promised in his statement to the House on 19 December; and by what date his Department requires their response.

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 30 January to my hon. Friend the Member for Bournemouth, East (Mr. Atkinson).

Single Market

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the nature of the help provided by his Department to the organisation of conferences and seminars on the 1992 proposals; and if he will make a statement on the organisation of 1992 clubs.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 30 January]: Since the launch of its campaign "Europe Open for Business", the Department has provided speakers (both Ministers and officials) at 1,445 single market conferences and seminars. Organisers of these events can obtain, free of charge, copies of our wide range of single market literature for distribution to delegates plus free publicity for the events in the campaign's quarterly newsletter "Single Market News" (distributed to over 200,000 organisations). A range of videos produced by the Department, suitable for showing at single market events, can also be bought or hired. In 1988, the Department itself organised 20 regional breakfast conferences and more recently ran a major conference on "Europe Open for Professions" in London.

The Department has no role in the organisation of 1992 clubs though officials have spoken at events put on by individual clubs. I understand that the 1992 club national co-ordinator is Mr. Edward McMillan-Scott MEP.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish a list of the various publications and briefing notes which his Department makes available on the 1992 proposals.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 30 January]: A list of all the single market publications and video material provided under my Department's "Europe Open for Business" campaign is included in our single market information pack. A copy of the information pack has been placed in the Library. Further copies can be obtained through our 1992 hotline 01-200 1992.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the measures so far adopted by the Council of Ministers on 1992 which will assist the development of industry and commerce in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 30 January]: Progress continues to be made on the single market programme. One hundred and sixty-four out of the 279 measures in the Commission's white paper, "Completing the Internal Market", have now reached a common position in the Council of Ministers, or been agreed in principle. This means that almost 60 per cent. of the single market programme is now complete.

For information in greater detail, I have placed in the Library of the House a summary table setting out for the measures in the Commission's white paper those which have been adopted by the Council of Ministers, those which have been proposed by the Commission and those which are projected. Clearly not all these measures are of equal importance, but taken as a whole programme, the Government believe they represent good progress, and will bring benefits to industry and commerce in the United Kingdom, especially where they succeed in opening continental markets to British businesses.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Postgraduate Degrees

Dr. Hampson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many postgraduate degrees, and in what subjects, were awarded in the last year for which figures are available; and what were the comparable numbers in 1979.

Mr. Jackson: Information is given in the table. A new classification was introduced in 1985-86 for the recording of university students' subject of study. For broad comparison purposes additional information has been given for the last year of the previous subject classification (1984) and the first year of the new classification (1985).

Examination Boards

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) for how long the examination board is required to keep papers in an examination the result of which is in dispute;

(2) how many schools queried the Midland examining group's assessment of the marks to be awarded for the English examination of GCSE (a) in 1988 and (b) in 1989;

(3) whether an examination board is under any obligation to notify a school when its pupils' exam papers are to be destroyed.

Mrs. Rumbold: The groups are indepedent bodies, wholly responsible for the administration of their own examinations. Queries concerning grading decisions are entirely a matter for the group and the school concerned, and the Department does not collect information about the number of queries or appeals at group level.

I understand that, where results are in dispute, examination scripts are kept for as long as a formal appeal is under consideration. Once the appeals procedures have been exhausted, or it has become apparent that a school intends to take no further formal action, the examining group normally destroys the scripts, but it is under no obligation to notify a school that it has done so.

Kuru Disease and Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what research h as been conducted to establish the cause or causes of (a) Kuru and (b) Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease; what results have so far been forthcoming; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease and Kuru belong to a family of diseases thought to be caused by "slow viruses" which include scrapie in sheep and bovine spongiform encephalopathy in cattle.

As a result of recommendation 8.5.2 (viii) of the Tyrell report (report of the working party on bovine spongiform encephalopathy), the Department of Health has commissioned a research project to review the incidence, prevalence and trends of Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease in order to help determine whether there is a link with bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

From 1979 until 1987, the Medical Research Council funded an epidemiological study of Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease. No consistent risk factors were identified. The neuropathogenesis unit in Edinburgh is undertaking a programme of research on scrapie which is also relevant; the unit is jointly funded by the Agricultural and Food Research Council and Medical Research Council.

Research on Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease and Kuru may be being pursued by university departments and medical schools with support from the University Funding Council block grants and by health authorities; but information on this is not collected centrally.

TRANSPORT

Motor Cycles

Mr. Waller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the number of casualties among pillion passengers carried on motor cycles driven by learner riders, indicating the number who were holders of full motor cycle driving licences and the number carried illegally without a full licence in each of the last five years in repect of which information is available.

Mr. Atkins: Information is not available on the type of driving licence held by drivers of vehicles, or their passengers, involved in road injury accidents. Therefore, it is not possible to estimate the number of pillion passengers carried on motor cycles being driven by learner drivers, nor to tell whether these passengers were being carried illegally.

Creches

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by location where creche facilities are provided for working mothers employed in his Department; and if they have to make any payment for this service.

Mr. Atkins: No creche facilities are provided by my Department at present, although possibilities are being investigated.

Severn Bridge Signal Box

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will take steps to save the Severn bridge signal box at Shrewsbury, Shropshire for the nation as a national heritage; whether he has discussed the matter with the National Railway museum at York; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: These are matters for British Rail. I understand from BR that, under current plans, the signal box is likely to continue to be required for railway operational purposes until late 1991. BR and other interested parties will therefore have ample time to consider these issues, including possible arrangements for preservation.

Heathrow Airport

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to resist all proposals from airlines to increase night flights or to reduce the period covered by night flight restrictions at Heathrow airport.

Mr. McLoughlin: The present night restrictions regime at Heathrow was introduced in 1988 and runs until 1992-3. We have no plans to alter it.

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to resist all proposals to end the daily runway alternation at Heathrow airport.

Mr. McLoughlin: Government policy on aircraft noise is as set out in the White Paper "Airport Policy", published in June 1985 (Cmnd. 9542). Runway alternation at Heathrow is cited as an example of a noise abatement measure that the Government will continue to encourage (para 8.8).

Airline Punctuality

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library on a regular basis a copy of the Civil Aviation Authority's report on airline punctuality records; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: These reports are published monthly by the Civil Aviation Authority, on the basis of information provided by certain airports and by the relevant scheduling committees (comprising representatives of airlines using the airports). I have told the authority of my hon. Friend's request.

Transport (London)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what are his Department's estimates for the number of cars entering London on a regular basis for each of the next five years;

(2) what is his Department's estimate for the number of commuters using all forms of transport with a London destination for each of the next five years.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 26 January 1990]: Figures are not available in the form requested. Estimates for commuters entering central London show that between 1983 and 1988, commuting by each of the modes changed as follows:

	Per cent.
Cars	−11
BR Rail	+22
Underground	+27
Bus	−18

Large-scale investment is taking place to increase the capacity of the rail systems to accommodate increasing demand. It is not the Government's policy to encourage commuting by car into central London. The report of the central London rail study, published in January 1989, forecast that, between 1987 and 2001, BR trips would increase by some 20 per cent. and Underground trips by about 13 per cent.

HEALTH

Hospital and Community Health Services

Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will show in the Official Report the increase in purchasing power made available for hospital and community health services, excluding the cost improvement programme and income generation, for the years 1986, 1987, 1988 and 1989, estimated, using an index which would show 1980 as 100.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is given in the table:

Year
1980-81	100·0
1986-87	104·7
1987-88	109·9
1988-89	113·2
1989-90	[1]114·1

[1] Estimate.

Notes:

1. Based on health authorities' total revenue cash limits, inclusive of all in-year adjustments, carry forward from previous financial year, and in year transfers between revenue and capital.
2. Increase in purchasing power measured by GDP deflator.

Homes for the Elderly

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will make it his policy to ensure that elderly people resident in homes for the elderly are provided with equivalent support from public funds irrespective of whether the homes are publicly or privately run.

Mr. Freeman: The White Paper "Caring for People" explained that we intend to bring the local authority rules for working out how much people in homes can afford to contribute towards their care and support into line with those used for income support purposes. Under our community care proposals local authorities will have to contribute more to the support of people in homes under their own management than to that of people in private homes but the personal financial position of residents will be the same.

Creutzfeld-Jakob Disease

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has carried out into a connection between Creutzfeld-Jakob disease and bovine spongiform encephalopathy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: As a result of recommendation 8.5.2 (viii), of the Tyrrell report (report of the working party on bovine spongiform encephalopathy) the Department of Health has commissioned a research project to review the incidence, prevalence and trends of Creutzfeld-Jakob disease in order to help determine whether there is a link with bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

Area Health Authorities

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will instruct area health authorities to pay due heed to local authorities and public opinion when they decide to construct buildings such as incinerators which can have an adverse effect on the environment.

Mr. Freeman: Health authorities are already instructed to consult local planning authorities where a proposed development is one for which planning permission would normally be required.

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will request the South Warwickshire health authority to refrain from proceeding with the building of a large incinerator and chimney at the South Warwickshire hospital until the powers of control and licence for such a project have passed to the local authority.

Mr. Freeman: The responsibility for strategic planning and operational policy of waste disposal rests locally with the West Midlands regional health authority. South Warwickshire health authority has acted throughout in a responsible way. For further information my hon. Friend may like to consult the authority concerned.

Abortion

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the places approved by him under section 1(3) of the Abortion Act 1967.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The following places have been approved for the period 1 February 1990 to 31 January 1992:

Acland Nuffield, Hospital, Oxford
AMI Alexandra Hospital, Cheadle, Cheshire
BUPA Alexandra Hospital, Walderslade, Kent
Avenue Clinic, Hove, Sussex
Bath Clinic, Combe Down, Bath
AMI Beechwood Hospital, Norton, Sheffield
BUPA Belvedere Hospital, Scarborough
Blackdown Nursing Home, Blackdown, Leamington Spa
AMI Blackheath Hospital, London SE3
Bromhead Hospital, Lincoln
BUPA Hospital, Bushey, Watford, Hertfordshire
BUPA Murrayfield Hospital, Thingwall, Wirral, Merseyside
BUPA Hospital, Norwich, Colney, Norwich

As part of the Department's control of the private sector all these places have been subject to unannounced visits of inspection during the previous approval period. Those places specialising in abortion have been visited more frequently by both medical/nursing and investigative officers. During these visits the operation of approved places is closely observed to ensure they meet the condition required in respect of medical and nursing practice, administrative and financial arrangements and facilities and equipment provided.

Haemophiliacs

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the extent to which the production of safe and efficient factor 8 concentrates from United Kingdom national fractionation centres meets the need of haemophiliacs in the United Kingdom;

(2) when he expects the United Kingdom to achieve self-sufficiency in blood products;

(3) at what date United Kingdom haemophiliacs will be able to receive factor 8 made solely from the plasma of unpaid donors to the national blood transfusion service.

Mr. Freeman: At present in England and Wales approximately 70 per cent. of the factor 8 used to treat haemophiliacs is produced at the blood products laboratory from the plasma of unpaid donors to the national blood transfusion service. The remainder is commercially produced factor 8 which is imported into the United Kingdom. The imported products are being prescribed as a result of the preference of individual clinicians. The blood products laboratory is, therefore, meeting in full the demand for its factor 8, as it is for virtually all other blood products. It is making efforts to increase its share of the blood products market in this country, but the choice of product remains with the clinician.

The information relating to Scotland and Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Organ Donations (Payment)

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to prohibit payment for donations of human organs, blood and plasma in the United Kingdom; and if he has any plans to restrict the processing and distribution of such donations to a publicly controlled agency within the National Health Service.

Mr. Freeman: Our donors give blood and plasma freely, and have always done so. The Government are committed to maintaining this principle of voluntary and unpaid donation. There are certainly no plans to privatise blood collection and supply of blood products in this country.

The Human Organ Transplants Act 1989 prohibits commercial dealings in human organs intended for transplant. Donations of human organs will be carefully monitored under the Act and its regulations. The Act introduced controls to ensure that human organs are donated freely and according to certain conditions.

Organ donations from live donors are subject to particular regulations which have been approved by Parliament and will come into effect on 1 April 1990. The Unrelated Live Transplant Regulatory Authority (ULTRA), which is being set up under this Act, will have to be satisfied that certain conditions are met in cases of donation of organs between persons who are genetically unrelated before the proposed transplant will be able to take place.

The information relating to Scotland and Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Mentally Ill People (Basingstoke and North Hampshire)

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many beds for long-term mentally ill patients provided by the Basingstoke and North Hampshire health authority are currently occupied by patients from other health districts;

(2) how many long-term beds for mentally ill patients are provided by the Basingstoke and North Hampshire health authority other than those provided by the psychiatric division, Park Prewett;

(3) how many long-term beds for mentally ill patients are provided by the Basingstoke and North Hampshire health authority at the psychiatric division, Park Prewett;

(4) how many National Health Service-funded mentally ill patients from the Basingstoke and North Hampshire district are currently accommodated in National Health Service hospitals or private nursing homes in other districts;

(5) if he will list the private nursing homes in the Basingstoke and North Hampshire health district which are registered for the mentally ill; how many mentally ill patients each can accommodate; how many each is currently accommodating; and how many of these are National Health Service funded.

Mr. Freeman: During the year 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1989 there were on average 318 beds available daily in NHS wards for long-stay mental illness patients in Basingstoke and North Hampshire health district. All these beds were at Park Prewett hospital. The number of beds occupied by patients from other districts is not available centrally.

Figures for the numbers of patients with a mental illness, from the Basingstoke and North Hampshire health district, who are accommodated in hospital and units outside the district are not available centrally.

As at 31 March 1988, none of the private institutions in the Basingstoke and North Hampshire health district, registered under section 23 of the Registered Homes Act 1984, contained beds specifically for mental illness patients. Information is not available centrally on mentally ill patients that may be resident in these institutions.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the level of the provision of care for mentally ill patients in the Basingstoke and North Hampshire district.

Mr. Freeman: It is for the Basingstoke and North Hampshire health authority to decide the level of provision of care for mentally ill patients in its district, taking account of local needs and priorities.

Acute Services

Sir Eldon Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on the decision of the East Anglian regional health authority that its future planning should be based on the assumption that hospitals providing acute services for East Anglia must have a minimum of 550 to 600 beds for long-term viability; what is Government policy on this matter; how many existing acute hospitals in all parts of the country have fewer than 550 to 600 beds; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The appropriate size of an acute hospital is a matter for local decision, in the light of particular needs and circumstances including the 24-hour provision of equipment and skilled staff. I understand that at its January meeting the East Anglian regional health authority endorsed, for planning purposes, the principle of a minimum size for future general acute hospitals.

At the beginning of 1987 there were in England 431 acute hospitals[1] (not necessarily all offering district general hospital facilities) with less than 600 beds in total. Departmental policies require authorities to consider the financial, manpower and interdependent service consequences of their planning options.

[1] This is based on the definition that such hospitals should have at least 85 per cent. of their beds in the acute specialties.

Budgets and Forecasts

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are his Department's procedures for producing budgets and forecasts; what guidance is issued on the use of those procedures; what criteria are applied when judging cost effectiveness; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 19 January 1990]: It is for district health authorities to draw up their own budgets in the light of the resource allocations they receive from the regional health authority.

The setting of budgets is part of the planning cycle. Regional health authorities submit annually to the NHS management executive their programmes for the next financial year. These programmes provide the basis from which budgets are drawn up. The management executive issues guidance on what programmes should cover including quantified information on planned levels of activity, finance and manpower.

Health authorities' cost improvement programmes deliver a fundamental and continuing challenge to their cost base. Health authorities decide the level of cost improvements they can achieve. The management executive, where necessary, challenges the adequacy of the level proposed and monitors its delivery, as it does other key aspects of programmes.

Leeds Health Authorities (Merger)

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the possible merger of Leeds Eastern and Leeds Western health authorities.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 29 January 1990]: I understand that regional and district officers are currently considering the possibility of such a merger. However, merger proposals will be considered only where there is a compelling case for change. Before any case for a merger could be accepted it would need to be considered by the regional health authority and then submitted to my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for final decision. The case would be subject to full public consultation and the Secretary of State would need to be sure of its merits before approving it. The Health Service reforms are not about widescale restructuring but are designed to concentrate management on improving health care for patients.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Forestry (Nottinghamshire)

65. Mr. Allen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he has to develop forestry in Nottinghamshire.

Mr. Maclean: The Government are actively promoting both the woodland grant scheme and the farm woodland scheme, and 37 applications have been submitted under these schemes in Nottinghamshire, covering an area of over 100 hectares of new planting. The Forestry Commission is currently developing proposals with British Coal for further tree planting on colliery spoil tips. I have also seen a copy of the Countryside Commission's consultation document on its proposal to create a new forest in the English midlands, in which Sherwood forest in Nottinghamshire is identified as one of the possible sites.

Creches

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list by location where creche facilities are provided for working mothers employed in his Department; and if they have to make any payment for this service.

Mr. Curry: All office managers have been encouraged to consider carefully the provision of nursery facilities. A feasibility study is currently being undertaken on the setting up of a day nursery at Guildford where there is already a successful holiday play scheme. The study will include all aspects of the matter, including costs to parents. The possibility of providing nursery facilities is also being investigated by regional management at Cambridge who are taking the lead for all Departments in the town. Similar investigations are being carried out in the Tolworth-Chessington area. The Department is also participating in the project to determine the feasibility of providing child care facilities in and around London for the employees of all Departments.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will make a further statement on whether bovine spongiform encephalopathy can be communicated to humans in the light of the comments of the Government's Chief Veterinary Officer.

Mr. Maclean: All Ministers in this Department and the Chief Veterinary Officer have continually emphasised that there is no evidence of a risk to human health from BSE and that the Southwood working party regarded such a risk as remote. None the less, precautionary measures, including the slaughter and destruction of affected cattle and the banning of certain offals for human consumption from all others, has been taken to counter even that remote and theoretical risk.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many bovine spongiform encephalopathy-infected cattle have so far been destroyed with farmers receiving Ministry compensation; and how much this compensation has cost so far.

Mr. Maclean: From 8 August 1988, when the compulsory slaughter policy was introduced, to 31 December 1989, a total of 9,884 suspected BSE cases were slaughtered in Great Britain and £3,353,928 paid in compensation.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much it would cost to pay (a) 100 per cent. for cattle affected by bovine spongiform encephalopathy and (b) for the slaughter of female offspring from cows affected by bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

Mr. Maclean: It is not possible to estimate such costs in the future, as these would depend on the number of animals slaughtered, and the market price of cattle on which the maximum level of compensation payable depends. But if compensation for all the infected animals compulsorily slaughtered up to the end of 1989 had been at 100 per cent. of their value, subject to existing ceiling arrangements, the cost would have exceeded £6 million.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the possibility of the passing of the infective agent associated with bovine spongiform encephalopathy from one generation of cattle to the next.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies) on 18 December 1989, Official Report, column 30.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the number of bovine spongiform encephalopathy-infected cattle reaching market and being sold for human consumption.

Mr. Maclean: Since BSE became a notifiable disease on 21 June 1988, up to 30 September 1989, the end of the last quarter for which figures are currently available, 81 suspected cases of BSE were identified at markets. Of these, 56 were subsequently confirmed as having BSE. All animals concerned were slaughtered and their carcases destroyed. Of course the removal of specified offals from all cattle more than six months old ensures that there is no risk to human health.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from the National Farmers Union in respect of (a) the ban on the sale of bovine offal for human consumption, (b) the exclusion to the above ban granted to calves under six months, (c) the compensation levels set for bovine spongiform encephalopathy-infected cattle, (d) the level of research into the causes of bovine spongiform encephalopathy and (e) the ban on imports by West German Government.

Mr. Maclean: I have received representations from the National Farmers Union expressing support for the ban on the use of certain bovine offal for human consumption and for the research being conducted into BSE; expressing concern at the West German restrictions on beef imported from Britain, and disagreeing with the level of compensation payable for cattle infected with BSE.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to prevent the sale of bovine spongiform encephalopathy-affected cattle through non-European countries' slaughterhouses.

Mr. Maclean: All cattle suspected of being infected with BSE are compulsorily slaughtered and their carcases burned or buried. In addition to checks carried out by environmental health officers, cattle at non-EC approved slaughterhouses are subject to random ante-mortem inspections by veterinary inspectors.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has made an assessment of the implications (a) for the spread of bovine spongiform encephalopathy, (b) for the farming community and (c) for the level of exports of British beef, of his policy not to compensate farmers in full for cattle infected with bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

Mr. Maclean: I do not believe that existing levels of compensation have any effect on the spread of BSE or on British beef exports. Compensation is intended to provide farmers with a fair recompense for cattle slaughtered as BSE suspects at the Ministry's behest.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will implement the recommendations of the Tyrell committee that random sampling of the brains of cattle routinely sent for slaughter should be carried out to test for the presence of subclinical bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on 23 January at column 645.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he has received any representations from Proten in connection with its product Papain; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when he last met representatives from Proten; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Maclean: The company that owns the patent rights to Proten has expressed disappointment with our decision not to seek provision for the continued use of this pre-slaughter treatment under the rules which are to be adopted for the single market. My right hon. Friend the Minister last met representatives of the organisation concerned on 22 November 1989 to discuss a range of issues relating to their slaughter interests.

I have nothing to add to the full statement I made on this matter during the Adjournment debate on 7 November 1989.

Slaughterhouses

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the visits made in 1989 to slaughterhouses in East Sussex by officers of the state veterinary service.

Mr. Maclean: In 1989 the following visits were made by officers of the state veterinary service to red meat slaughterhouses and licensed poultry premises in East Sussex to advise on standards:

	Dates
Tottingworth Farms Ltd.
Little Tottingworth Farm
Broad Oak, Heathfield	22 February 1989
T. Borthwick & Sons (UK) Ltd.
The Abattoir
Norlington Lane, Ringmer	23 June 1989
Mr. M. Vine
Slaughterhouse
Garfield Lane, Hailsham	20 June 1989
Mayhew's Chicken plc
Five Ash Down, Uckfield	25 January 1989
	25 April 1989
	19 July 1989
	21 November 1989
Sovereign Chicken plc
Burwash Common, Etchingham	21 February 1989
	31 October 1989
Bridge Poultry Supplies Ltd.
Horam, Heathfield	10 February 1989

In addition, some 30 visits were made by state veterinary service officers to undertake ante-mortem inspections and to carry out duties associated with the collection of samples for testing for the presence of drug residues.

Organic Production

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the European Community draft regulation relating to organic standards in respect of the length of the proposed conversion period from conventional to organic production.

Mr. Curry: The European Community proposals on organic foodstuffs, as currently drafted, provide for a conversion period of at least one calendar year. In line with the standards set by the United Kingdom register of organic food standards, the United Kingdom and a number of other member states have suggested that conversion should be for a minimum of two years.

Organic Livestock

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the formulation of organic livestock standards.

Mr. Curry: Voluntary national standards for the production and processing of organic foods, including livestock standards, were launched by the United Kingdom register of organic food standards in May last year. A copy was placed at that time in the Library of the House. In addition, the EC Commission issued proposals for a regulation on organic foodstuffs covering crops and products of plant origin in December. It has indicated that if the regulation is adopted it will submit parallel proposals for statutory organic livestock standards in due course.

Beef Exports

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the partial ban on imports of British beef by West Germany.

Mr. Maclean: There is no scientific justification for the West German restrictions on imports of beef from this country. This view was endorsed at the meeting of Agriculture Ministers which my right hon. Friend the Minister attended last week where the Commissioner confirmed that expert scientific advice was that British beef did not pose a risk to human health and that any interference with trade would be contrary to Community law. The German authorities will be reflecting on this and I hope they will soon remove their restrictions.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance

Mr. Hume: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement regarding the hill livestock compensatory allowance for the coming year, indicating whether there is to be any increase in the allowance.

Mr. Curry: I refer the hon. Member to the statement that my right hon. Friend the Minister made to the House on 30 January 1990 at columns 159-70.

Storm Damage

Mr. Speller: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what help he proposes to give to those in horticulture and agriculture who have sustained heavy losses through the recent severe storms.

Mr. Curry: I have the greatest sympathy for farmers and growers who have been badly affected by the recent severe weather. My officials will operate the farm capital grant schemes as flexibly as possible within the rules of those schemes in order to take account of the effects of the storm. But it has been the longstanding policy of successive Governments not to pay compensation to farmers for the effects of severe weather, particularly where risks are insurable.

North-East Drift Net Fishery

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what estimate his Department has formed of the value of the catch of salmon from the north-east drift net fishery in the last year for which figures are available and in the corresponding period 10, 20 and 30 years ago;

(2) what estimate his Department has made of the number of (a) full-time and (b) part-time jobs created by the north-east drift net fishery salmon catch in the latest year for which figures are available and in the corresponding period 10, 20 and 30 years ago;

(3) what socio-economic studies his Department has undertaken in anticipation of the publication of the report of the inquiry into the north-east drift net fishery to establish the likely impact of phasing out this fishery.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 30 January 1990]: My Department has information on the numbers of salmon drift net licence holders (and endorsees), and catch statistics which are published regularly.

We do not have data on the values of catches of salmon taken by drift nets in the north-east England fishery—nor information on the jobs dependent upon salmon drift net fishing—for the years in question. We have no plans to mount a socio-economic study in anticipation of the report to Parliament on the north-east coast salmon net fishery. Section 39 of the Salmon Act 1986 requires Ministers to "prepare a report which, in the context of the need to ensure—

(a) that sufficient salmon return to spawn in the rivers wholly or partly situated in the areas and districts specified in subsection (3) below; and

(b) that fishing for salmon by means of nets is properly managed in those areas and districts, reviews the nature and extent of all such fishing in those areas and districts."

Pesticides

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will outline the procedures undertaken for (a) a partial review and (b) a full review of pesticide active ingredients; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 29 January 1990]: A full review covers all aspects of consumer, operator, and environmental safety. A partial review addresses only those aspects that may suggest a cause for concern. In both cases experimental data will be requested and evaluated and a recommendation made to Ministers by the Advisory Committee on Pesticides.

Cattle Offal

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the countries which have been importing cattle offal from the United Kingdom since 8 November 1989.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 29 January 1990]: The available information relates to the calendar month of November 1989 and shows that the United Kingdom exported edible offal of bovine animals to the following countries:

France
Belgium/Luxembourg
Netherlands
Italy
Irish Republic
Portugal
Spain
Finland
Japan
United States of America

Information for later months is not yet available.

Veterinary Manpower

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he will make a decision on the Page report on veterinary manpower.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to the reply, 22 January 1990, c. 572]: I would like to thank Dr. Ewan Page, vice-chancellor of Reading University and his committee for their careful and thorough examination of the issues put to them and for producing well-argued recommendations. Dr. Ewan Page and his committee were asked by the Government to chair a committee to assess the need for veterinary manpower and demand for veterinary education and in the light of this to make recommendations on how increased manpower requirements might be met having regard to funding constraints. The committee was also asked to consider future arrangements for assessing the demand for veterinary manpower and determining the number of student places. Dr. Page's report has been published and copies are being placed in the Library of the House. The report concludes that there is likely to be a significant shortfall over the next decade and makes a number of recommendations directed at the Government, the Universities Funding Council, veterinary schools and the veterinary profession to rectify this situation.

The Government have considered the report carefully. They have decided to lift the restrictions on the freedom of veterinary schools to increase student intake in response to demand from the market by removing the ceiling on intakes to veterinary schools. The Government also accept the recommendation that they discontinue five-yearly manpower reviews and let student demand have a greater role in determining the intake of veterinary schools. However, as it is important to maintain a core of veterinarians trained to help ensure that animal health and public health requirements are met, the Government will review the position if it appears that these needs are in jeopardy.

The Government recognise that any expansion of veterinary schools will not have an immediate effect on supply of veterinarians. They therefore accept the Page committee's recommendation that in the short term increasing immigration of foreign veterinarians could be an important means of meeting any shortfall. The Government are currently considering a number of measures that would reduce the burden on employers making work permit applications and enable veterinarians' applications to be processed more quickly, as suggested by the Page committee.

I am asking the veterinary profession to consider carefully those recommendations that the Page committee asked it to examine. These include the question of immigration of foreign veterinarians, exploring effective ways of encouraging part-time working and later retirement and monitoring of manpower supply and demand data. My Department will also be consulting interested organisations about the Page committee's proposals to review the role of veterinary nurses and make greater use of lay persons.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science is asking the Universities Funding Council and veterinary schools to consider carefully those recommendations in the Page report that relate to the funding and teaching of an increased student intake at veterinary schools.

The Universities Funding Council postponed consideration of the Riley report, which recommended reducing the number of veterinary schools, pending the results of the Page review. These recommendations will now need to be reassessed and the UFC has been asked to resolve this matter as soon as possible.

Written Answers to Questions

ENVIRONMENT

Contracts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby on 14 December 1989, Official Report, column 751, if he will list separately the contracts that have been extended rather than re-let by (a) the Property Services Agency, (b) the Crown Suppliers and (c) the Department of the Environment.

Mr. Chope: Thirty of the 47 contracts reported in column 751 of the Official Report for 14 December 1989 as exempt from advertising were extended, all by the Crown Suppliers. The contracts extended were as follows:

Furniture (office, kitchen and storage)—12 extensions at £5,375,964
Fitted bedroom furniture (Benbow range)—2 extensions at £3,002,000
Office and display equipment—5 extensions at £2,651,923
Cleaning materials and equipment—6 extensions at £1,641,240
Clothing uniforms—3 extensions at £583,000
Electrical equipment—1 extension at £850,000
Paint—1 extension at £197,000.

Lullingstone Roman Villa

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment why Lullingstone Roman villa is closed.

Mr. Trippier: Lullingstone Roman villa was reopened to the public on 10 January 1990. It had been closed since March 1988 to enable essential health and safety work to be carried out, including the removal of asbestos cladding from the cover building. English Heritage is currently developing proposals for improvements in the presentation of the villa to the public.

Hospital Incinerators

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take into account the anxieties of people living near to hospital incinerators when he undertakes consultations on standards of incineration.

Mr. Trippier: The local authority unit of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution is currently drawing up guidance on standards for clinical waste incinerators which we propose to schedule for air pollution control under the Environmental Protection Bill. A wide range of bodies have been consulted, including the National Society for Clean Air, the Institution of Environmental Health Officers, and individual local authorities. The Bill will give the public an opportunity to comment on applications for authorisation of individual incinerators and will substantially improve public access to information on scheduled plant.

Pollution Control

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the broad estimates of the amounts spent on pollution control and environmental improvement as a proportion of gross domestic product by the United Kingdom and other industrial countries.

Mr. Trippier: International comparisons of expenditure on environmental protection have been made by the OECD, which will shortly be publishing a report of its findings. The estimation of such expenditure involves many problems of definition, measurement and collection of data. Figures for the United Kingdom indicate that between 1 per cent. and 2 per cent. of GNP is dedicated to environmental protection. Other OECD countries appear to spend a similar proportion, and there are no reliable indications that this has varied greatly over the past two decades.

Wasteman 90 Conference

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department will be represented at the conference Wasteman 90 to be held in Birmingham between 20 and 22 February.

Mr. Trippier: We are aware of this conference, but there are no current plans for the Department to be represented. I have, however, provided a statement for the organisers to incorporate in the conference literature.

Blue Circle Industries

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had in the last year with Blue Circle Industries plc over environmental protection matters.

Mr. Trippier: None.

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list any planning appeals submitted by Blue Circle Industries plc or its subsidiaries which his Department is currently considering.

Mr. Moynihan: An appeal by Blue Circle Industries plc against an enforcement notice issued on 19 July 1989 by the Nottinghamshire county council is currently before the Secretary of State. Subsidiary companies are not identified as such in the Department's records.

Community Care

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to review the formulae for calculating standard spending assessments for personal social services to take account of the proposed new responsibilities for community care services from April 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: Changes to the standard spending assessment formula for personal social services for the elderly will be needed to take account of new responsibilities for community care. We will be discussing proposals for the change with the local authority associations in due course.

Social Services

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, showing each figure in total and expressed as an amount per adult or relevant population (a) the standard spending assessments for 1990-91 for (i) personal social services, (ii) social services for children, (iii) social services for the elderly and (iv) other social services, (b) the actual spending for 1989-90 on (i) personal social services, (ii) social services for children, (iii) social services for the elderly and (iv) other social services and (c) the grant-related expenditure for 1989-90 on (i) personal social services, (ii) social services for children, (iii) social services for the elderly and (iv) other social services, for each social services authority in England; and if he will give in each case the information aggregated in respect of (1) shires, (2) metropolitan districts and (3) inner and outer London boroughs.

Mr. David Hunt: I have today placed two tables in the Library. One shows the 1990-91 personal social services standard spending assessments for each social services authority in England and for each class of authority; the other shows comparable information on the 1989-90 personal social service, grant-related expenditure assessments. Comparable information on personal social services spending for 1989-90 is not yet available.

Nature Conservancy Council

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many current members of the Nature Conservancy Council were appointed primarily on account of their commitment to or interest in (a) agriculture, (b) forestry, (c) country sports and (d) nature conservation.

Mr. Trippier: Members of the Nature Conservancy Council are appointed for the personal contribution they can make to the council's work. They are not appointed to represent a particular interest.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many members of the council of the Nature Conservancy Council there were at the date of the publication of the Nature Conservancy Council's annual report covering each of the years: 1981-82, 1982-83, 1983-84, 1984-85, 1985-86, 1986-87, 1987-88 and 1988-89; and why he decided to increase by five the number of members of the council of the Nature Conservancy Council on 1 April 1989.

Mr. Trippier: The information is as follows:

Number of members of the Nature Conservancy Council on the date of publication and year covered in annual report

Year and Date	Number
1981-82 29 April 1983	14
1982-83 1 December 1983	14
1983-84 1 October 1984	14
1984-85 20 November 1985	12
1985-86 20 October 1986	15
1986-87 26 October 1987	14
1987-88 14 November 1988	15
1988-89 14 November 1989	18

In making appointments to the council, account is taken of the range of expertise of its current members and the personal contributions which others can offer.

Dogs

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out the measures the Government have introduced over the last five years, including their geographical application, concerning the control of dog nuisance; and if he will set out the Government's future proposals and the time scale for their implementation.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: As to measures introduced over the last five years, these are as follows:

(i) In 1987 revised model byelaws for dog control and the control of dog fouling in England and Wales were issued by the Home Office, including a new model byelaw requiring dog owners to clear up after their dogs in certain areas ("poop-scoop byelaws").

(ii) Section 39 of the Local Government Act 1988 gave duly authorised officers of local authorities in England and Wales powers to seize, detain and dispose of stray dogs.

(iii) The Dangerous Dogs Act 1989 includes provisions which strengthen the existing legislation relating to the control of dangerous dogs in England, Scotland and Wales.

As to future proposals, the Environmental Protection Bill includes a new duty on local authorities in England, Scotland and Wales to keep public land clear of litter and refuse—the term "refuse" for this part of the Bill can, by order of the Secretary of State, include canine faeces. In 1989 consultation papers entitled "Action on Dogs" were issued both for Scotland and for England and Wales. These set out various proposals for the control of dogs including in particular a new duty on local authorities to collect up and deal with stray dogs.

Copies of both these consultation papers have been placed in the House of Commons Library. We are considering how to take forward the proposals contained in them.

Municipal Water Treatment

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will make it his policy not to block the European Community directive No. 10139/89 when it is discussed by the Council of Ministers;

(2) whether he will make it his policy to support European Community directive No. 10139/89 on municipal water treatment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Details of the draft directive were set out in the explanatory memorandum (10139/89) which was placed in the Vote Office on 27 December. The Government support the objective of the proposal, which is to prevent the environment from being adversely affected by municipal waste water discharges, and expect to play a constructive part in the discussion of the proposal by the Council of Ministers.

Waste (Duty of Care)

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has for a code of practice under clause 26 of the Environmental Protection Bill on the duty of care as respects waste.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My Department and the Welsh Office have today published a draft code of practice for public consultation under clause 26 of the Environmental Protection Bill. Clause 26 puts a new legal duty of care on anyone who has waste, from producers through carriers to disposers. The code gives advice and examples on the practical measures that those under the new duty should take.

Examples of what is recommended in the code include:

Waste left out for collection or being transported should not be allowed to blow around or fall off, it should be put in containers or covered up securely;

All firms which produce waste should know what it is composed of, or should commission an analysis;

Firms should check up on the bona fides of anyone they give their waste to; they should see and check their certificate of registration as a carrier or their waste management licence;

If firms see or suspect that someone is fly-tipping their waste, they should stop handing any waste to that person and warn the local authority;

If anyone knows that their waste requires special treatment, for example, clinical waste from hospitals —the National Health Service will not be exempt— then they must take action to ensure that it receives that treatment.

The code of practice will be admissible as evidence in court in prosecutions for breach of the duty of care. Anyone convicted of breaching the duty of care will face the possibility of an unlimited fine.

Private householders will not be affected by the new duty as far as their own household waste is concerned.

The Bill's new duty of care and this accompanying code of practice are the most radical step ever taken to ensure that waste is legally dealt with.

Housing Corporation

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any announcement to make about the chairmanship of the Housing Corporation.

Mr. Chris Patten: I am pleased to inform the House that I have appointed Sir Christopher Benson to succeed Sir Hugh Cubitt as chairman of the Housing Corporation with effect from 1 May 1990. The appointment will be for three years. In the meantime, Sir Christopher will become a member of the board with effect from today. I would like to take this opportunity to express my gratitude to Sir Hugh Cubitt for the outstanding contribution he has made to the work of the corporation and the housing association movement over the past 10 years.

Private Homes (Casual Use)

Mr. Neale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide for the casual use of private homes for bed and breakfast purposes to be exempt from the new business rate.

Mr. David Hunt: We intend to provide that bed and breakfast accommodation offered in someone's own home which is available for fewer than 100 days in a year will not be subject to the new business rate. This fulfils the commitment given by my noble Friend the then Minister of State during the passage of the Local Government Finance Act 1988 through Parliament that limited use of domestic property to provide bed and breakfast accommodation should not lead to the property being assessed for non-domestic rating. An order will be laid before Parliament shortly.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the effect of his decision to bring forward payments of revenue support grant on the average community charge in 1990-91.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 16 January 1990]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 26 January, at column 923. The total cash flow advantage to local authorities is about £180 million compared with the profiles originally proposed for 1990-91, which would have enabled authorities to achieve a profile of income through the year from grant, business rates and community charges equal to expenditure.

Water Meters

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total cost so far for the water meter trials approved by his Department; and if he will give the cost of each trial area.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: It is estimated that the total cost of the metering trials will be about £20 million. The latest estimated cost of each trial is as follows:

Isle of Wight (Southern Water)	16,134,000
Chandlers Ford (Southern Water)	125,000
Chorleywood (Rickmansworth Water Company)	220,000
Bristol-Hotwells (Bristol Waterworks Company)	332,000
Haling Park (Thames Water)	756,000
Bromsgrove (East Worcestershire Waterworks Company)	383,000
Brookmans Park (Lee Valley Water Company)	695,000
Turlin Moor (Wessex Water)	197,000
Broadstone (Wessex Water)	300,000
Camberley (Mid Southern Water Company)	346,000
Hutton Rudby (Northumbrian Water)	251,000
South Normanton (Yorkshire Water)	480,000

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many of the 12 meter trials for domestic water charges have had the meters installed and are now being charged for water and sewage treatment by meter; and if he will list those which are completed.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The installation of meters is complete and the customers are being charged by measure in 10 of the 12 trials. The installation of 52,000 meters in the Isle of Wight trial is not expected to be completed until the late summer but Southern Water has phased the introduction of metered billing in different areas of the island as meters are installed. Charging by measure in the South Normanton trial is due to start on 1 April 1991. The trials are due to end in 1993.

TRANSPORT

Night Sleeper Rail Service

52. Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consultations he has had regarding the night sleeper rail service from Belfast to London via Larne-Stranraer.

Mr. Portillo: British Rail has kept this Department informed about plans to withdraw sleeper services from the Stranraer-Glasgow part of this route. I understand that BR intends to provide connecting services between Stranraer and the Glasgow-London sleeper services.

53. Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has made to British Rail regarding withdrawal of the London-Stranraer night service.

Mr. Portillo: We are aware of British Rail's plans to withdraw the sleeper service between Stranraer and Glasgow and to provide a connecting service from Stranraer to the Glasgow-London sleeper service. This is a commercial matter for BR.

Severn Bridge

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was collected in tolls last year on the Severn bridge.

Mr. Atkins: Tolls collected in 1988-89 amounted to £10·1 million.

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the estimated completion date for the current renovation and maintenance work on the Severn bridge.

Mr. Atkins: Strengthening work on the Severn crossing will be completed in March 1990. The resurfacing work is due to be completed by late 1990/early 1991. Routine maintenance work on the bridge will continue.

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what items of repair and renovation have been completed on the Severn bridge in the last 12 months.

Mr. Atkins: The last 12 months have seen the replacement of cables and the rocker bearings on the Wye bridge and completion of hanger replacement on the Severn bridge. The Wye bridge towers have been extended in height, the Severn bridge towers strengthened and pier protection works undertaken. Strengthening of the steel decks on both structures has been substantially completed.

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what work is currently under way on the Severn bridge.

Mr. Atkins: Current work includes the jacking of supports in the Severn bridge towers, the resurfacing of the entire crossing and replacement and improvement of safety barriers and expansion joints.

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how much is the accumulated debt on the Severn bridge at the latest available date;

(2) how much the debt on the Severn bridge was last year.

Mr. Atkins: The unaudited accounts show a debt to the Consolidated Fund of £113·4 million at 31 March 1989.

London Assessment Studies

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what resources have been set aside by his Department for publicity and consultation on stage 2B of the London assessment studies and its document "Traffic in London".

Mr. Atkins: No separate provision has been made for costs incurred by the Department and its consultants on the current consultation exercise on stage 2B of the London assessment studies and on the document "Traffic in London", which fall within the appropriate departmental budgets.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department will reimburse the full costs to local authorities in London of undertaking publicity and consultation on stage 2B of the London assessment studies.

Mr. Atkins: No. Expenditure incurred by local authorities in producing their own leaflets and holding public meetings on these subjects is entirely a matter for them.

Body Searches

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many body contact searches are conducted under the Aviation Security Act 1982 for any given year;

(2) how many complaints have been received about the conduct of searches of persons carried out under the Aviation Security Act 1982; what form the complaints procedure on searches takes; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what monitoring procedures are in place to ensure that the standards and code of conduct set out in the aviation security handbook are followed by security personnel conducting searches of persons under the Aviation Security Act 1982.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. Friend has used his powers under the Act to give directions to aerodrome managers and aircraft operators requiring them to ensure that, apart from a limited range of exceptions, all passengers are screened before being permitted to board aircraft at airports covered by the national aviation security programme, and that staff and other personnel are screened before being permitted to enter restricted areas at the major airports. In many cases the persons concerned are required to pass through metal detection equipment and will not necessarily be searched by hand. No record is kept of the number who are hand searched.

The directions require the screening to be carried out, and lay down the standards to be achieved. The aviation security inspectorate makes regular inspections to ensure that these requirements are met.

The directions do not, however, set out the detailed procedures to be followed or the facilities to be provided to minimise any embarrassment to those selected for hand searching. A certain amount of general guidance on this is included in the aviation security handbook issued by the Department, but essentially these matters are management ones and therefore the responsibility of the airports and airlines.

The Department receives a small number of complaints each year about the procedures adopted, or the facilities provided, by individual airports. The number of such complaints is not recorded.

Aviation Security Act

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how often the power contained in section 15(5) of the Aviation Security Act 1982 has been used by him and airport authorities; what is the average duration of an order or licence granted under the power; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: None of the directions given under the Act to date has included the provisions mentioned in section 15(5).

Humber Bridge Authority

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about his discussions with the Humber Bridge Authority concerning the settlement of its debt.

Mr. Atkins: Officials of my Department and officers of the Humber Bridge Board have been working together to produce financial projections with a view to the bridge board presenting a reasoned case for special Government financial assistance.

Mersey Tunnel

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the current debt on the Mersey tunnel.

Mr. Atkins: The debts of the Mersey tunnels amounted to £117 million at 31 March 1989.

British Rail (Investment)

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how much of British Rail's investment programme of £3·75 billion will be financed from its own internally generated cash flow, excluding payments from passenger transport executives under section 20 of the Transport Act 1968 in respect of services operated by British Rail in metropolitan areas;

(2) how much of British Rail's investment programme of £3·75 billion will be financed by passenger transport executives under section 20 of the Transport Act 1968 in respect of services operated by British Rail in metropolitan areas;

(3) how much of British Rail's investment programme of £3·75 billion will be financed externally; and whether the external finance will have to meet the Treasury's criteria of an 8 per cent. rate of return.

Mr. Portillo: Over the next three years, British Rail plans to finance net operating losses of some £0·7 billion and investment of £3·75 billion. Internal resources from depreciation, working capital reductions and asset sales will provide £2 billion. External finance from borrowing and PSO grant will provide £2·2 billion. PTE payments will total £0·25 billion. We do not specifically apportion particular forms of finance between investment and other expenditure. The appraisal criteria for BR investment depend on the nature of the project, not on how it is financed.

Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what cash resources he plans to allocate to British Rail to invest in advanced train protection, resignalling, and other safety measures recommended by the Hidden report.

Mr. Portillo: I refer the hon. Member to the reply to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) on 4 December 1989, at column 88. As my right hon. Friend has told the House, finance will not stand in the way of implementing the report.

Cash Limits

Mr. Ground: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what changes he proposes to make to the cash limits on his votes.

Mr. Parkinson: Subject to parliamentary approval of the necessary Supplementary Estimates, the cash limits for my votes are to be changed as follows:

Class and Vote	Current cash limit	Changes	£ thousands Revised cash limit
1	1,370,744	[1] −2,000	1,368,744
2	238,869	[2] −3,115	235,754
VIII 4	131,398	[3] 4,744	136,142
5	218,707	[4] 621	219,328
	Total	[5] 250

[1] The cash limit has been reduced by £2 million to offset in part increased expenditure required on the Department's other cash limits. Authority for additional expenditure of £17,892,000 which will be met by increased appropriations in aid, will, however, be sought in a spring supplementary estimate, to meet faster than expected progress with schemes included in the roads programme.

[2] Mainly in respect of running costs provision transferred to class VIII, 4. The overall running costs limit of the Department remains unchanged.

[4] Mainly increased requirement for demand-determined rural bus grants.

[5] Transfer from the Department of the Environment cash limit UA1 in respect of that Department's contribution towards the £500,000 grant to Thamesline announced on 23 February 1989, at column 729, and included in vote 2.

The changes do not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Horne Report

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to bring forward legislation to implement the findings of the Horne report.

Mr. Atkins: It remains our intention to introduce legislation to reform the Public Utilities Street Works Act 1950 along the lines of the proposals contained in the consultation paper issued in May, a copy of which is in the Library. A Bill will be introduced as soon as a suitable opportunity can be found.

Litter

Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps are taken to ensure the removal of litter from motorway verges and central reservations.

Mr. Atkins: The Department's code of practice for routine maintenance prescribes the frequency with which its agents are required to clear litter from motorways. Frequencies vary according to local circumstances and are currently being reviewed with the aim of improving sections of road with the worst litter problems.

The Government propose to amend the Environmental Protection Bill so as to place a specific duty on the Crown to keep its land, including motorways, clear of litter.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Churches

Mr. Leigh: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby as representing the Church Commissioners, how many churches have become redundant, or ceased to hold religious services, over the last six months.

Mr. Alison: Ten churches were declared redundant, and therefore ceased to be available for public worship, during the six months to 31 December 1989. Over 16,000 churches remain open for public worship.

EMPLOYMENT

Income Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish in the Official Report, a table showing the percentage increase in real incomes since 1979 of (i) median full-time adult male hospital porters, (ii) male and female primary school teachers, (iii) male locomotive drivers and motormen, (iv) footplate staff, (v) NHS male ancillary staff, (vi) NHS male maintenance staff, (vii) female hospital ward orderlies, (viii) female welfare workers, and (ix) local authority male manual workers in England and Wales.

Mr. Nicholls: Estimates of the increases in real earnings since 1979 are provided in the table:

	Percentage increase 1979-89
Median of Gross Weekly Earnings by Occupation
Full-time males on adult rates
Primary teachers	38
Hospital porters	3
Locomotive drivers and motormen	24
Full-time females on adult rates
Primary teachers	42
Welfare workers	35
Hospital ward orderlies	−2
Median of Gross Weekly Earnings by Agreement
Full-time males on adult rates
Footplate staff	33
NHS ancillary staff	1
NHS maintenance staff	16
Local authority manual workers England and Wales	8

Note:
New earnings survey data deflated by RPI (all items) April of each year.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the percentage increase in real incomes since 1979 of median adult male manual employees in the (i) footwear, (ii) textile, clothing, (iii) mechanical engineering, (iv) motor vehicle industries, (v) study, etc. officers, (vi) accountants, (vii) journalists, (viii) estimators, etc. and (ix) finance, etc. specialists.

Mr. Nicholls: Estimates of the increases in real earnings since 1979 for manual males are provided in the table. Categories (v) to (ix) are non-manual occupations.

Median of gross weekly earnings by industry

	Percentage increase 1979-89
Full-time manual males on adult rates
Footwear	13
Textiles	4
Clothing	2
Mechanical engineering	14
Motor vehicle industries	18

Note:
1. New earnings survey data deflated by RPI (all items) April of each year.

Supplementary Grants

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what changes have occurred in supplementary grants to large contractors in 1989-90.

Mr. Nicholls: In common with other contractors for employment training, each large contractor's supplementary grant levels were reviewed, and new levels agreed, in contracts for 1989-90.

Rochdale Borough

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he will make a statement regarding the current level of unemployment in Rochdale borough; and how many people in the borough of Rochdale have been unemployed for more than a year.

Mr. Nicholls: The information is available from the Library. Unemployment by duration is analysed on a quarterly basis. The latest figures show that in October 1989 there were 2,520 unemployed claimants in the local authority area of Rochdale who had been unemployed for more than one year. The corresponding total number of unemployed claimants was 7,117.

Long-term unemployment continues to fall at a faster rate than total unemployment.

In December 1989 the total level of unemployment in the local authority area of Rochdale was 6,945.

Employment Training

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list those health authorities currently participating in ET as training agents, training managers or as placement providers; for the latter two groups what is the number of contracted and filled places at the latest date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I am aware of 11 health authorities currently participating in ET as training managers. These are listed with details of contracted and filled places at 12 January 1990:

Health authority (HA)	Contracted places	Filled places
South Tees AHA	250	206
Hartlepool	100	84
South West Durham	80	67
Mid Staffs	50	9
North Staffs	100	67
Hull	50	27
West Glamorgan	200	93
East Dyfed	70	37
South Sefton	440	398

Health authority (HA)	Contracted places	Filled places
Liverpool	166	170
Southport and Formby	85	88

I am not aware of any health authorities acting as training agents. Information is not available on health authorities acting as ET placement providers.

Home Workers

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many employers have been prosecuted for not registering their home workers with the environmental health department; whether he has any plans to introduce measures to strengthen the law; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost from individual local authorities.

The Government have no plans to extend the law which was originally part of the Factory and Workshop Act 1901 —now section 133 of the Factories Act 1961—and was introduced to prevent the spread of infectious disease and infestations from the home. Home workers have the same legal protection for health and safety as other employees and self-employed workers under the provisions of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many home workers' projects are in existence in England and Wales; what are their main tasks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The Department is aware of a number of groups which promote the interests of home workers but does not systematically collect information about their numbers and activities.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many home workers the wages inspectorate visited in the past year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: In 1989 the wages inspectorate checked the pay of 874 home workers by means of visits to establishments putting out work. These checks involved subsequent visits to a sample of home workers concerned, but records are not kept of the number so visited.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many industrial tribunal cases have been adjudicated in favour of home workers in the last year.

Mr. Nicholls: This information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many visits he or his predecessor made to home working projects in England and Wales in the past five years.

Mr. Nicholls: None.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what industries in England and Wales employ the largest percentage of home workers; what are their main tasks; and what are the rates of pay in each of these industries.

Mr. Nicholls: Figures showing those industries which employ the largest percentage of home workers and their occupations are not available for England and Wales. National estimates and occupational distributions can be found in tables 3.1, 3.3, 3.4, 3.5, 3.7 and 3.8 of Department of Employment research paper No. 60 by Dr. Catherine Hakim entitled "Home-based Work in Britain: A report on the 1981 National Homeworking Survey and the DE research programme on homework". Tables 6.4 to 6.8 in that report provide information on earnings of home workers at the time the research was carried out. A copy of the paper has been placed in the Library. General earnings data for these industries can be found in tables 8 and 9 of part A of the 1989 new earnings survey, a copy of which is in the Library, but these data do not distinguish home workers' earnings from the earnings of other workers.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what measures he intends to take to ensure that employers supplying work to home workers adhere to the Noise at Work Regulations 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The Noise at Work Regulations apply to home workers in just the same way as to any other employee or self-employed person. When inspectors of health and safety visit employers, including those who employ home workers, they consider compliance with these regulations and take enforcement action where necessary.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of home workers the wages council found illegally underpaid for each of the past 10 years, by year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is shown as follows:

Year	Per Cent.
1980	6·23
1981	5·46
1982	8·32
1983	2·98
1984	6·47
1985	1·30
1986	0·58
1987	1·63
1988	1·03
1989	0·91

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has any plans to require employers to provide proper handling guidelines for any potentially dangerous glues and solvents that home workers may be required to use; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 provides a framework of legislative controls to protect all those at work including home workers.

In addition, the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1988 require all employers to assess risk, identify the precautions that employees have to take when handling hazardous substances and provide the employees with information about the risk and the precautions. These provisions extend to glues and solvents where these may be a hazard to health.

Where home workers are self-employed, those supplying them with substances are required under section 6 of HSWA to provide adequate information about any risks to health and safety.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether his Department has formulated any definition of home working with regard to its present policies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The Department regards home workers as those working at home rather than using home as a base. No more precise definition is currently in use.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Fontainebleau Agreement

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total rebate received by Britain under the terms of the Fontainebleau agreement for the last year for which figures are available; what is the total amount received since the agreement was signed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder: The United Kingdom's abatement was 1,780 million ecu—£1,150 million—in 1989, bringing to 8,630 million ecu—£5,770 million—the cumulative total under the Fontainebleau mechanism. The 1990 EC budget, as adopted, provides for an abatement of 2,430 million ecu—£1,800 million.

Mr. G. A. Johnson

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth will receive a reply to his letter dated 21 December 1989 referring to Mr. G. A. Johnson.

Mr. Lilley: I replied to my hon. Friend's letter on 30 January.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer who will represent the Treasury at the economic and finance meetings of the Council of Ministers on 12 February, 12 March, 23 April, 11 June and 31 March; and what the agenda will be for each meeting.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 30 January 1990]: I or one of my fellow Treasury Ministers will be attending each of the meetings of the Economic and Finance Council. Agenda for these meetings are not fixed until shortly before they take place, but I would expect major topics of discussion over the coming months to include:

economic and monetary union;
the European bank for reconstruction and development;
abolition of fiscal frontiers;
revision of the financial perspectives for 1991 and 1992;
and issues of budget discipline and management.

Personal Allowances

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost to the Treasury would be if personal allowances were raised in line with the inflation rate.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 31 January 1990]: At 1990-91 levels of income, the cost of indexing personal allowances is estimated to be about £1,465 million in 1990-91 and £2,040 million in 1991-92. The additional cost of indexing the basic rate limit is £205 million in 1990-91 and £380 million in 1991-92.

Estimates are based on a projection of the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes and are provisional.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Mark Woodward

Mr. Speller: To ask the Attorney-General if he will instruct the coroner to reopen the inquest relating to the drowning of Mark Woodward on 16 August 1989 and instruct him to pay attention specifically to the tape recordings to and from Milford Haven recently released by Her Majesty's Coastguard.

The Attorney-General: If my hon. Friend will write to me with his reasons for believing that an application to the High Court is appropriate, I will consider the matter.

PRIME MINISTER

Edmonton

Q16. Dr. Twinn: To ask the Prime Minister if she has any plans to visit Edmonton.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Stevenage

Q22. Mr. Wood: To ask the Prime Minister if she has any plans to visit Stevenage.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Local Government Finance

Q69. Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the implementation of the Government's programme for reforming local government finance.

The Prime Minister: Good progress continues to be made on all aspects of the new arrangements. Comprehensive community charge registers have been compiled and charge payers notified of their entries. A £4 million information campaign has been launched to ensure maximum take-up of rebates and relief. The poundage for the uniform business rate has been set and new rating lists are available for public inspection. A circular has been issued with details of the new capital finance system and authorities have received their basic credit approvals. It is now for all local authorities to budget prudently in the light of the revenue support grant settlement approved by the House on 18 January, in the knowledge that they will be held to account by charge payers for excessive expenditure.

Shipbuilding

Q86. Dr. Godman: To ask the Prime Minister if Her Majesty's Government have any proposals for changes in the European Community's sixth directive on aid to the shipbuilding industry; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry is considering the revised levels of support that the Commission notified to member states on 18 January and will make a statement shortly.

Leith

Q99. Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Prime Minister when she next expects to pay an official visit to the port of Leith.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Disabled People

Q132. Mr. Hannam: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the Government's latest proposals to help the disabled.

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security recently announced major proposals to improve social security help for people with disabilities. Our strategy is to improve the balance and structure of benefits for disabled people who are unable to work, and in particular to do more for those disabled from birth or early in life, and to improve the help given to those disabled people who can and want to work. The changes we propose to make include a new disability allowance for people of working age and below to extend help with the extra costs of being disabled; a new disability employment credit to make it easier for disabled people to take up jobs, and an increase of up to £10 a week in severe disablement allowance. Our proposals will give extra help to some 850,000 people and their net effect will be to add by 1993-94 some £300 million to the total cost of the benefits we pay to long-term sick and disabled people and their carers.

North-east England

Q145. Mr. Trotter: To ask the Prime Minister when she next plans to pay an official visit to the north-east.

The Prime Minister: I hope to visit the north-east during the course of the year.

Jobs

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the latest assessments prepared by the EEC Commission on the impact of 1992 on jobs.

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave him on Tuesday 30 January.

Pay Review Bodies

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the latest reports of the pay review bodies.

The Prime Minister: The 1990 reports of the review bodies on the pay of nursing staff, midwives and health visitors, the professions allied to medicine, the doctors and dentists, and the armed forces, and of the Top Salaries Review Body, have been published today. Copies are now available in the Vote Office. The Government are grateful to members of the review bodies for these reports and the time and care which they put into their preparation.

The table shows the overall increases recommended by the review bodies for each group, and their cost:

	Pay bill increase in 1990-91	Range of increase	[1] United Kingdom public expenditure cost per cent	per cent	£ million
Armed forces	10·9	4·1—23·0	458
Doctors and dentists[2]	10·9	9·5—15·2	423
Professions allied to medicine	10·1	8·7—14·7	61
Nursing staff, midwives and health visitors	9·6	[3] 8·9—16·0	630
Top salaries[4]	11·0	7·0—18·7	10

[1] The figures for public expenditure cost differ from those in the Review Bodies' reports. Their figures do not include some costs which count as public expenditure.

[2] Payments to GPs for achieving higher targets for immunisation and cervical screening are recommended by the Review Body as outside intended average remuneration. The payments would add some 0·3 per cent. to the total pay bill and are included in the £423 million.

[3] A very few young staff would receive higher increases of up to 19·7 per cent.

[4] These figures assume that the additional increase of 10 per cent. recommended for Groups 5—7 of the judiciary is phased over two years, with 5 per cent. paid on 1 April 1990.

The Government consider that the overall pay cost in the year 1990-91 implied by these recommendations if implemented in full immediately would be too high. They have therefore decided that the general approach should be to implement the recommendations in full during the year but to stage them so that most groups receive an increase of 7 per cent. from 1 April 1990 with the balance from 1 January 1991.

In the case of the review body on armed forces the Government have decided to accept the recommendations but their implementation will be staged so that 7 per cent. is paid from 1 April 1990 and the remaining 1·7 to 2·5 per cent. of the basic increase together with additional payments is paid from 1 January 1991.

The Government have decided to accept with two exceptions the recommendations of the review body on doctors and dentists, but to stage their implementation so that 7 per cent. is payable in all cases from 1 April 1990 and the remainder of the increases of between 2·5 and 4·5 per cent. plus other payments, depending on the group, from 1 January 1991. The exceptions are the recommendations that the Government rejected last year for extra increases at the top of the consultants' scale and in the size of consultants' distinction awards. It is still the Government's view that the additional 100 permanent consultant posts which are now being created will best achieve the objective of improving the long-term career structure for hospital doctors.

The Government have decided to accept the recommendations of the review body on nursing staff, midwives and health visitors but to stage their implementation so that from 1 April 1990, 7 per cent. is payable to all and in addition the recommendation for changes in London pay and some extra increases in the pay of student nurses take effect from that date. The remaining 2 per cent. of the basic increase and other additional payments will be paid from 1 January 1991.

The Government have decided to accept the recommendations of the review body on professions allied to medicine but to stage their implementation so that from 1 April 1990, 7 per cent. is payable to all and in addition the recommendation for changes in London pay takes effect. The remaining increase of 2·75 per cent. and other additional payments will be paid from 1 January 1991.

The Government have decided to accept the recommendations of the Top Salaries Review Body but to stage their implementation. The basic increase of 7 per cent. recommended for all groups will be payable as to 6 per cent. from 1 April 1990 and 1 per cent. from 1 January 1991. In addition, for senior civil servants the abolition of the fixed scale increments for grades 2 and 3 will take effect from 1 April 1990; the increases in the London allowance for grade 3, and the consequential increases for grade 2, will take effect from 1 January 1991; and the new performance pay scheme for grades 2 and 3 will be introduced from 1 April 1991. For two and three-star officers, the additional increases of 2·75 per cent. will take effect from 1 January 1991. For judges, the extra increase of 10 per cent. recommended for those in groups 5 to 7 will be staged with payments on 1 January 1991, 1 August 1991 and 1 April 1992.

The cost of implementing all the recommendations on this basis will be met from within the public expenditure planning totals published in the Autumn Statement. In the case of the health services, the Government recognise that the full costs could not be accommodated within present health provision without adversely affecting services to patients. The Government have therefore decided to provide an extra £205 million from the reserve for next year. This payment will bring the increase in the total resources available for the National Health Service in 1990-91 over 1989-90 to nearly £3 billion.

The pay rates and scales resulting from the decisions will be promulgated as soon as possible for all the groups concerned. Pensions will follow the rates of salary in payment.

Engagements

Mr. McFall: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 1 February.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 1 February.

Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 1 February.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 1 February.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 1 February.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 1 February.

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 1 February.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 1 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

ENERGY

Electricity Supply Industry

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many tonnes of (a) sulphur dioxide, (b) nitrogen oxides and (c) particulate carbon are discharged into the atmosphere as a result of electricity generation each year.

Mr. Baldry: In 1987 a total of 2,830,000 tonnes of sulphur dioxide and 809,000 tonnes of nitrogen oxides were emitted in the United Kingdom as a result of electricity generation. The reference to particulate carbon in the question is taken as meaning black smoke; coal-fired power stations employ a high-temperature combustion process which avoids the emission of black smoke during electricity generation.

These figures have been taken from the "Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics", a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Figures for 1988 will be available in the next edition of the digest which will be published soon.

Non-fossil Fuel Levy

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what studies he has commissioned of the effect of a non-fossil fuel levy on electricity prices on (a) price and sale prospects of area boards, (b) incentives for larger users to generate their own electricity, (c) fuel prices in the United Kingdom compared to the EEC countries and (d) substitution of gas.

Mr. Baldry: The fossil fuel levy is designed to ensure that the costs of the non-fossil fuel obligation are shared out amongst all electricity suppliers. Otherwise, the public electricity suppliers would be put at a competitive disadvantage and proceeds affected. The levy does not add to the total cost of electricity, it identifies a cost that is already there. In general, therefore, the introduction of the levy will not have a significant impact.

Research Establishments

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what recent visit he has paid to the atomic energy research establishments at (a) Harwell, (b) Windscale laboratories and (c) Dounreay; what matters were discussed; and whether he plans to make further visits.

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State visited Harwell on 20 October 1989. He discussed a variety of matters including the R and D work of the laboratory and the progress being made in meeting the AEA's commercial objectives. He has not yet visited the Windscale laboratories or Dounreay.

Offshore Installations

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many offshore installations in the United Kingdom continental shelf are classified as not normally manned installations; what criteria are applied to determine whether an installation is so classified; and what requirements are in force for safety and evacuation of workers on such installations.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Forty installations have been registered with my Department as not normally manned. There are a number of criteria that are taken into account in determining whether an installation is so classified, including the number of visits necessary to maintain normal operations, the number of persons likely to be on the installation at any one time, the hazards likely to be present and the logistical support provided.

There is a duty on every employer under the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 to ensure the safety at work of all his employees, and this would apply whenever people are present on installations which are not normally manned. In addition, there are specific statutory requirements under the Mineral Workings (Offshore Installations) Act 1971 for there to be lifebuoys, lifejackets, suitable and sufficient means of descent to the water, automatic fire and flammable gas detection systems, remote control safety equipment, fire extinguishers and fireman's equipment on every offshore installation. A standby vessel must be in attendance at all times when there are persons present on a not normally manned installation and in addition operating companies have agreed that a helicopter will be available so that in the event of an emergency all persons can be evacuated with the minimum delay.

Emergency Shutdown Valves

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy which pipelines on the United Kingdom continental shelf have subsea emergency shutdown valves installed; which pipelines have been identified as requiring subsea emergency shutdown valves; which companies operate these pipelines; and when he proposes to introduce regulations making such valves mandatory.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Subsea isolation systems are fitted to the following pipelines:

Murchison 6″ Northern Leg gas gathering line
Esmond to shore 24″ gas pipeline
Claymore to Piper Wye 16″ oil pipeline
Claymore to Tartan 24″ oil pipeline
Claymore to AH 001 14″ oil pipeline
Claymore to shore 30″ oil pipeline
2 × Claymore to Scapa 10″ oil pipelines
2 × Claymore to Scapa 6″ test pipelines
6 × Claymore to Scapa 3″ gas lift pipelines
Brent A 20″ Northern Leg gas gathering line
Fulmar to shore 20″ gas pipeline
Tartan to Piper Wye 18″ gas pipeline
Tartan to AH 001 8″ gas pipeline
Tartan to Claymore 24″ oil pipeline
Tartan to Highlander 12″ oil pipeline
Tartan to Highlander 8″ test pipeline
Tartan to Highlander 8″ gas lift pipeline
Tartan to Petronella 8″oil pipeline
MCP-01 to Piper Wye 18″ oil pipeline.

Subsea isolation systems have also been fitted to the oil and gas pipeline risers of the following floating production installations:

Transworld 58
Deepsea Pioneer
Northsea Pioneer
AH 001
Balmoral 16/21
Buchan "A".

After continuing our consultations on requirements for subsea isolation systems I hope to make regulations early in 1991. In the meantime pipeline-operating companies, in discussion with my Department, have identified at least a further 25 pipelines for which they propose to fit subsea isolation systems. Other pipelines are under consideration.

Fuel Exports and Imports

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, further to his answer of 9 November 1989, Official Report, columns 767-68, if he will now give the equivalent fuel table figures for 1989 on the same basis.

Mr. Wakeham: I refer the hon. Member to the note to my reply given on 12 January 1990, Official Report, columns 768-69, which stated that provisional data for the whole of 1989 should be available in mid-February.

Electricity

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will make it his policy to prepare a national emergency plan to provide a rapid response capability within the electricity supply industry subsequent to vesting day to restore power rapidly to storm-affected areas;

(2) what arrangements he proposes to make to enable electricity distribution linesmen to be transferred on a good will basis to areas with badly disrupted power supplies subsequent to vesting day in the electricity supply industry;

(3) what consultations he has had on the best means of achieving a rapid restoration of power to storm-affected areas subsequent to vesting day in the electricity supply industry;

(4) what is his most up-to-date evaluation of the speed of response of the electricity supply industry to the storms of (a) Thursday 25 January and (b) October 1987;

(5) what powers he will have to ensure that emergency repair staff of the electricity distribution boards can be switched to power cut-afflicted regions subsequent to vesting day in the electricity supply industry; and if he will make a statement;

(6) whether he will carry out a full analysis of the costs and benefits of instituting a rapid response team of electricity linesmen to restore power to power-cut areas subsequent to vesting day in the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Baldry: As in October 1987, the boards in the electricity industry that were badly affected by the recent storm set about restoring supplies rapidly and energetically. Other area boards, the Scottish electricity boards, Northern Ireland Electricity, the electricity supply board of the Republic of Ireland and outside contractors provided prompt and substantial assistance.

I am confident that, after vesting and after flotation, the new companies will continue to give priority to the restoration of supplies to customers and will continue to come to each other's help as occasions require.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Nursery Costs

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to the average cost of a place in (a) nursery school, (b) nursery class and (c) reception class for four-year-olds.

Mrs. Rumbold: Local authority returns of expenditure to the Department of the Environment do not separately identify spending on provision for four-year-olds in nursery schools, nursery classes or reception classes. Expenditure on such provision is included within the primary sector. However, for the purpose of the public expenditure White Paper, my Department does make assumptions about the division of spending between under-fives and over-fives in the primary sector, taking account of the latest projections of pupil numbers. The unit cost implied by the provisional outturn spending attributed to under-fives in 1989-90 is some £1,350. This includes spending on under-fives in nursery schools, nursery classes, and reception classes in primary schools.

Capital Allocations

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table giving for the financial year 1990-91 (a) capital allocations per pupil in county and voluntary controlled schools and (b) capital grant per pupil in grant-maintained schools.

Mr. MacGregor: It is not possible to provide figures on a comparable basis. For 1990-91 local education authorities have received annual capital guidelines for education. It is open to authorities to use the resources avaiable to them for capital purposes as they wish and they are free, within the flexibilities of the local government Acts, to spend above the level of their annual capital guideline from capital receipts and other bources. The annual capital guideline is not split between primary and secondary schools whereas all except one of the existing grant-maintained schools are secondary schools. Nor is information yet available about the distribution of pupils between the two sectors in 1990-91.

Denominational Schools

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he will list by name for each local education authority, and by faith, the denominational schools that have opened since 1985;

(2) if he will list by name for each local education authority, and by faith, the denominational schools that have closed since 1985.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The names of the maintained and non-maintained denominational schools that have opened or closed in 1985 and onwards are given in the table. The list includes maintained schools that have been opened or closed following the approval of statutory proposals; in some cases for the purpose of amalgamation.

The list is not fully up to date, as some replies from local education authorities are still awaited confirming closures in 1989.

Independent schools are shown in the education authority in which they are situated.

Teachers' Pay and Conditions

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has yet received the report of the interim advisory committee on teachers' pay and conditions in 1990-91.

Mr. MacGregor: I have now received the third report of the interim advisory committee on school teachers' pay and conditions. Its main recommendations are:

—a new main scale for classroom teachers providing wide-ranging new local discretions, with increases for individual teachers ranging from 6·4 per cent. to 11·8 per cent. and an average increase of 8·3 per cent.;

—a new system of range pay for heads and deputies with increases ranging from 9·9 per cent. to 11·2 per cent. and an average increase of 10·4 per cent.;

—a 17 per cent. increase in the value of B, C, D and E incentive allowances and an 8 per cent. increase in the value of A allowances;

—an extra 14,400 incentive allowances for the 1990-91 academic year;

—an 8·8 per cent. increase in London allowances from 1 July 1989;

—a new discretionary inner London supplement of £750 a year.

The committee has now been in operation for three years. It has produced an outstanding report. Its recommendations address all the very important issues I asked it to consider when setting this year's remit. They should help substantially to ensure the recruitment, retention and motivation of sufficient teachers of the quality we need to meet the demands of delivering our education reforms. They target resources where they are most needed, enhance flexibility and local discretion, improve career prospects, reward responsibility and good work, and make the profession more attractive to intending teachers. I propose to accept all the committee's recommendations, but as for groups covered by the review bodies, to stage their introduction over the period up to 1 January 1991.

I propose to increase all the pay scales by about 7 per cent. and all incentive allowances by about 8 per cent. as from 1 April 1990. I propose to implement from the same date the IAC's proposals for a new inner London pay supplement and backdated increases in London weighting allowances. The extra 14,400 incentive allowances proposed by the IAC would be introduced from 1 September 1990, as the committee has recommended. The committee's recommendations would be implemented in full with effect from 1 January 1991.

The IAC's report will be generally available next week, when I shall initiate the consultations required by section 3(1) of the Teachers' Pay and Conditions Act 1987 on my detailed proposals for implementing its recommendations.

Research Councils

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he will respond to the advice he has received from the Advisory Board for the Research Councils on the future structure of the research council system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor [pursuant to his reply, 19 January 1990, c. 434]: I wrote yesterday to Sir David Phillips, chairman of the Advisory Board for the Research Councils, giving the Government's response to the board's advice about improving co-ordination between the Agricultural and Food Research Council and the Natural Environment Research Council.

The text of my letter is as follows:

"Dear Sir David
Future Structure of the Research Council System

Thank you for your letter of 1 December, which supplemented the advice in your letter of 15 November about the structure of the Research Council System.

Your further letter asked for guidance on the suggestion that a small working group should be established under ABRC auspices to examine the practicalities of achieving a closer association of the AFRC and NERC, possibly leading to a merger of the AFRC and NERC as recommended by the House of Lords Select Committee. The purpose would be to achieve closer coordination of the research programmes of these Councils, in particular in terrestrial life sciences.

We have considered this proposal in the light of the decision that ABRC should be reconstituted from 1 April, and have concluded that we would prefer the 'new' ABRC to take forward the question of improving cooperation between all the Councils, within the existing Research Council structure. The need for greater cooperation was a major factor in our decision to reconstitute the Board and give it a new remit, and we would now expect the 'new' Board to give urgent attention to carrying this into effect.

As with our earlier exchange, I shall be placing copies of our letters before Parliament."

Copies of this letter and of Sir David Phillips' letter of 1 December are being placed in the Library.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

GATT

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement regarding the Uruguay round of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Mr. Redwood: The Government attach great importance to a successful conclusion to the Uruguay round of multilateral trade negotiations, which is likely to be crucial to the maintenance and strengthening of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. We want to see substantial reductions in trade barriers, the strengthening of the GATT system, and its extension to new areas of trade. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State recently set out the Government's attitude to the Uruguay round in some detail, in a speech at the Royal Institute of International Affairs, and I am arranging for copies of this to be placed in the Library of the House. Formal negotiations on behalf of the European Community are of course the responsibility of the European Commission.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from the British Footwear Manufacturers Federation about the Uruguay round of General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade negotiations.

Mr. Redwood: My Department has received a number of representations from the British Footwear Manufacturers Federation concerning the Uruguay round of multilateral trade negotiations, most recently relating to the tariffs and non-tariff barriers faced by our footwear exports.

Inward Investment

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give a breakdown of inward investment in Britain by standard English region and for Scotland and Wales for each year since 1979, showing the amount received in each region in cash terms and as a proportion of the total in each year.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The table gives details of the number of inward investment decisions known to the Invest in Britain Bureau for the calendar years 1979 to 1988 and the associated jobs for the United Kingdom by region. Comparable information on the total level of financial investment by inward investors is not available.

Regional Assistance

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish in the Official Report the amount of regional preferential assistance paid to each standard region of England, Scotland and Wales in 1988-89, identifying separately the main forms of assistance; and if he will publish equivalent data for each year since 1978-79.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The information requested is as follows:

[1] All figures are gross and include payments to nationalised industries.

[2] The England and Great Britain totals for individual forms of assistance may not always equal the sum of the component parts due to the inclusion of items which cannot be allocated to regions, and because of rounding.

[3] Includes expenditure in Cumbria; otherwise shown within the totals for the Northern Region.

The items included in the expenditure are: regional development grants, regional selective assistance and regional enterprise grants; expenditure on land and factories by the English Industrial Estates Corporation and the Scottish and Welsh Development Agencies; and expenditure on land and factories and grants by the Highlands and Islands Development Board and the Development Board for Rural Wales.

Red Telephone Boxes

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce a statutory duty on British Telecom to notify and consult the local authority when it intends to replace red telephone boxes in conservation areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: Such a duty already exists under the terms of the Town and Country Planning General Development Order 1988 (SI No. 1813).

NESL (Danish Order)

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make a statement as to the financial outcome of the Danish order for ferry boats which was placed with North East Shipbuilders Ltd.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The financial outturn on this contract at North East Shipbuilders Ltd remains subject to final audit and to the terms of sale of the last three ferries remaining from the order. Subject to that, the net losses on the contract are estimated to be of the order of £40 million. This includes the cost of cancellation of nine of the ships from the original order.

Wine

Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he intends to introduce legislation to prescribe the quantities in which wine by the glass may be sold; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: I am pleased to announce that the Government propose to make an order prescribing the measures in which wine may be sold by the glass in licensed premises. The trade's voluntary code of practice on prescribed measures for wine has made a useful contribution in this field. Nevertheless, I believe that the increase in the amount of wine sold by the glass in licensed premises has now tipped the balance in favour of prescribing measures for wine.

We shall shortly be consulting interested parties about the proposal, in particular as to the volumes to be prescribed and the transitional period. We shall also be notifying the proposal to the EC Commission as we are required to do by directive 83/189. We would hope to be able to complete these steps in time to lay the order in Parliament before the summer under the affirmative resolution procedure. This order will have similar effect to that intended under Lord Mason's Weights and Measures (Sale of Wine) Bill which he has indicated he proposes to withdraw today.

Single Market

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish a list of the inquiries which have been authorised by the EEC Commission on the impact of the single market and indicate which of the reports of such inquiries have been published.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 30 January 1990]: The Commission frequently undertakes inquiries in varying degrees of detail on a wide range of European issues. On the single market, the most detailed of these is the Cecchini report, published in 1988, which forecasts the impact of the single market on different industrial sectors. No complete list of Commission inquiries exists.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Southend, East of 24 January, when his Department will complete its assessment of the EEC Commission-Louvain university study on the impact of the single market on regions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 30 January 1990]: My Department is still studying this report, received last week, and will complete its assessment as soon as practicable.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advice and assistance was sought from his Department by the university of Louvain in connection with its report on the impact of the single market on regions.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 30 January 1990]: None.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what manpower in his Department is devoted to providing advice and briefing to industry, commerce and the general public on the 1992 proposals; and what expenditure is devoted to this area of policy.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 30 January 1990]: My Department's "Europe Open for Business" campaign, which is dedicated to providing factual information to business on single market proposals, is run by a unit of 13 staff, supported as required by officials elsewhere in the Department, including regional offices. Expenditure on the campaign since its launch in March 1988 has been £4·7 million, plus £8·9 million on advertising.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the impact of the 1992 proposals on Strathclyde and south Yorkshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 30 January 1990]: The impact of the single market on regions will depend on how successfully individual firms respond. It is therefore not possible to produce reliable assessments of the impact on particular regions as a whole. The single market will provide opportunities and challenges to firms in all parts of the United Kingdom, but the impact of 1992 is only one factor amongst many which will affect economic progress in particular regions.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the EEC Commission/Louvain university report on the impact of the single market on regions will be ready for publication; and if he will make copies available through the Vote Office.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 30 January 1990]: The Commission has not yet decided when or if it will make the report prepared by Louvain university available for publication. I have today placed a copy of the draft report, made available to us by the Commission, in the Library of the House. It is available only in French at present.

RETI

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the formation and financing of the RETI organisation; and whether Her Majesty's Government were consulted on its formation.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 30 January 1990]: We understand RETI to be one of many umbrella organisations concerned with lobbying on European issues. It does not receive Government funding. Her Majesty's Government would not expect to be consulted on the formation of such bodies, and were not consulted in this case.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Creches

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will list by location where creche facilities are provided for working mothers employed in his Department; and if they have to make any payment for this service.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: No nursery facilities are available to staff in my Department but they have access to the Westminster holiday playscheme which is financed by both parental and departmental contribution.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Probation Service

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has any plans to privatise parts of the probation service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The Government intend to publish shortly a Green Paper setting out a number of options for the organisation and management of probation service work. This will include an examination of the contribution that the voluntary and private sectors might make to the service's work. No changes will be made without full consultation. There are no plans to privatise the service.

Correspondence

Mr. Terry Fields: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to reply to correspondence from the hon. Member for Liverpool, Broadgreen, dated 5 December 1989, regarding Sean Agatha, deceased.

Mr. Mellor: I wrote to the hon. Member on 30 January.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth will receive a reply to his letter dated 30 December 1989 referring to Mr. J. R. Green.

Mr. John Patten: I will write shortly to my hon. Friend.

Prisoners (Suicide)

Mr. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will institute an investigation into the suicide of inmates in prison.

Mr. Mellor: We continue to be deeply concerned about the increased incidence of suicide in prison.

A number of initiatives have been taken in recent years to improve the prison service's suicide prevention strategy, including improved screening arrangements, better training and guidance for staff, establishing suicide prevention management groups and encouraging the involvement of the Samaritans. We also intend to examine whether closed circuit television may be a useful aid in some circumstances.

In the longer term we shall have the benefit of research which has been commissioned from the University of Cambridge Institute of Criminology which will focus primarily on incidents of attempted suicide and self-injury in prison and their relationship with completed suicide.

All of this work is valuable and will continue. But, in a shorter time scale, my right hon. and learned Friend has decided that it would be helpful to ask Her Majesty's chief inspector of prions, Judge Stephen Tumim, to undertake a review, under section 5A of the Prison Act 1952, as amended, of our present policies and procedures in the light of information gained from his regular inspections of prison establishments. He will also look at the particular problems presented in this context by mentally disturbed inmates.

Judge Tumim's terms of reference will be:

> To review the effectiveness of the current policy and procedures for the prevention of suicide and self-harm in prison service establishments in England and Wales, with particular reference to the risks posed by mentally disturbed prisoners; and to make recommendations.

Judge Tumim will begin the review as soon as his inspection programme permits and he expects to be able to report to my right hon. and learned Friend in the autumn.

Recidivism

246. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for the last available year what are the figures for those sentenced to a custodial sentence serving a second or subsequent sentence.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is not recorded centrally. The readily available statistics relate to all previous convictions and are published annually in "Prison Statistics, England and Wales" (tables 3.5, 4.2 and 5.2 of the latest issue, for 1988 (Cmnd. 825)), copies of which are in the Library.

Drugs

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many new (a) cocaine and (b) heroin addicts were reported to the Home Office in each of the last five years.

Mr. Mellor: The information for the five years to 1988 is published in table 2 of the Home Office Statistical Bulletin Issue No. 1389, "Statistics of Drug Addicts Notified to the Home Office, United Kingdom, 1988", a copy of which is in the Library. Provisional information for 1989 indicates that in comparison with 1988 new notifications for cocaine increased by 13 per cent.—from 462—and for heroin by 5 per cent.—from 4,630.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what have been the yearly totals of money confiscated since the passing of the Drug Trafficking Offences Act 1986.

Mr. John Patten: Information on the amounts ordered to be confiscated in 1987 and 1988 is given in table 7.25 of "Criminal Statistics England and Wales 1988", a copy of which is in the Library. The current estimate by the national drugs intelligence unit of the cumulative total of confiscation orders made since the Drug Trafficking Offences Act came into force in January 1987, is in excess of £16 million.

Passports

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how long it takes on average to process an application form for a new passport; and what are the reasons why a passport is not issued immediately the application form is presented to the Passport Office.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The processing of a passport application involves a number of stages, including examination of the application and accompanying documents, accounting for the fee, and preparing and issuing the passport. The precise time taken at each stage varies according to the type of application and other factors, and details are not recorded. Passports cannot normally be issued immediately because of the number and variety of the applications received, but priority is given to urgent cases.

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will simplify the application forms for passports; and if he will appoint a qualified work study engineer to analyse the relevance of the current questions asked on the application form.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Passport application forms were considerably revised and simplified in 1988 in connection with computerisation of the passport service, in the light of advice from forms design experts and the results of user trials. The design and content of the forms are kept under constant review for ease of completion and to ensure that the information requested is kept to a necessary minimum.

Litter

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average fine for dropping litter in 1988.

Mr. John Patten: In 1988 the average fine imposed in England and Wales under the Litter Act 1983 was £40.

Outside Experts

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement as to his Department's policy on the employment by the police of outside experts, including scientists, able to assist in the investigation and detection of crime.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The use of outside experts to assist in the investigation and detection of crime is a matter for the operational judgment of chief constables.

Criminal Injuries Compensation Board

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board has any special procedures to deal with cases which are urgent;

(2) if he will take steps to ensure that the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board gives greater publicity to the possibility of interim payments;

(3) if he will take steps to ensure that the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board gives a guarantee that an interim payment will be made within three months on application where the case is obviously urgent or there are circumstances of special hardship.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 31 January 1990]: The board deals with each application on its own merits. Priority is given to cases of severe injury and cases of claims from the bereaved and the elderly.

The criminal injuries compensation scheme, which the board is responsible for administering, enables the board to make interim payments as soon as an applicant's eligibility for compensation has been established. This may take longer than three months. A copy of the scheme is made available to every applicant. Interim payments are made at the board's discretion and are normally called for where the information to assess a final award is not available, for example where only a provisional medical assessment can be given.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff have been employed by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board in each of the past five years; what is the current number; and what is the estimated shortage.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 31 January 1990]: On 29 January 1990, the board was at its full complement of 330 staff. We understand that it is preparing a detailed request for 50 more staff, which we expect to receive shortly. The other information requested is as follows:

1986	204
1987	215
1988	267
1989	312

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the backlog of cases facing the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 31 January 1990]: On 31 December 1989, 96,177 applications were awaiting resolution by the board.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated number of months it takes before an application to the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board receives a final payment.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 31 January 1990]: Information on this point is not available. The percentage of cases resolved by the board within certain periods of registration is shown in paragraph 6 of its latest annual report (Cm 900), copies of which are in the Library.

The figures for 1988-89 are:

	Per cent.
Up to three months	1·0
Three to six months	2·1
Six to nine months	4·8
Nine to 12 months	19·0
Over 12 months	73·1

Telephone Equipment

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the value to crime prevention generally of the use of telephone equipment which displays the caller's number on the recipient's phone.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 31 January 1990]: None. We are aware, however, of newspaper reports claiming success for equipment of this kind operated by Bell Telephone Incorporated of New Jersey, United States. We also understand that research of this system is to be published in the near future in the United States and we shall study it with interest.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has about the effect on the number of obscene phone calls made in America of the introduction of telephone equipment which identified the caller's number; and whether there are any implications for the United Kingdom.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 31 January 1990]: We understand that a report will be published shortly by the school of criminal justice at the State University of New Jersey assessing the effect of introduction of telephone equipment which identifies the caller's number. We shall study this report to see whether introduction of similar equipment here would be beneficial. We are also considering a proposal from the Hull Safer Cities project for an assessment of the preventive effect of a call-tracing system to be operated by Kingston Communications in collaboration with the universities of Hull and Manchester.

West Midlands Police

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has anything to add to his answers of Thursday 25 January in the light of his answers of 5 July 1989 and 14 December 1989, about West Midlands police officers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 29 January 1990]: I regret that the answer given on 25 January was based on incorrect information. I now understand from the chief constable of the West Midlands that one of the officers involved in interviewing those convicted of the Birmingham pub bombings, Detective Superintendent Kelly, was subsequently reprimanded for matters unconnected with his normal police duties.

In providing the answer of 25 January I did not refer to Inspector Matthews because he was not dismissed but, as I informed the hon. Member on 14 December, at column 789, was required to resign.

Homosexuals

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will bring forward legislation to protect lesbians and gay men from discrimination in employment, housing and the provision of other public and private services;

(2) what action the Government are taking to monitor discrimination against lesbians and gay men;

(3) what extra-legal steps the Government are taking to ameliorate discrimination against lesbians and gay men;

(4) what proposals he has to bring British law into line with best practice in other countries of the European Community with respect to the protection of male and female homosexuals;

(5) what research he has commissioned into discrimination against homosexuals;

(6) whether he has any plans to bring forward legislation to remedy discrimination against lesbians and gay men within the legal system;

(7) whether the Government have any plans to introduce legislation to outlaw incitement to hatred on the grounds of sexual orientation along the lines of the legislation being introduced by the Irish Government.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 25 January 1990]: We have no plans to change the criminal law insofar as it affects homosexual relations or to introduce legislation to prohibit differences in treatment on the grounds of homosexuality. I shall write to the hon. Member about the other matters he has raised.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in each of the years 1988 and 1989, how many men were given custodial sentences in the United Kingdom for consenting homosexual acts with males between the ages of 16 and 21 years; and what were the durations of those sentences in each individual case.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 25 January 1990]: Information for 1989 will not be available until autumn 1990.

In England and Wales in 1988, 10 males of, or over, 21 were sentenced to immediate imprisonment for buggery or attempted buggery of a male of, or over, 16 but under 21, with his consent. Thirteen males of, or over, the age of 21 were sentenced to immediate imprisonment for an act of gross indecency with a male under the age of 21. The durations of the sentences imposed are given in the table.

Similar information is not readily available for Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Emergency Planning

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the local authorities that have a statutory obligation to undertake peacetime emergency planning of major industrial sites;

(2) if he will list the major industrial sites by location where local authorities have a statutory obligation to undertake peacetime emergency planning.

Mr. Nicholls: I have been asked to reply.

This information is not collected centrally in this form and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nicaragua

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the ambassador of the United States of America regarding the forthcoming elections in Nicaragua; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: None. We are continuing to monitor the election closely and we await the report of our official observer, Dr. David Browning. Like others, including ONUVEN and the OAS observers, we have been concerned by reports of harassment of the opposition, of misuse of state resources by the Sandinista Front and of continuing inequality of access to the media and to funding. In particular, there was a long delay in releasing the $1·5 million which the National Endowment for Democracy paid into the Central bank for UNO's use in December.

India

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will pay an official visit to the Indian sub-continent.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs looks forward to visiting the Indian sub-continent but has no specific plans to do so at present.

Hong Kong

162. Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he intends to amend the proposals for allowing the number of people from Hong Kong into the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: No.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many officials there are in the present Hong Kong administration at the levels which would be excepted from holding office under the terms of article 74 of the joint declaration.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 31 January 1990]: Exclusion from office after 1997 of specific individuals under section IV of annex I to the joint declaration would depend on whether those individuals were considered Chinese nationals or foreign nationals under the terms of the Chinese nationality law. This is a matter for the Chinese Government.

Spain

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the agenda for his proposed meeting with the Spanish Foreign Minister, Señor Ordonez, on 26 February.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs will be meeting the Spanish Foreign Minister in Madrid on 26 February as part of the process of talks on Gibraltar foreseen in the Brussels communiqué of 27 November 1984. In addition, my right hon. Friend hopes to discuss other matters of mutual interest.

Know-how Funds

Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the enlargement and extension of the know-how funds for central and eastern Europe.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs announced on 22 January that we will establish a single know-how fund for eastern Europe. This will include our existing commitments to Poland and Hungary, but we shall also make available a substantial sum of money to finance help to other eastern European countries once they are firmly committed to reform. Help, as with that we are giving Poland and Hungary, will take the form of advice, expertise and training in the skills needed to manage democratic and free market systems. We do not propose at this stage to put a figure on the size of the overall fund. Money will become available as we identify projects in the different reforming countries. This will give us the flexibility to respond to the different needs of the different countries as they arise.

Eastern Europe

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on his recent visit to eastern Europe.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs visited east Berlin and the GDR from 22-24 January. He had meetings with the Prime Minister, the Foreign and External Economy Ministers, and called on the acting Head of State. He urged them to ensure that the forthcoming elections in the GDR are truly free and democratic. He also met leading opposition and Church representatives. He put forward a package of measures designed to help the people of the GDR.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the help offered by Her Majesty's Government to countries of eastern Europe in respect of democratic voting systems and parliamentary democracy.

Mr. Maude: We are actively considering ways in which we can help the countries of eastern Europe in this field. Groups of Hungarian and Polish politicians have already participated in successful seminars on the United Kingdom parliamentary system organised by the Great Britain/East Europe Centre. Budding politicians from Bulgaria, Romania, Czechoslovakia and the GDR will attend similar seminars in the coming months to look at our political and parliamentary system in order to help them organise their parties and electoral campaigns.

In addition, the IPU is sending fact-finding missions to these four countries to determine how the IPU could be of assistance in the parliamentary field.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his latest assessment of the impact of the new political situation in eastern Europe on the conduct of United Kingdom foreign policy.

Mr. Maude: We warmly welcome the recent historic changes in eastern Europe and we shall continue to support the political and economic reforms which are now occuring. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs was glad to announce on 22 January that our know-how funds for Poland and Hungary will now be expanded to include the remaining countries of the region, as they move decisively toward democracy and the adoption of market-based economic systems.

El Salvador

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether any representations have been made to the Government of the United States of America concerning their policies in El Salvador.

Mr. Maude: We have regular discussions with the Government of the United States on a wide variety of topics including El Salvador.

Ivory

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on which countries have entered reservations to the CITES ban on world ivory trade.

Mr. Maude: Seven countries have entered reservations against the CITES appendix I listing of the African elephant. They are Botswana, China, Malawi, South Africa, Zambia, Zimbabwe and the United Kingdom on behalf of Hong Kong.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much elephant ivory has been exported from Hong Kong since he announced the six-month exemption.

Mr. Maude: None.

Globe 90 Conference

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department will be represented at the Globe 90 conference on economic development and environmental protection, to be held in Vancouver between 19 and 23 March.

Mr. Maude: Yes; and the Department of the Environment will also be represented at the conference.

Overseas Aid

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in ranked order, expressed in terms of expenditure in £ sterling per head of population, the amount allocated to direct overseas aid in (a) the European Community countries and (b) the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries for each of the last three years for which statistics are available.

Mr. Maude: The information is given in the table. Figures are available only for those countries which are members of the development assistance committee of the OECD.

Jammu and Kashmir

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on restrictions placed on British journalists reporting on affairs in Jammu and Kashmir; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: We understand the Indian Government have advised foreign journalists to leave Jammu and Kashmir for their own safety. We believe firmly in the freedom of the press, but in the last resort it is up to the local authorities to decide on whether to allow the continued presence of foreign nationals in an area of tension.

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the United Kingdom continues to support the resolution of the Jammu and Kashmir problem by the United Nations proposal for a plebiscite; what representations he is making to both the Government of India and the United Nations to uphold this proposal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: Britain voted in favour of the various United Nations resolutions on Kashmir. Much has happened since, including the 1972 Simla agreement on bilateral relations between India and Pakistan. We believe the status of Kashmir can be settled only by agreement between the two sides.

Council of Ministers (Business)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish a statement of forthcoming business in the European Community Council of Ministers.

Mr. Maude: The information is as follows:

Forecast of Council of Ministers' business for February 1990

   Adoption of following programmes under 2nd Framework Programme:
      (Poss) Human Genome Research
      (Poss) Agricultural Research
   Co-operation Agreement with EFTA Countries on Science and (possibly) Medical and Health Research
   Common Positions on:
      (Poss) EURET (Transport)
      (Poss) EUROTRA (Revision)
   Conciliation with EP on Framework Programme

3. The Foreign Affairs Council will meet on 5 February. Ministers will take stock of recent developments in EC/US trade relations including EC acceptance of the GATT panel report on the EC's oilseeds regime and the present position of the hormones dispute. The Council is expected to discuss relations with Eastern and central Europe, and preparations for the Bonn CSCE conference. There will also be preliminary discussions on youth exchange schemes for Eastern Europe (TEMPUS) and the European training foundation. Ministers are expected to discuss proposals from the Commission on European Community policy on Japanese car imports, and the Commission's paper on future EC/Mediterrranean relations, as well as the Commission's avis on Turkey's application for EC membership. Ministers will also be asked to agree transitional measures to cover the period between the expiry of the Lome III convention and the implementation, after ratification, of Lome IV. Ministers will discuss preparations for the inter governmental conference on economic and monetary union.

4. The Economic and Finance Council will meet on 12 February to consider a medium term loan for Hungary. The Financial Regulation will be taken with an aim to reach agreement on a revision in March. The Council will also discuss the implementation of surveillance procedures during stage one of economic and monetary union.

5. The Agriculture Council will meet on 12 and 13 February to discuss the annual price fixing, bovine semen and brucellosis in sheep and goats. It may also discuss the proof of export relating to Annexe II documents, the monitoring of export refunds, bovine somatotrophin, African swine fever in Sardinia and food aid for Poland and Romania.

6. At the Internal Market Council on 22 February Ministers will discuss a number of measures relevant to the completion of the single market. Political agreement on the substance of the proposals for the three rights of residence directives was reached at the IMC meeting on 21 December. The question of the appropriate legal bases for the directives remains outstanding and is due to be discussed at the meeting on 22 February.

7. The Research Council will meet on 26 February. The agenda anticipates the adoption of two Research and Development programme proposals, human genome research and agricultural research, and the adoption of co-operation agreements withe EFTA countries on the SCIENCE (Stimulation of the cooperation and interchange of European scientists) and medical and public health research programmes. It is expected that common positions will be agreed on the EURET (Transport) and EUROTA (Machine translation) research programmes. The Research Council will also undertake the conciliation procedure with the European Parliament on the third framework programme for research and technological development, 1990-[illegible] and may consequently be in a position to adopt the third framework programme.

SCOTLAND

Scottish Development Agency

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will state, by grade, the number of employees of the Scottish Development Agency who have resigned from the agency in each of the past 10 years, and the number of employees at a convenient date in each year.

Mr. Lang: The readily available information is set out in the table herewith:

	Number Employed (whole-time equivalents)			Resignations
Year (1 April to 31 March)	Managerial staff	Support staff	Total	Managerial staff	Support staff	Total
1979-80	—	—	723	—	—	58
1980-81	—	—	721	—	—	48
1981-82	—	—	717	—	—	32
1982-83	—	—	732	—	—	35

Year (1 April to 31 March)	Number Employed (whole-time equivalents) Managerial staff	Support staff	Total	Resignations Managerial* staff	Support staff	Total
1983-84	—	—	711	—	—	44
1984-85	221	430	651	26	37	63
1985-86	315	377·5	692·5	23	21	44
1986-87	329	354	683	19	29	48
1987-88	349	345·5	694·5	34	24	58
1988-89	398	286·5	684·5	38	37	75

Prior to 1984-85, most staff fell within Whitley council grades, with others coming into certain industrial and miscellaneous categories. Information on resignations by individual grades before 1984-85 can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

In 1984-85 a performance-related pay scheme was introduced for managerial staff under which staff were no longer positioned in grades. Each post is given a "job score" based on evaluation of the duties involved, for the purpose of determining salary level.

I shall write to the hon. Member with the information by grade for the support staff from 1984-85.

North-East River Purification Board

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list the rivers for which the north-east river purification board is responsible and which are used as part of the Grampian water supply;

(2) if he will make a statement on the current situation in the north-east river purification board with particular regard to the cancelled appointment of the post of general manager;

(3) what are the current duties and structure of the north-east river purification board; and whether there have been any recent changes in these duties and the structure of the board.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answers which I gave to him on 31 January 1990.

Govan Initiative

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if any of his Departments or the Scottish Development Agency has received from Govan Initiative its secure communities project report on Teucharhill; and what responses they have made.

Mr. Lang: The secure communities project report on Teucharhill has not been formally submitted to any Scottish Office Department nor to the Scottish Development Agency.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what contribution the Scottish Development Agency made to the Govan Initiative secure communities project; and what proportion of the total it represented.

Mr. Lang: The Scottish Development Agency has made no direct contribution to this project, although it does contribute towards the funding of Govan Initiative Limited. The project has received Government support through the urban programme.

Labour Clubs (Dundee)

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Tayside indicating (a) how many police officers have been involved in investigating alleged irregularities in the running of the Labour clubs in Ardler, Menzieshill and Whitfield, Dundee, (b) how many police hours have been spent on their investigating, (c) what is the estimated cost so far and (d) how many reports have been made to the Crown Office and the procurator fiscal by the investigating officers.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I understand from the chief constable that six police officers have spent about 3,500 man hours investigating these matters at a cost of approximately £36,000. The investigating officers have made several reports to the procurator fiscal during this investigation, which is not yet concluded.

Erskine Bridge

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the latest accumulated debt on the Erskine bridge.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The accumulated debt at 31 March 1988 was £73·68 million. Accounts for 1988-89 will be laid before Parliament later this spring.

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he plans to take concerning the finances of the Erskine bridge.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No decision has yet been taken on the financing of the bridge beyond the end of the tolling period in 1991.

Mr Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the latest figure for the overall operating deficit on the Erskine bridge.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The latest account for 1987-88 shows an operating surplus for the year of £784,763.

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to write off the accumulated debt on the Erskine bridge.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Future financing arrangements for the Erskine bridge are under consideration.

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to (a) end or (b) increase tolls on the Erskine bridge.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No decisions have yet been taken.

Secondary Schools

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for East Lothian on 14 December 1989, Official Report, column 807, in which he undertook to write to the hon. Member about the review of the staffing formula for secondary schools, if he will now write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Lang: I have written to the hon. Member.

Public Land Sales

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what rules govern the advertising for sale of public land in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 24 January 1990]: Advertising the sale of public land is carried out in accordance with instructions issued by the owning body and is general practice except in special circumstances where it is judged that the best overall benefit to the public interest is achieved without advertising. In these circumstances, it is usual for an open market value to be assessed.

Sport 2000

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to respond to the report of the Scottish Sports Council, Sport 2000; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 25 January 1990]: I discussed the Sport 2000 report with Professor Raymond Miquel, chairman of the Scottish Sports Council, on 20 October 1989. As the document points out, sport has an important contribution to make to the health, social fabric and economy of Scotland.

Hospital Spending

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish in the Official Report, hospital expenditure per head for each of the regional health authorities in Scotland for each of the last five years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 30 January 1990]: The information is as follows:

DEFENCE

Military Nuclear Materials

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the United Kingdom chiefs of defence staff revealed any details to their counterparts from the Warsaw pact of United Kingdom production capacity and stockpile of unsafeguarded military nuclear materials in the meeting in Vienna that began on 16 January.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No.

Lost Property

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the 112 vehicles and 25 items of plant lost over a four-year period at an Army unit outlined in the "Losses Statement of the Appropriations Account 1988-89, Class I, Vote 1"; and what action he is taking in respect of the likely fraud or misappropriation.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The circumstances of this loss are that the vehicles and plant were written off throughout the whole of the Falklands in the four-year period 1982 to 1986, in the immediate aftermath of Operation Corporate when operational needs were of the highest priority and proper accounting systems had not been installed.

The lack of accounting controls at that time meant that, although there was no evidence either way, the possibility of fraud or misappropriation could not be entirely discounted. However, full stores accounting procedures and systems are now in operation and all vehicles and plant in theatre are, therefore, properly controlled and documented.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the estimated sum lost by failure to make adequate charges for the use of support elements at a military establishment outlined in the "Losses Statement of the Appropriations Account 1988-89, Class I, Vote 1".

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The sum noted in the appropriation account 1988-89 is in respect of estimated losses in revenue arising from low charges levied on non-Ministry of Defence students attending courses at the Royal Military College of Science, Shrivenham in the period August 1984 to July 1988. The sum represents a proportion of the military overheads of the establishment in that period, provision for which was omitted from course price calculations following the contracting out of the academic and academic support task to Cranfield institute of technology in August 1984. A staged increase in course prices has been carried out in order to bring them up to the correct levels and this has been reached in the majority of cases. We anticipate that the remaining courses will reach correct price levels in the next two to three years.

Sellafield (Decommissioning)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what payments have been made by his Department to British Nuclear Fuels plc over the past five years in regard to post-operational decommissioning work on facilities at Sellafield used to carry out contracts for his Department; what proportion of the work required arose from the pre-1971 period; and over what period of time negotiations were entered into over the payments for the work.

Mr. Alan Clark: My Department has paid £12·5 million to British Nuclear Fuels plc in respect of decommissioning work carried out on facilities at Sellafield. All the payments made so far relate to pre-1971 liabilities.

Formal discussions concerning the basis on which payments for pre-1971 liabilities would be made to the company took place in the period 1986 to 1988. Those discussions involved not only the MOD but other bodies concerned with work at Sellafield. The MOD made its first payments for decommissioning work in early 1989.

Defence Procurement

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next expects to review the level of defence procurement.

Mr. Alan Clark: As normal, plans for all aspects of defence expenditure, including procurement, will be reviewed in the 1990 public expenditure survey.

European Fighter Aircraft

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the radar order for the European fighter aircraft.

Mr. Alan Clark: I have nothing to add to my reply to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang) on 23 January 1990, at columns 869-72.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many countries have made purchase inquiries about the European fighter aircraft.

Mr. Alan Clark: My Department has already received several inquiries relating to potential future sales of the European fighter aircraft, and we expect many more closer to the aircraft's date of completion. My hon. Friend will, of course, be aware that it has been the consistent policy of successive Administrations not to comment on individual applications for defence exports.

Service Personnel (Benefits)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what figures he has for the number of services personnel and their families receiving (i) social security benefits and (ii) housing benefit.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: This information is not held by the Ministry of Defence. Any social security benefit or local authority housing benefit which a service man may receive is a private matter concerning himself and the Department of Social Security or the local authority, and does not have to be reported to the Ministry of Defence.

Defence Contracts

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those contracts his Department has with Blue Circle Industries plc and its subsidiaries.

Mr. Neubert: We have no current headquarters contracts with Blue Circle Industries plc. Information on subsidiary companies could be provided only at disproportionate costs and, in any event, it is not our custom to release details of individual contracts for reasons of commercial confidentiality.

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the contracts between his Department and Armitage Shanks.

Mr. Neubert: Following the holding reply I gave on 16 November 1989, at column 417, I wrote to my hon. Friend informing him that we were considering, with Armitage Shanks, the precise implications of the proposed closure of its Barrhead factory, and that the extent to which alternative sources of supply would be needed was not yet clear. That remains the position.

Piers Helps

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth will receive a reply to his letter dated 4 December 1989 referring to Piers Helps.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces wrote to my hon. Friend on 29 January 1990.

HMS Conqueror

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 29 January, Official Report, column 62, on what grounds he has decided not to declassify the captain's narrative of HMS Conqueror's Falklands deployment.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The captain's narrative contains information of current operational and technical significance.

Common Land

Mr. Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all the cases when the Land Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 has been used in combination with the Defence Acts 1842 and 1854 to extinguish commoners' rights over any common land in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 25 January 1990]: The Land Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 has been used in combination with the Defence Acts 1842 and 1854 to extinguish rights of common on at least three occasions: at RAF Fylingdales in 1960, at RAF Lakenheath in 1961, and at RAF Woodbridge in 1964. There may have been other instances, but a comprehensive list could not be provided without disproportionate cost.

WALES

Surgery

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list, in order of frequency and with the estimated number of operations, the 10 most common forms of surgery for which patients are admitted to hospitals in (a) Wales and (b) each health authority in Wales.

Mr. Grist: The available figures for 1987 are shown in the table. However, the information may understate the true position in that not all hospitals provide complete clinical details relating to patient discharges and deaths.

Wintech

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make available to the public the correspondence between his Department and the chairman of the Welsh Development Agency regarding the future of Wintech;

(2) if he will make it his policy to expand the work of Wintech; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will place copies of correspondence between his Department and the chairman of the board of the Welsh Development Agency regarding the future of Wintech in the Library;

(4) if he will review the provision of technological and scientific support services to industry by the Welsh Development Agency;

(5) what representations he has (a) had and (b) proposes to have about the future of Wintech.

Mr. Peter Walker: It is agency policy to keep its operations under continuous review in order to respond more effectively to the changing demands of industry. A review of the agency's technology development activities was completed last year and changes announced in September 1989. These were directed to focusing the agency's technology activities more closely on improving service to high technology businesses in Wales and increasing efforts to secure technology transfer through the attraction of key research and development operations to Wales, in order to enhance Wales' technological base.

Apart from the hon. Gentleman's questions, I have received no representations concerning the future of the agency's technology development activities; nor do I intend to elicit any. It is not my policy to publish such correspondence as I may have with the chairman of the Welsh Development Agency.

Drainage

Sir John Stradling Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he proposes to deal with the question of drainage rates and the relationship of the internal drainage boards' finance and membership in relation to district councils.

Mr. Peter Walker: The Internal Drainage Board (Finance) Regulations 1990, which came into force on 24 January, make provision both for the financing arrangements for internal drainage boards and for the membership of these boards. Each internal drainage board is given power to raise its expenses by means of a drainage rate on the agricultural sector, and special levies on the charging authorities, within its area. The regulations provide that the composition of each board should broadly reflect the relative financial contributions of the agricultural and non-agricultural sectors to its expenditure. Members representing the agricultural sector will continue to be elected or otherwise qualify as at present. Those representing the non-agricultural sector will be appointed by the district councils.

Improvement Grants

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will make it his policy that individuals who had applied for housing improvement and repair grants and (a) were told that there was no hope of money being forthcoming and therefore had to go ahead without help but (b) would now have received money under the recently announced open-ending of grant money, should be compensated for at least a part of what they have lost.

Mr. Grist: The priority given to home renovation grants must be a matter for individual local authorities to determine. There is no justification for compensation for those who have undertaken work without grant.

Hospital Services

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) against what criteria he intends to advise health authorities in Wales to judge the advisability of contracting a particular service to a hospital outside the authority's own area;

(2) how he intends to assess the impact on journeys for patients and their families of any decisions by a health authority in Wales to contract particular services to a hospital outside that authority's own area;

(3) whether he will instruct health authorities in Wales to assess the likely impact on travel for patients and their families of contracting any service to a hospital outside the health authority's own area and to weigh that assessment in the balance with other relevant criteria before letting any contract.

Mr. Grist: It will be the responsibility of district health authorities to secure an adequate range, quality and depth of services for their local populations through appropriate contractual arrangements. The document "Contracts for Health Services: Operations Principles", which was circulated to the National Health Service in Wales on 20 October 1989, stated that, in determining the content of the contracts they seek to let, district health authorities will need to reconcile need for service, quality of access to service, and value for money in the mode of provision. As now, the majority of services will be provided in local hospitals. However, referrals already take place to hospitals in other districts and health authorities will therefore wish to make some contracts for such referrals.

In considering these contracts, authorities will carefully consult general practitioners to establish anticipated patterns of referral and will take into account the impact of travelling on patients and their families. We should emphasise that in all cases the object will be to secure the patterns of referral preferred by referrers themselves and that no patients will be forced to travel against their will for treatment. The arrangements made by health authorities to secure services for their populations will be subject to scrutiny in the annual reviews of performance chaired by director, National Health Service (Wales).

Consultants (Distinction Awards)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list the amount of distinction awards paid to consultants in each of the area health authorities of Wales for the last five years;

(2) what sums have been made available for top-up bonuses to hospital consultants in each health authority in Wales in the financial year 1988-89 and in the current financial year; and how much will be budgeted for each authority for the 1990-91 financial year;

(3) what total sum has been made available for distinction awards to hospital consultants in Wales in the financial year 1988-89 and in the current financial year; and how much will be made available in the 1990-91 financial year.

Mr. Grist: The information is as follows:

Notes:

[1] Medical and dental consultants, NHS staff and honorary contract holders

[2] Allocation in 1989-90 takes account of overprovision in 1988-89.

[3] Further funding may be made available in the light of any recommendation for increases in the numbers of consultant distinction awards by the Review Body on Doctors and Dentists Remuneration.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will set out the procedure by which distinction awards are allocated for senior hospital consultants in Wales.

Mr. Grist: Distinction awards are made on the recommendation of the Advisory Committee on Distinction Awards. That committee approaches its regional network of committees, the Royal College and Faculties, the public health laboratory service, the Medical Research Council and regional specialist advisers for nominations. The chairman of the committee then visits each regional committee between May and September to discuss their recommendations and all the nominations received from other sources in order to draw up a provisional list for the consideration and final decision of the advisory committee.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the criteria against which distinction awards are made to senior hospital consultants in Wales.

Mr. Grist: There are no formal objective criteria of award worthiness. General guidelines only are used by the awards committees which look for performances "over and above the call of duty."
Principally these can be indicated by (a) clinical excellence and recognition of leadership in a specialty; (b) research, innovation and improvement in the service; and (c) hard work and outstanding service to the NHS.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the number of hospital consultants who received top-up bonuses in each health authority in Wales in the financial year 1988-89 and in the current financial year.

Mr. Grist: The numbers of practitioners who received distinction awards in 1988-89 in each health authority are as follows:

	Number
Clwyd	35
East Dyfed	17
Gwent	35
Gwynedd	23
Mid Glamorgan	24
Pembrokeshire	6
Powys	4
South Glamorgan	127
West Glamorgan	36

Notes:
Although practitioners are eligible for only one distinction award, some are included more than once in the above list because they work for more than one health authority.
Figures for 1989-90 are not available because the awards for this financial year have not yet been announced.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the period of years for which any distinction awards will operate when awarded to any hospital consultant in Wales.

Mr. Grist: Distinction awards are, at present, paid to consultants until they retire. The White Paper "Working for Patients" proposes a number of changes which would result in the new awards being reviewable every five years and new or increased awards being pensionable only if the practitioner works for another three years in the NHS.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales who is involved in deciding the allocation of distinction awards to senior hospital consultants in Wales and who takes the final decision.

Mr. Grist: Consultant distinction awards in Wales are made by the Secretary of State on the recommendation of the Advisory Committee on Distinction Awards.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the maximum salary of National Health Service consultants in Wales, inclusive of distinction awards.

Mr. Grist: The maximum salary of NHS consultants is currently £38,340. In addition to this, a consultant may be in receipt of one of the following distinction awards A+ £36,420; A £26,840; B £15,340 or C £6,760. The current maximum compares with a maximum of £15,279 in 1979, an increase in real terms of 36 per cent.

Truancy

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make a statement on truancy in each of the local education authorities in Wales;

(2) what is his estimate of truancy as a percentage in the (a) fourth and (b) fifth years in high schools in (i) Clwyd, (ii) Powys, (iii) Gwynedd, (iv) Mid Glamorgan, (v) South Glamorgan, (vi) West Glamorgan, (vii) Gwent; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what measures he proposes to lessen truancy concerning the schools of Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Information on truancy levels is not held centrally. The committee of inquiry into discipline in schools in England and Wales made several recommendations aimed at improving attendance rates. Arising from this the Welsh education support grant programme for 1990-91 makes provision for payment of grant to LEAs for schemes to improve attendance at schools.

The remit of LEA education welfare officers includes responsibility for following up cases of unjustified absence.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make it his policy to make available £3·4 million to health authorities in Wales to tackle waiting lists; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what new measures he proposes to take to eliminate hospital waiting lists; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: We are concerned that some patients have to wait too long for their treatment, which is why health authorities in Wales have been asked to mount a special initiative to reduce such waiting times through more efficient use of their discretionary resources. Authorities' own efforts have been supported by over £4 million of Welsh Office funding since 1986. These intitatives will be further supplemented this year by three specialist centres to treat those who have been waiting too long for treatments such as cataract removal or hip replacement. Subject to approval of the supply estimates, we plan to make available a total of £2·3 million in 1990-91 on the waiting times and treatment centre initiatives.

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many people are waiting for in-patient treatment in (a) Wales, (b) Gwent and (c) Newport;

(2) how many people are waiting for non-urgent surgery in (a) Wales, (b) Gwent and (c) Newport;

(3) how many people are waiting for out-patient treatment in (a) Wales, (b) Gwent and (c) Newport;

(4) how many people are waiting for urgent treatment in (a) Wales, (b) Gwent and (c) Newport.

Mr. Grist: The available information is shown in the table:

Waiting list as at 31 March 1989

	Wales	Gwent	Newport[1]
People waiting for:
In patient treatment	41,964	9,531	5,538
Of which:
Non-urgent surgery[2]	37,790	8,377	4,874
Urgent in-patient treatment	3,493	1,124	641
Out-patient consultation	90,745	13,616	7,039

[1] People waiting for treatment/consultation at Royal Gwent and St. Woolos hospitals.

[2] People waiting for treatment in surgical specialties which are: general surgery; ear, nose and throat; traumatic and orthopaedic surgery; opthalmology; urology; plastic surgery; dental surgery; neurosurgery; gynaecology and cardiac surgery.

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to reduce hospital waiting lists in (a) Wales, (b) Gwent and (c) Newport.

Mr. Grist: The prime responsibility for reducing hospital waiting lists rests with district health authorities using their discretionary resources. Authorities' efforts have been supported by over £4 million of Welsh Office funding since 1986, of which £866,000 has been spent in Gwent on a scheme for trauma and orthopaedics based at the Royal Gwent hospital, Newport. This year will see three specialist centres to offer patients across Wales the choice of earlier treatment for key disabling conditions. The orthopaedic centre in South Glamorgan and the general surgery centre in Mid Glamorgan should be of particular benefit to patients in Gwent. Subject to approval of the supply estimates, we plan to allocate some £2·3 million to the waiting times and treatment centre initiatives in 1990-91.

Rail Electrification

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will meet Clwyd and Gwynedd city councils to discuss rail electrification from Crewe-Holyhead; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will meet the standing conference on regional policy in south Wales to discuss the rail electrification of Paddington-Cardiff; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No. Electrification is a matter for the British Railways Board.

Severn Bridge

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current projected cost of the repair and maintenance work on the Severn bridge.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The current projected costs for repair and maintenance work, which are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport, are as follows:

	1989-90 £ million	1990-91 £ million	1991-92 £ million	1992-93 £ million
Repair (including strengthening	14·9	12·2	2·8	0·1
Maintenance	2·3	2·7	1·8	1·8

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the estimated final cost of repair work likely to be on the Severn bridge.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The final cost of repair and strengthening work on the Severn bridge is estimated to be £70 million at 1989-90 prices.

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the nature of work still to be done on the Severn bridge.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The work still to be done on the Severn bridge involves completing the jacking up of the piers and resurfacing.

Health Service (Resources)

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to increase the financial resources of the Health Service in (a) Wales, (b) Gwent and (c) Newport.

Mr. Grist: I would refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, North (Mr. Jones) on 11 January when my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced the revenue and capital allocations to health authorities in Wales for 1990-91, including those in respect of the Gwent health authority. The distribution of resources within the district is a matter for the health authority to decide.

The distribution of the further sums referred to in the reply as being for centrally directed developments in 1990-91 will be announced in due course.

Gwent Health Authority

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he next plans to meet the Gwent area health authority.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no immediate plans to meet the Gwent district health authority.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Investment

14. Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the current level of investment in Belfast by the private sector.

Mr. Needham: Private investment in Belfast has increased dramatically in recent years. This is particularly so in the city centre where major projects completed in the past five years, under way or programmed total £573 million. In addition, during the past five years IDB has backed industrial projects with a total planned investment of £191 million.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what policies he will be pursuing in 1990 to attract inward investment to Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The task of attracting inward investment to Northern Ireland falls to the Industrial Development Board for Northern Ireland, whose policies are published in its medium-term strategy 1985-90. I am currently discussing with the IDB a new medium-term strategy, effective from April 1990. Although the detail has yet to be agreed, the basic thrust gives a commitment "to concentrate the promotional efforts in major markets for internationally mobile investment and sectorally in areas where Northern Ireland has particular strengths."

43. Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the current level of inward investment in the Province.

Mr. Needham: Since 1 April 1986, a total of 5,288 jobs have been promoted in Northern Ireland through new foreign-owned projects. In addition a further 5,773 jobs should result from investment into Northern Ireland by GB-owned companies. These projects have brought total new financial investment of £576 million. I am encouraged by this level of activity which includes some notable successes such as the Province's first South Korean investment.

27. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the level of investment in Londonderry by the private sector.

Mr. Needham: A complete picture is not available of investment in Londonderry by the private sector. Statistics are, however, available for the period 1983-89 which produces a total of £40 million either spent, under way or projected. This £40 million figure essentially relates to retail, offices, shops, restaurants and hotel developments.

Inter-party Talks

15. Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress of inter-party talks among the constitutional parties in Northern Ireland.

40. Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress he has made towards devolution in Northern Ireland.

41. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on his plans for devolution.

Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he has taken to pursue the establishment of devolved institutions in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Brooke: I refer my hon. Friend and the hon. Members to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Ludlow (Mr. Gill).

Castle Court Development

16. Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will meet a deputation of independent traders occupying premises off Smithfield market, Belfast, to discuss issues arising from the Castle Court development.

Mr. Needham: I am prepared to meet the Smithfield traders. Meetings have already taken place with officials and all possible action has been taken to minimise the adverse effect during construction of this major £100 million development.

Security

17. Mr. Molyneaux: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the security situation in Northern Ireland.

23. Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the security situation in the Six Counties.

48. Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the current security situation in Northern Ireland.

50. Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the security situation in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Brooke: Since I answered a similar question on 14 December 1989, eight people have been killed in Northern Ireland in incidents directly related to terrorism. They included six civilians, a member of the Royal Ulster Constabulary and a part-time member of the Ulster Defence Regiment. Last year 430 people were charged with serious terrorist offences in Northern Ireland and large quantities of lethal weapons, ammunition and explosives were recovered, both in Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland.

51. Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will call for a report on the security situation in Mid-Ulster; and what further security measures he will introduce to secure the safety of constituents of the hon. Member for Mid-Ulster.

Mr. Cope: I am always particularly conscious of those communities that have borne a high level of terrorist attacks. I have regular and frequent meetings with the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary and others with responsibility for security to discuss security not only in Mid-Ulster but in Northern Ireland as a whole. New measures which might improve the security situation are under constant review; where practicable they are implemented.

19. Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the Government's security policies in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Cope: A measure of the Government's success is the fact that the terrorists have not advanced any of their causes by one step in many years of violence. The Government, the Royal Ulster Constabulary and the Army and the people of Northern Ireland remain resolute. Terrorism is futile.

Health Expenditure

18. Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the level of health spending in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: Total funding for the health and personal social services in Northern Ireland in 1989-90 will amount to £962 million—equivalent to about £609 per head of population. This remains substantially above levels in England and Wales and is a continued recognition of the Province's need for additional health and social services care, despite other pressures or resources.

Shoppers

20. Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last raised the Irish Government's restrictions on the freedom of movement of southern Irish shoppers into Northern Ireland at a meeting of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference.

Mr. Cope: We have raised with the Irish Government on several occasions recently, within the Conference and elsewhere, the restrictions they have imposed on travellers' allowances. The European Court will now decide on the legality of the restrictions: its hearing will take place on 21 February, and the United Kingdom Government will be represented.

Legal and Judicial Discussion

21. Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent discussions he has had concerning legal and judicial matters pertaining to Northern Ireland and with whom.

Mr. Cope: The Secretary of State and I frequently have discussions with a wide range of people on a wide range of issues including legal and judicial matters. If the hon. Gentleman has a specific matter in mind, I will endeavour to provide the information requested.

Beef Farmers

22. Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action he has taken or proposes to take to alleviate the financial position of farmers involved in the beef industry in Northern Ireland.

38. Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he intends to take to improve returns to beef producers in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We have urged my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to seek a devaluation of the United Kingdom green pound in the context of this year's price-fixing round.

We have also asked him to take steps to ensure that the maximum support allowable under the EC beef intervention arrangements is provided for the beef cattle market in Northern Ireland.

The problem of low returns for beef production, particularly winter finishing, in Northern Ireland is not new. There are structural weaknesses in the beef production and processing sectors which need to be addressed and we have asked officials to examine possible solutions to these problems with the farming and commercial interests involved.

Intergovernmental Conference

24. Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what matters were discussed in the last meeting of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the recent meeting of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference.

Mr. Brooke: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave earlier today to a question from the hon. Member for Dundee, West (Mr. Ross).

34. Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was discussed at the last meeting of the Anglo-Irish intergovernmental body; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I assume that the right hon. Member is referring to the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference which last met on 30 November 1989 and I refer him to the answer I gave earlier today to a question from the hon. Member for Dundee, West.

Devolution

25. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which leaders of political parties in Northern Ireland he will consult in pursuing his proposal to reopen discussions on devolution; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I would expect to consult the leaders of all the main constitutional political parties in Northern Ireland about devolution.

30. Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress of his talks with Northern Ireland politicians concerning more local involvement in the government of the Province; and what interest has been shown in the possibility of establishing local authorities similar to the authorities within the rest of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Brooke: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Ludlow (Mr. Gill). In their talks with me, most Northern Ireland politicians have looked towards the establishment of a devolved form of government for Northern Ireland as a whole, with an appropriate role for representatives of the minority community. The Government would give serious consideration to any proposals for more local involvement which were workable and seemed likely to command widespread acceptance.

29. Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has recently had with Northern Ireland politicians concerning more local involvement in the government of the Province; and if he will make a statement.

42. Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last had formal discussions with the constitutional political parties in the Province.

Dr. Mawhinney: Last year my right hon. Friend held meetings with the leadership of the Ulster Unionist party, the Ulster Democratic Unionist party, the Social Democratic and Labour party, the Alliance party for Northern Ireland, the Workers party and the Ulster Progressive Unionist party at which the prospects for transferring powers to locally elected representatives were discussed. So far this year he has held such meetings with the Social Democratic and Labour party (most recently on 19 January); and I have met the leader of the Alliance party (most recently on 23 January). In addition, my right hon. Friend and his ministerial colleagues have had many other meetings, formal or less formal, over recent months, with politicians from all the main constitutional political parties, when the prospects for political progress among other matters have been discussed.

Irish Medium Education

26. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment has been made of the availability of curriculum materials for Irish medium education for primary age children.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Government recognise the need to improve the availability of curriculum materials in Irish and are giving financial assistance for the production of suitable materials. The needs will be kept under review as part of the implementation of the common curriculum.

Road Casualties

28. Mr. Stanbrook: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the current level of road casualties.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: In 1989 there were over 7,000 crashes or collisions involving personal injury or death. The total number of 11,611 casualties includes 9,416 slight injuries, 2,014 serious injuries and 181 deaths.

33. Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the programme to reduce road casualties.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Targets were set last autumn to reduce by one third within the 12 months to halloween 1990, the recent average road death total of 210 people, and to cut serious injuries by one third by the end of the century. The death rate is down by 20 per cent., though the period covered so far is too short to be significant.

The newly established road casualty reduction unit will seek to create a climate of public opinion and awareness which is more acceptable to the effective promotion of road casualty reduction; and to examine and evaluate all existing road casualty reduction measures and to identify new measures.

Republic of Ireland

35. Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met the Prime Minister of Eire; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Brooke: I last met the Taoiseach when paying him a courtesy call in Dublin on 28 November 1989. It was not the occasion for discussion of substantive business.

44. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what subjects he expects to discuss at his next meeting with representatives of the Government of the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Brooke: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Basingstoke (Mr. Hunter).

Social Security Administration

36. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the reorganisation and development of the social security administration.

Mr. Needham: Over the next few years the administration of social security will be improved through the introduction of a sophisticated new computerisation programme known as operational strategy. A major new system for the payment of income support was introduced last month and will be extended to cover all 34 social security offices by January 1991. Further systems for other benefits will be introduced later. This programme will mean a better service to the public, improved jobs and working conditions for staff and increased value for money for the taxpayer. It will cost £45 million and will break even in 1994-95.

With the same aims of improving service quality and efficiency the Department of Health and Social Services is conducting a feasibility study to consider whether social security operations in Northern Ireland should become an executive agency in line with the next steps initiative. The report of the study will be considered by Ministers shortly.

Rural Development

37. Mr. John Browne: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has to encourage development in rural areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There is a need to focus and co-ordinate action towards social and economic development in the most deprived rural areas of Northern Ireland. An interdepartmental committee on rural development will review policies and programmes in these areas to ensure the maximum impact of existing expenditure with due sensitivity to identified needs in the areas themselves.

The opportunities for further action will be examined in light of the committee's findings and recommendations.

Security Forces

31. Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what initiatives he has taken to promote public confidence in the security forces.

32. Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures he has taken to further public confidence in the security forces.

Mr. Cope: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Rutherglen (Mr. McAvoy).

Integrated Education

39. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress of integrated education.

Dr. Mawhinney: There are at present 10 integrated schools operating in Northern Ireland of which seven have achieved maintained status. The Education Reform (Northern Ireland) Order 1989, which comes into operation on 20 February 1990, introduces provisions that will facilitate the development of integrated schools and which will, I hope, increase the opportunity to opt for integrated education for those parents who wish it for their children.

These provisions do not seek to impose integrated schools and the rate of progress will be determined entirely by parental demand.

Community Workshops

45. Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the effects of proposed changes in the funding of youth training projects in community workshops.

Mr. Needham: Under the new arrangements community workshops will become recognised training organisations and there will be a greater emphasis on quality training with outcomes, including the attainment of vocational qualifications. The workshops will be paid a set amount per trainee and, compared with the present system, the management committee will have the freedom to make decisions on how to operate and how to organise their training programmes. I have listened very carefully to the representations made to me in recent weeks and at my meeting last Monday with the Northern Ireland Association of Community Workshops I told them of modifications I had decided to make to the original proposals to meet their concerns. I am hopeful that the workshops' response will be positive and that they will now proceed to draw up their operational plans for 1990-91.

Small County Towns

46. Dr. Blackburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on his proposals to revitalise small county towns.

Mr. Needham: Since 1987 the Department of the Environment has been extending its environmental improvement programme outside the cities of Belfast and Londonderry and there are also programmes for comprehensive development, pedestrianisation and conservation and open space grants.

The Department also administers a package of financial incentives for urban regeneration made available by the International Fund for Ireland. I understand that the fund is presently reviewing its programmes including its urban development programme which has provided support for regeneration of towns and villages outside Belfast and Londonderry.

Shootings

47. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a further statement on the shooting of the three men in west Belfast on 13 January.

Mr. Cope: I have nothing to add to the answers given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to the hon. Member for Kingston upon Hull, North (Mr. McNamara) and other hon. Members on 15 January 1990, at columns 21-27.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

49. Mr. Barry Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will consider a full scale review of the workings of the Anglo-Irish Agreement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: A review of the working of the Intergovernmental Conference as provided for in article 11 of the agreement was completed in May 1989. Copies of the report recording the outcome of the review were placed in the Library at the time. There are no plans for a further review at this stage, but paragraph 29 of the review report provides that

"If in the future it were to appear that the objectives of the Agreement could be more effectively served by changes in the scope and nature of the working of the Conference, consistent with the basic provisions and spirit of the Agreement the two governments would be ready in principle to consider such changes."

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects to phase out the Anglo-Irish Agreement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The Government are committed to the Anglo-Irish Agreement, and to the principles it embodies, but I remain ready to consider constructive proposals for political progress which have a wide measure of support.

Hospital Beds

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many of the different categories of hospital beds there are at present; and how many there were for the equivalent categories 10 years ago.

Mr. Needham: The earliest year for which this information is available is 1980.

Average daily number of available beds

Category	1980	1988-89
All specialties	17,064	14,686
Acute	7,168	6,017
Obstetrics	732	702
Geriatric medicine	2,528	2,564
Mental illness	4,779	3,900
Mental handicap	1,533	1,345
General practitioner beds	324	158

Hospital Building

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the five largest hospital building projects in Northern Ireland currently under construction; and what is the projected cost of each.

Mr. Needham: The information is as follows:

Project	Cost £ million
New Antrim Hospital	41·1
Mater Hospital, Belfast—reconstruction scheme	13·8
Gransha Hospital, Londonderry—Geriatric Unit and Day Hospital	5·1
Musgrave Park Hospital, Belfast—Geriatric Unit and Day Hospital	2·5
Royal Victoria Hospital, Belfast—extension of cardiac surgery intensive care facilities	1·7

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what have been the five largest hospital building projects completed in Northern Ireland since 1979; and what is the cost of each.

Mr. Needham: The information is as follows:

Project	Cost £ million
Belfast City Hospital Tower Block	61·0
Daisy Hill Hospital, Newry—major extension	6·1
Altnagelvin Hospital, Londonderry—nucleus cluster II	3·2
Erne Hospital, Enniskillen—Geriatric Unit and Day Hospital	3·1
Altnagelvin Hospital, Londonderry—nucleus cluster I	3·0

Teachers

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will establish a teaching council representative of teachers in Northern Ireland to work in partnership with Government on professional matters related to the teaching profession and the raising of educational standards.

Dr. Mawhinney: I am satisfied that the current arrangements for matters such as the standards of qualifications and entry to the profession and responsibility for teachers' probation and recognition are working satisfactorily. There are no plans for changes of the type suggested by the hon. Member.

On the general issue of raising educational standards, I look forward to a continuing partnership with the teaching profession to achieve the objectives set out in the Education Reform (NI) Order 1989.

Right to Fuel Campaign

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he next expects to meet representatives of the right to fuel campaign.

Mr. Needham: I do not have any immediate plans to meet representatives of the right to fuel campaign.

Breath Testing

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many breath tests were carried out over the Christmas and new year periods in each of the last five years in Northern Ireland; and how many proved positive.

Mr. Cope: The table details the roadside evidential breath tests made by the Royal Ulster Constabulary in each of the last five years during the Christmas and new year periods:

Year	Tested	Positive
1985	70	25
1986	89	27
1987	34	10
1988	49	19
1989	105	41

Enterprise and Investment

Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent initiatives he has announced designed to encourage enterprise and investment in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The Government are firmly committed to the promotion of enterprise in Northern Ireland and this commitment is reflected in the wide range of enterprise activities of the Local Enterprise Development Unit (LEDU), which is funded by the Government. The importance of the work which LEDU is doing is demonstrated by the substantial increase in resources which the Government are making available to LEDU in 1990-91. Examples of recent LEDU initiatives include stimulating and supporting innovatory technological projects with export potential and an enterprise awareness campaign.

As regards investment, one of the primary objectives of the Industrial Development Board for Northern Ireland is to seek to attract investment from Great Britain and overseas. The IDB is concentrating its efforts on those sectors which are most likely to produce mobile investment projects whose requirements can be matched by the particular strengths and expertise which Northern Ireland offers. For example the IDB is seeking to attract service sector projects from the south-east of England because of the difficulties of recruiting and retaining staff which are intensified by the falling birth rate there. These difficulties do not apply in Northern Ireland where the numbers entering the labour market with good educational qualifications will increase during the 1990s.

Tourism

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will review the composition and membership of the Northern Ireland tourist board; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: The present members of the board were appointed for a three-year term ending on 30 June 1991. I will take the opportunity of such occasional vacancies as occur before then to ensure that the board has the range of skills and experience needed to implement the tourism strategy announced last year.

EC Structural Funds

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide an estimate of European Community structural funds available to Northern Ireland for 1990-91.

Mr. Cope: The scale and likely timing of structural funds assistance to Northern Ireland is set out in the Community support framework document, recently agreed with the Commission. This forecasts that for the EC budgetary year 1990—the nearest analogue to our own 1990-91 financial year—Northern Ireland's structural funds commitment will amount to 160 million ecu (about £110 million at today's exchange rate).

"War Without Honour"

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what study he has made of Captain Fred Holroyd's book "War Without Honour".

Mr. Cope: The Department and I are aware of the contents of the book.

Electricity

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much electricity was produced by the Irish Republic for Northern Ireland in the last available 12-month period.

Mr. Needham: None.

Stevens Inquiry

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the cost so far of the Stevens inquiry in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Cope: Approximately £0·5 million up to the end of January.

Harbour Development Scheme (Ardglass)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the required funds will be released for the harbour development scheme at Ardglass in South Down; and what is the estimated commencement date for the scheme.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The results of the model study on proposed improvements to Ardglass harbour have indicated that a larger scheme than was originally envisaged would provide greater shelter within the harbour. A cost-benefit analysis for a larger scheme needs to be completed to establish whether the much greater expenditure would be justified and, if it would, to support a bid for the additional grantaid in competition with other demands for Government funding. At this stage it is not possible to indicate a commencement date.

Educational Maintenance Allowance

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table showing in 1980-81 and for each of the school years from 1985-86, inclusive (a) the value of the educational maintenance allowance and (b) the means-test level, and the indexed real value of the allowance using (i) 1980-81, (ii) 1985-86 and (iii) 1989-90 as a base.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is as follows:

School Year	Maximum Allowance	Means-test Levels		Indexed Real Value
		Lower	Upper	1980-81	1985-86	1989-90
	£	£	£	£	£	£

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information is available to indicate the number of educational maintenance allowances paid in each board area in each school year from 1985-86, inclusive.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is as follows:

Board	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89	[1]1989-90
Belfast	226	230	109	67	35

[1] Estimated.

Young Offenders

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish the figures for the number of people in Northern Ireland who were convicted of offences in Northern Ireland when under the age of 20 years, and have been detained for more than 10 years and are still detained.

Mr. Cope: Thirty-five such prisoners have served periods of 10 years or more in prison and are still detained. Of these 11 are Secretary of State's pleasure cases and 21 are life sentence prisoners; the remaining three are serving determinate sentences.

Student Loans

Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has received any representations on student loans in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Mawhinney: Since the publication of the White Paper "Top-Up Loans for Students" (Cm. 520) in November 1988 representations expressing a variety of views have been received from four Members of Parliament, two district councils, the Fair Employment Agency, local representatives of the National Union of Students and other student bodies. In addition, some 400 postcards were received during the course of a campaign mounted by student unions.

Social Security

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total amount (a) spent, (b) estimated to be spent and (c) planned to be spent on social security in Northern Ireland in actual and at 1989 prices for each of the years 1978-79 to 1992-93; what was the cash and real terms percentage increase for each year; and what is his estimate of each year's increase accounted for by (i) an increase in the number of claimants and (ii) a real terms increase in benefit levels.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 29 January 1990]: The total amounts of social security expenditure in Northern Ireland for the years in question are set out in the table:

	£ million (cash)	Actual percentage increase annually	£ millions (1989 prices)	Real terms percentage increase annually
1978-79	494	20·5	1,162	8·8
1979-80	590	19·4	1,189	2·3
1980-81	717	21·5	1,221	2·7
1981-82	865	20·6	1,341	9·8
1982-83	995	15·0	1,439	7·3
1983-84	1,084	8·9	1,498	4·1
1984-85	1,190	9·8	1,566	4·5
1985-86	1,298	9·1	1,621	3·5
1986-87	1,412	8·8	1,706	5·3
1987-88	1,492	5·7	1,712	0·4
1988-89	1,556	4·3	1,665	−2·8
1989-90	1,698	9·1	1,698	2·0
1990-91	1,860	9·5	1,771	4·3
1991-92	2,017	8·4	1,856	4·8
1992-93	2,124	5·3	1,897	2·2

The cash expenditure column shows amounts spent for the years 1978/79 to 1988/89, the latest available forecast for the current year 1989/90 and planned expenditure for 1990/91 onwards.

The percentage increases in real terms mainly reflect the ever increasing number of beneficiaries. An accurate breakdown between this increase and the real terms increase in benefit levels is not readily available.

Disabled People

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the effect of the proposals contained in, "The Way Ahead: Benefits for Disabled People" on claimants in Northern Ireland; and if he will estimate the number of people in Northern Ireland who will benefit from the proposed mobility component together with his estimate of the number who will benefit from the proposed care component.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 29 January 1990]: On the basis of the well-established principle of parity in social security provision between Northern Ireland and Great Britain, the new proposals affecting social security entitlement for the disabled and their carers will be introduced in Northern Ireland and on the same time scale as in the rest of the United Kingdom. In addition to those currently entitled to mobility allowance and attendance allowance in Northern Ireland, it is estimated that 4,000 people will benefit from the mobility components and 4,000 from the care components of the proposed disability allowance.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will meet representatives of the disabled in Northern Ireland to discuss the Government Paper, "The Way Ahead: Benefits for Disabled People", and if he has any plans to issue an equivalent document for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 29 January 1990]: As parity in social security provisions between Northern Ireland and the rest of the United Kingdom remains Government policy, there are no plans to issue a further document for Northern Ireland. My noble Friend the Minister responsible for health and social services in Northern Ireland will be pleased to hear the views of representatives of the disabled in Northern Ireland on the new proposals.

Hospital Services (Privatisation)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the impact of the proposals for the privatisation of hospital services upon the equality of opportunity between the two communities and between the sexes.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 29 January 1990]: The health and social services boards are fully committed to the principle of equality of opportunity for all employees. Companies tendering for contracts in the health and personal social services are required to meet their statutory obligations under the fair employment and sex discrimination legislation.

SOCIAL SECURITY

One-parent Families

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much was paid in benefit in 1989 to one-parent families in Britain; and what estimate he has as to the amount likely to be spent in 1990.

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the annual cost of support for one-parent families.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information is set out in the table:

Social security expenditure on lone parents
£ million, Great Britain

	Cash prices	Real terms (in 1989-90 prices)
[1]1988-89	3,630	3,884
1989-90	3,930	3,930
1990-91	4,290	4,086

Notes:
[1] Revised figures for 1988-89 take account of amended estimates of Housing Benefit and Child Benefit expenditure.
[2] Benefits included are Child Benefit, One Parent Benefit, Income Support, Family Credit, Housing Benefit and Maternity Benefit.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what improvements have been made to benefits for single parents since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Improvements made to the benefit system for lone-parent families since 1979 are shown in table 1. Other improvements to the benefit system for families with children which have also helped lone-parent families are shown in table 2. These are in addition to increases of benefit in annual upratings.

Table 1
Improvements In Benefit System for Lone Parent Families
Date and Change

November 1980
Supplementary Benefit. The £6 weekly flat rate disregard was replaced by a tapered earnings disregard up to a maximum of £12 (first £4 of earnings disregarded in full, and half of the amount of any earnings between £4 and £20 also disregarded.)

April 1988
Income Support. The new structure of personal allowances provided that all lone parents aged 18 or over received the full adult rate of Income Support. For single people without dependants this rate only available from age 25.

Lone parent premium introduced; paid on top of the family premium from the outset of a claim for those lone parents who did not qualify for another type of premium.

Earnings disregard increased from the £12 a week tapered disregard to a flat rate £15 a week.

Family Credit. A much more generous scheme for all low-income families than the Family Income Supplement scheme.

Lone parent families assessed at the same level as two-parent families.

One Parent Benefit disregarded in calculating a claimant's income.

Housing Benefit. General alignment of benefit rules with Income Support, with higher level of lone parent premium in Housing Benefit providing an incentive to move off Income Support.

Proposed Improvements

October 1990

Housing Benefit, Community Charge Benefit. For lone parents not on Income Support earnings disregard to be increased from £15 to £25 a week.

Table 2

Improvements in Benefit System for Families with Children which have also helped Lone Parent Families

Date and Change

November 1979

Supplementary Benefit. Introduction of age-related heating addition for children under 5 years of age.

November 1980

Supplementary Benefit. Reduction of qualifying period for long-term scale rate from 2 years to 1 year.

July 1982

Maternity Grant. The £25 Maternity Grant made non-contributory.

November 1985

Family Income Supplement. Age-related rates for children introduced.

April 1987

Maternity Benefits. Introduction of Statutory Maternity Pay paid by employer.

More recent contribution test for Maternity Allowance for women not entitled to Statutory Maternity Pay.

Greater choice for women as to when to give up work in pregnancy without affecting title to either Statutory Maternity Pay or Maternity Allowance.

April 1988

General. Social Security reforms improved the position for those wanting to work.

For the first time the income-related benefits aligned so that entitlement to Income Support, Housing Benefit and Family Credit assessed using the same basic rules.

By assessing Famil Credit and Housing Benefit on net rather than gross income the worst effects of the poverty trap eliminated.

Income Support. Family premium introduced to help families bringing up children.

Value of interest in former home disregarded for 26 weeks following estrangement or divorce.

Housing Benefit. Start point for Housing Benefit became 100 per cent. of eligible rent and 80 per cent. of eligible rates.

April 1989

Income Support, Family Credit, Housing Benefit. Children's rates enhanced by 50p over and above amount needed to maintain their real value.

Proposed Improvements

April 1990

Income Support, Housing Benefit, Community Charge Benefit. Extra 50p to be added to the family premium over and above the amount needed to maintain real value.

Family Credit. Adult credit to be increased by £1 over and above the amount needed to maintain real value.

Disablement Benefit Claims

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claims or requests for review of disablement benefit are held up at his Birkenhead offices awaiting guidance on CI/156/88.

Mr. Scott: A total of 1,069 new claims and 832 review applications have been received to date by the two social security offices serving the Birkenhead area following the decision of the commissioners CI/156/88. These are now being processed.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on what date the Commissioners' decision CI/156/88 concerning vibration white finger claims was issued.

Mr. Scott: Commissioners' decision CI/156/88 was issued on 1 September 1989.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when his offices in the north-western region will start to take CI/156/88 into account in making their decisions.

Mr. Scott: Claims affected by and taking account of commissioners' decision CI/156/88 began to be processed from 19 January 1990 in all local offices.

Attendance Allowance

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give details for the latest available date of how long it takes to process attendance allowance applications from the date of claim to the issuing of a decision.

Mr. Scott: At 31 December 1989 the average time taken to decide an attendance allowance claim was about seven to eight weeks.

Residential Care

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security from what budget the costs of the new entitlements from April 1991 to income support and housing benefit for residents of independent nursing homes or residential care homes will come.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Existing arrangements for all income support and housing benefits expenditure will continue.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out how the new responsibilities for administration and payment of housing benefit will operate for local authority-sponsored residents who are placed in residential care homes or nursing homes outside the placing authority's boundaries.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We are consulting the local authority associations on these and other issues.

Income Support

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how, from 31 March 1991, an increase in the weekly charge for independent nursing home or residential care home fees will affect the benefit entitlement of an income support claimant with preserved rights (a) if the claimant is already receiving the maximum permitted under the ceiling for that category of care and (b) if the amount the claimant is receiving towards the care element is below the ceiling payment for that category;

(2) on what basis the ceiling payments for care support in respect of income support claimants in residential accommodation with preserved rights from 31 March 1991 will be increased;

(3) how the preserved rate of income support will be calculated for residents in residential care homes or nursing homes on 31 March 1991.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Government intend to preserve the present scheme of special income support limits for existing claimants who are resident in most homes when the new funding structure is introduced on 1 April 1991. As now, under those arrangements there will be limits to the level of benefit available for different types of care; those whose fees are at or below the limit will have their charges met in full. Existing arrangements for reviewing the level of the limits will continue.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the value of income support in 1990 for (a) a single person aged under 25 years, (b) a single person aged over 25 years, (c) a lone parent over 18 years with a child under 11 years, (d) a couple over 18 years with two children under 11 years and (e) a pensioner as a percentage of estimated (i) average net male earnings and (ii) average net male manual earnings.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Estimates cannot be provided for 1990-91 until the earnings figures for April 1990 are known.

Hostel Accommodation

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations have been received from organisations that provide hostel accommodation about the financial difficulties they are experiencing as a result of the changes in income support introduced in April 1989; and if he will list the nature and extent of the problems that are being experienced.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Changes to income support for hostel dwellers were introduced from 9 October 1989. Since that date we have received a small number of representations about financial difficulties resulting from the change. Most problems appear to have been caused by initial difficulties with the administration of housing benefit. Latest indications are that those problems have now been largely resolved satisfactorily.

Warwickshire Welfare Rights Service

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth will receive a reply to his letter dated 21 December 1989 referring to Warwickshire welfare rights service.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: My noble Friend Lord Henley replied to my hon. Friend's letter today.

Homeworkers

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans the Government have to allow exemption certificates to be backdated for homeworkers if they opt to pay the self-employed contribution; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Those homeworkers who are self-employed can apply in the normal way for a certificate of exception from liability to pay class 2 contributions; if appropriate, the certificate can be backdated for a maximum of 13 weeks. There are no plans to extend these backdating provisions for any group of workers.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are in receipt of invalid care allowance in the Dewsbury constituency.

Mr. Scott: I regret that this information is not available.

Child Benefit

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many children are receiving child benefit, broken down into (a) England, Scotland and Wales and (b) the English regions and the cost of paying child benefit in each case.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The latest available information as set out in the table is for December 1988. I regret that separate figures for the English regions are not available.

	England	Scotland	Wales
Number of children	10,253,000	1,094,000	623,000
Estimated annual amount of child benefit expenditure	£3,851·0m	£410·9m	£234·0m

"Households Below Average Income 1987"

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to publish the next set of "Households Below Average Income 1987".

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We expect to publish the next edition of "Households Below Average Income" in the next few weeks.

Student Benefits

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he intends to publish any draft regulations concerning students' entitlement to social security benefits; which bodies he intends to consult regarding any such changes; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The White Paper "Top-up Loans for Students" outlined proposals for removing entitlement to social security benefits from the majority of full-time students. Draft regulations to give effect to these proposals will be published shortly. They will be referred to the Social Security Advisory Committee in the usual way, and will also be subject to consultation with the local authority associations.

Disability Allowance

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of people who will be eligible for the proposed disability allowance.

Mr. Scott: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher) on 19 January at columns 482-83.

Administration Costs

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the administrative cost incurred per £100 paid in benefit for (a) national insurance retirement benefit, (b) income support, (c) the social fund and (d) housing benefit for the latest available year.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 22 January 1990]: Details of the costs of administering social security benefits are published in the public expenditure White Paper. The following information for 1987-88 has been extracted from the latest edition (Cm. 1014) published on 30 January 1990:

(a) national insurance retirement benefit—administrative cost £1·37 per £100 benefit paid

(b) housing benefit—administrative cost £4·30 per £100 benefit paid.

Income support was introduced in April 1988 and figures for administration costs are not yet available. The social fund was introduced in a limited way in 1987-88 for funeral and maternity payments only but no separate figures are available—the cost for 1987-88 is included in the overall supplementary benefit administrative costs for that year.

Families (Income Levels)

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the information contained in the letter to the rt hon. Member for Chesham and Amersham dated 8 January, showing the estimated numbers of working and out-of-work families with children at different income levels in 1986.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information requested is shown in the tables. For statistical reasons, detailed information of this kind should be treated as free-standing annual analyses and not as a time series.

HEALTH

Product Licences

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether there have been any changes in the data required for the granting of an abridged product licence since January 1987; and whether there has been any change in the interpretation of the existing regulations governing the granting of an abridged product licence.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Since January 1987 there have been changes in the data required from applicants in support of an abridged product licence application. This is as a result of directive 87/21/EEC which amended directive 65/65/EEC and new guidelines issued by the EC Committee on Proprietary Medicinal Products entitled "Rules Governing Medicinal Products in the European Community", a copy of which is in the Library. Medical, pharmaceutical and other scientific interpretation of existing regulations was adapted to reflect the revised EC requirements.

AIDS

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many potential cases of HIV-2 virus have so far been tested as part of the screening process.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The communicable disease surveillance centre is aware of nine HIV-2 positive reports in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his reply of 18 January, Official Report, column 405, to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe, what information his Department has on the employment prospects, insurance and mortgage status of people who acquired AIDS from blood transfusions under the National Health Service; and whether the ex gratia payment of £20,000 to people with haemophilia who contracted the virus will be paid in each case of infection if more than one member of a family is infected.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 31 January 1990]: The Government's decision to make ex gratia grants to people with haemophilia who are also infected with the AIDS virus was a recognition of their unique position. I refer the right hon. Member to the reply my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State gave my hon. Friend the Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key) on 23 November 1989 at columns 11-12. A £20,000 lump sum payment will be made to each haemophiliac infected with HIV. In co-operation with the trustees of the MacFarlane Trust a new discretionary trust has been set up and is now making payments.

Friedrich's Ataxia

Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if any departmental funding of research is provided into the disease Friedrich's Ataxia.

Mr. Freeman: Research related to Friedrich's Ataxia is currently being supported by the Medical Research Council and in 1988-89 the total cost of research projects which were relevant to Friedrich's Ataxia amounted to £197,000. The Medical Research Council is always willing to consider further soundly based proposals for research funding in competition with other applications. The MRC, which receives grant in aid from the Department of Education and Science, is the main Government agency for the promotion of biomedical and clinical research in the United Kingdom. The Department of Health is not currently funding any research on this subject.

Patients (Information and Records)

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the outcome of his Department's consultation on the draft code of practice on "Communicating information to patients and their access to their own manual health records"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Following consultation with the medical profession, it was accepted that a draft code of practice on "Communicating information to patients and their access to their own manual health records" could be used as the basis for a wide consultation exercise, although there was no formal approval of or agreement to it.

The draft code was circulated on 23 May 1989 to a wide range of health professional and patient interests bodies and to health authority management. Twenty-five copies of the consultation papers were issued. Some recipients incorporated within their responses comments received from their constituent members. Others copied the document to other interested parties who responded on their own account. Overall, 52 separate responses were received.

From five of the six responses received from bodies representing the medical profession, it is clear that the majority of the profession remains firmly opposed in principle to patients having a right of access to their own health records. It believes that it would be harmful to patients, would result in less comprehensive records, would seriously affect the trust between doctor and patient and would divert resources from patient care. These views are held particularly strongly by the JCC and the GMC. The GMSC's reply to the consultation drew our attention to the conference of local medical committees resolution passed in 1988

"That this conference rejects the principle of open access to their records by patients".

The sixth respondent body regarded the principles as acceptable, on the assumption that doctors could keep separate personal notes, whilst recognising that the character of medical record-keeping would be affected. One individual doctor also expressed his opposition to the principle.

Of the other 45 respondents, some of whom offered detailed comments including reservations about resource implications, the need to secure co-operation by doctors, procedural difficulties, training requirements and the need for time to allow for administrative and organisational changes, not one has taken a stance against the principle of access to manual records by or on behalf of patients.

The Campaign for Freedom of Information doubts whether the medical profession would effectively implement access to medical records on a non-statutory basis. It takes as evidence of the profession's deep-seated resistance to access the fact that it has taken two years to produce even minimum proposals. The Campaign for Freedom of Information has therefore produced a draft Bill aimed at securing statutory rights of patients' access. It has subsequently been adopted as a private Member's Bill by the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, North (Mr. Henderson). Twelve other respondents share the Campaign for Freedom of Information's view that anything short of legislation will be inadequate and that access can only be assured only by statutory provision. A number of these as well as some hospital and Health Service organisations have given their public endorsement to the Campaign for Freedom of Information's draft Bill.

The concerns of the medical profession—that greater access by patients to their records will affect the quality of medical record-keeping to the ultimate disadvantage of both patient and doctor—were brought to the attention of non-medical parties to the consultation exercise. Nevertheless, there is a clear balance of opinion in support of a right of access.

Registration Service

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has any proposals on the future of the registration service in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement;

Mr. Simon Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Vote Office a copy of the White Paper he has published on the future of the registration service in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Yes, the White Paper entitled "Registration: proposals for change", Cm 939, makes recommendations for reforming the system for registering births, marriages and deaths in England and Wales on lines already canvassed in a Green Paper and widely welcomed in consultation.

The White Paper proposes a clear management structure for the registration service, under which its day-to-day running will be squarely in local authority hands while the Registrar General retains responsibility for setting national standards of performance. An end will be made to the legal restrictions on the duties of registrars which at present lessen its cost-effectiveness and the quality of service it can offer to the public. Alongside these structural changes there are proposals which will allow people to marry in any registration district in England and Wales and offer a new choice over the buildings in which civil marriages may take place. The standard period of notice which must be given for a marriage will come down from 21 days to 15, but a notice which is given longer in advance will remain valid for six months, rather than three as at present.

There will also be changes in all registration procedures to improve the statistical information which is then obtained. Still-birth registrations will be aligned more closely with the procedures for registering deaths, in accordance with the wishes of the parents concerned. A new system will be introduced for notifying deaths which will save informants having always to travel to the district where the death took place in order to register it. There will be short certificates available for death or still-birth, alongside the existing short birth certificate. And there will be an extension of the arrangements whereby Welsh speakers can obtain bilingual certificates of birth and death, so that these are no longer confined to events taking place in Wales.

Finally, the White Paper proposes a distinction between historic registration records—those at least 75 years old—and more recent ones. Although access to all records will be maintained through a right to buy non-official copies of them, there will be new rules governing the purchase of certified copies of recent records for use for official purposes. These will help to curb an abuse which has arisen. By contrast, it is intended that information from the older registration records will be entirely within the public domain. It will be possible to buy either certified or non-official copies of certificates of events which occurred 75 years ago or longer, and it is also proposed that an agency outside the Government should hold copies of these records and provide the browsing facilities which are sought by genealogists, researchers and historians.

Response to the earlier Green Paper shows there will be a widespread welcome for the White Paper proposals. They will modernise and improve the registration service by giving it a new flexibility to respond to public wishes, while at the same time so improving its efficiency as to secure a reduction in its net cost locally and centrally. Nearly all of the changes envisaged will require legislation for their implementation, and the Government hope to introduce this at an early date. Meanwhile, I commend them most strongly to the House.

Prescription Pricing Authority

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his reply of 15 January to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, Central, Official Report, column 86, how many visits were undertaken by regional medical officers each year since 1984 and in which National Health Service regions; what was his basis for the estimate of saving per practice; whether the PACT data for the 2,800 practices referred to confirm those savings; and what was the expenditure per patient on practice lists of the 2,800 practices referred to in each year since 1984.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The number of visits by region to high-cost practices undertaken by regional medical officers is given in my reply to the hon. Member on 16 January, at columns 197-98. The estimates of savings per practice following a visit to a high-cost practice are based on a comparison of practice prescribing costs before and after the visit using PACT data. Information on the cost per patient for the practices mentioned since 1984 can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

"Caring for People"

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will present the information in chart 6 entitled: Estimated cumulative rate of transfer of DSS Care Expenditure in the White Paper, "Caring for People" (Cm. 849) in the form of a table.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The White Paper "Caring for People", Cm. 849, made it clear that the information illustrated in chart 6 was to be kept under review as more detailed information became available. We are currently considering relevant evidence. I will write to the hon. Member when the review has been completed.

Audiology (Waiting Lists)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) on what basis decisions are made and resources allocated to reduce waiting lists for audiology and related specialisms;

(2) pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside of 25 January, Official Report, column 857, whether he has considered collecting waiting list figures for audiology and related services at a national level to assist in determining the use of resources to reduce those waiting lists.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: In-patient waiting list figures for the specialties of audiological medicine and ear, nose and throat are collected centrally. At 31 March 1989 there were no patients waiting for either in-patient or day case treatment in audiological medicine. We do not collect centrally figures on out-patient waiting lists but health authorities will have these locally as part of their management of local services.

Decisions on the use of resources to reduce waiting lists in particular specialties are for regional and special health authorities to take in the light of local circumstances. Resources available to them include their allocation from the waiting list fund to help tackle the problem of long waits for hospital treatment. Since 1987 regions have used nearly £5.5 million from the fund to treat additional patients in the ear, nose and throat specialty.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether moneys will continue to be transferred to local authorities from the social security budget after 1995-96.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There will be a single formal transfer of provision from DSS to local authorities in the 1990 public expenditure survey, covering the years 1991-92, 1992-93 and 1993-94. Provision for both social security and local authorities in subsequent surveys will be determined in the light of the declining number of cases with preserved entitlement under social security rules and the rising demand for local authority services, including demographic changes.

Local Authority-Sponsored Residents

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the placing authority for local authority-sponsored residents placed outside its own boundaries will be responsible for meeting the full costs of the placement by making a payment direct to the establishment; whether the placing authority or the authority where the establishment is based will be responsible for the calculation and payment of the housing benefit; and if housing benefit paid by the authority where the home is based will be paid direct to the placing authority.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: As the White Paper "Caring for People" indicates, the local social services authority which arranges residential or nursing home care will be responsible for meeting the fees agreed with the home, whether this is within its area or not. Housing benefit is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security, but I understand this will be claimed, as now, from the local housing authority in whose area the home is situated. Precise details of the way income support and housing benefit will be paid are still under consideration.

Pharmaceutical Sales

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the actual average pharmaceutical company return on capital on sales to the National Health Service under the pharmaceutical price regulations scheme in respect of the years 1981 to 1988;

(2) what was the average allowable target return on capital on sales to the National Health Service in respect of pharmaceutical companies operating within the pharmaceutical price regulations scheme for each year 1979 to 1989.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Resource Management Initiative

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the results of his Department's evaluation of the resource management initiative.

Mr. Freeman: The joint evaluation of the resource management initiative six pilot schemes has not been concluded by the Department and the joint consultants committee. The Department is also funding an independent evaluation of the resource management initiative by the health economics research group, Brunel university. Its interim report was published on 18 July 1989. In addition, the Department helped to defray the cost of disseminating the central consultants and specialists committee evaluation of the initiative's six pilot sites. This report was published in October 1989. Copies of both these reports are being placed in the Library.

Creutzfeldt Jakob Dementia

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is now taking to monitor the incidence of Creutzfeldt Jakob dementia.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 10 January at column 665 and to my reply to the hon. Member for Don Valley (Mr. Redmond) on 31 January.

Hospital Deaths

Mr. Terry Fields: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will undertake an inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the deaths of six patients transferred from Sefton general hospital to Mossley Hill hospital between December 1989 and January 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The Liverpool health authority has already inquired into this and is satisfied that there is nothing to link the deaths of these patients with their transfer from Sefton general hospital to Mossley Hill hospital. These moves were carried out under proper medical supervision and were part of the health authority's carefully planned strategy for rationalisation of geriatric services in the district.

Live Births

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the latest information he has on live births and survival at low gestational age, and on live births with estimated gestation of less than 28 weeks, in England and Wales.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is not available; information on gestation is not collected at live birth registration.

Abortion (London Hospitals)

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the following hospitals and clinics in London are licensed to carry out abortions (a) Humana hospital, (b) Cromwell hospital, (c) Hallam medical centre, (d) IVF centre, 100-146 Harley street and (e) Churchill clinic.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Of the hospitals and clinics listed only the Humana hospital is licensed under the Abortion Act 1967.

NHS Treatment

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the latest figures available on the costs to the National Health Service of (a) dental care, (b) treating strokes, (c) treating heart disease and (d) treating cancer; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 21 December 1989]: The cost to the NHS of dental care provided by general dental practitioners in England was £674·1 million in 1988-89. This figure includes £14·8 million administration expenditure by the Dental Estimates Board. I regret that information on the precise costs to the National Health Service of treating strokes, heart disease and cancer is not available. However the Department has estimated that the costs in England in 1988-89 were of the order of:

	£ million
Strokes (Cerebrovascular disease)	650
Heart disease (including chronic rheumatic, ischaemic and other forms of heart disease	900
Cancer	1,000

Notes:
1. Estimates include in-patient, out-patient and primary care costs.
2. Estimates derived from costing and activity data from various sources.

Northern Health Region

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what basis £7,054,000 was deducted from the 1990-91 allocation to the Northern health region; if he will place copies of the information that supports the deduction in the Library; and to which other English National Health Service regions sums equivalent to that amount were given.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 30 January 1990]: From 1990-91, regional health authorities' allocations reflect the amount of money available for services for their resident populations. From that allocation they must pay for services used by their residents in other regions: they will also receive income for providing services to residents of other regions. For 1990-91, these payments will be made through central adjustments to cash limits. For Northern RHA this means a net deduction of £7,054,000. This is the sum of Northern RHA's net flows with all the other English regions. The amounts in question were agreed between the regions concerned.

The information on cross-boundary flows to support these adjustments will be included in the 1990-91 cash limits exposition booklet, which will be issued shortly. A copy will be placed in the Library as requested.

Subject to legislation, cross-boundary flows, like other health services, will in future be paid for by contracts between a patient's district health authority or general practitioner and the place of treatment.

Mr Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the £1,361,000 credited to the Northern health region in respect of cross-boundary flows from Scotland and Wales was deducted from National Health Service spending in Scotland and Wales; and where he proposes to record all such deductions or contributions in the public accounts.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 30 January 1990]: Historically, there have not been transfers of funds across borders in respect of flows of patients between the home countries. In 1990-91, the Northern regional health authority will be compensated for treating patients from Scotland and Wales by means of a sum top-sliced from English Health Service revenue funds. Subject to legislation, contracting for health services will be introduced from the financial year 1991-92; from that stage Scottish health boards and Welsh district health authorities will be able to place contracts with English hospitals and English authorities will have similar freedom to place cross-border contracts. The treatment in the statutory accounts of funds crossing national borders under the terms of such contracts has yet to be decided.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department has carried out into the connection between bovine spongiform encephalopathy and Creutzfeldt Jakob disease; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I refer to the reply given on 31 January to the hon. Member by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has initiated any prosecutions in respect of the bovine spongiform encephalopathy infected cattle identified at markets and slaughterhouses; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Prosecutions will be taken where there is evidence of deliberate attempts to evade the legal requirement to notify the Ministry of suspected cases of BSE. So far no such cases have arisen.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has recently introduced a greater level of inspection of bovines at markets and slaughterhouses to detect bovine spongiform encephalopathy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: In November 1989, official veterinarians began random ante mortem inspections of cattle submitted for slaughter at non-EC approved abattoirs. Ministry vets carry out regular monitoring at markets.

Enzymes

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what form of words he deems acceptable for labelling meat where gels containing enzymes have been used as binding agents; and if he will make a further statement.

Mr. Maclean: There is very little I can add to the answer I gave to the hon. Member on 17 January 1990, at column 217. All food is required to be labelled so as to give an indication of its true nature and where necessary its physical condition or treatment to ensure consumers are not misled. It is for the food manufacturer to decide how he complies with the law; it would be inappropriate for me to suggest forms of labelling for specific products such as this.

Cattle Offals

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what uses are still permitted for those cattle offals now banned for use for human consumption.

Mr. Maclean: Bovine offal which has been banned from human consumption is normally removed at the slaughterhouse, or, in the case of bovine brain, at a specialist boning plant.

If the material is sterilised, it is subject to the general prohibition on its use for human consumption. If not sterilised, it may be moved only under a local authority movement permit and must either be stained and taken to a rendering plant or licensed waste food processor or, if unstained, may be used only in the production of non-food products such as strings for musical instruments or sports equipment, in medical, veterinary or other research premises or in the manufacture of pharmaceutical products.

Special guidelines on the use of bovine material were circulated to the pharmaceutical industry in March 1989.

The feeding of ruminant-based protein to ruminants is prohibited by the Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy (No. 2) Order 1988 as amended.

Black Pudding

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received about restrictions imposed on black pudding makers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: My officials met representatives of the Natural Sausage Casings Association on 12 January to discuss the consequences of the Bovine Offal (Prohibition) Regulations 1989. There was a useful discussion of the background to, and the effects of, these regulations.

Veterinary Investigation Centres

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the veterinary investigation centres he intends to close and the dates when the closure is due; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The review of the veterinary investigation service commissioned by the Minister is now being finalised and the report will shortly be submitted to Ministers. As yet, no decisions have been made on any recommendations that might arise from this review.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many persons are employed at the veterinary investigation centre at (a) Aberystwyth, (b) Bangor and (c) Carmarthen.

Mr. Maclean: As of 1 January 1990, the total veterinary scientific and laboratory support staff employed at the veterinary investigation centre at (a) Aberystwyth was 11, (b) Bangor was 10 and (c) Carmarthen was 15.

Food Quality

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will commission a national survey into the quality of food supplied by wholesalers to local authority schools and elderly persons' homes; and if he will publish the results;

(2) what action he proposes to take in response to the results of the recent survey undertaken by trading standards officers in Yorkshire and Humberside on food supplied by wholesalers to local authority schools and elderly persons' homes.

Mr. Maclean: I too was disturbed to read the results of this survey by trading standards officers. There are, however, already powers in the Food Act 1984 which make it an offence to sell food which is not of the nature, substance or quality demanded by the purchaser and trading standards officers are very familiar with the operation of this law. The Food Safety Bill currently before Parliament continues these powers.

It is of course for any local authority to ensure that foodstuffs supplied to its establishments meet the terms of its purchase contract and to take appropriate civil or criminal action if there should be any failure to supply the quality demanded. In the circumstances, the local authorities concerned already therefore have adequate powers to deal with the matter and I see no cause for me to intervene.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will take steps to increase the sanctions available to trading standards officers investigating the supply of unfit food.

Mr. Maclean: The application of sanctions against those who supply unfit food is of course a matter for the courts. However, the Food Safety Bill is substantially increasing the statutory penalties for contraventions of this kind.

Miss Sarah Furnival

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth will receive a reply to his letter dated 11 December 1989 referring to Miss Sarah Furnival.

Mr. Gummer: A reply to the hon. Member's letter dated 11 December 1989 referring to Miss Sarah Furnival was dispatched on 30 January 1990.

Organic Farming

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how he intends to implement the European Commission's regulations concerning standards for organic farming.

Mr. Maclean: The European Commission proposal for a regulation on organic foodstuffs is currently under discussion in a Council working group and much detailed work remains to be done before it is ready for consideration by the EEC Council of Agriculture Ministers. If adopted by the Council in the form of a regulation, it will be directly applicable in all member states. The proposals provide for the designation of an authority to implement certain measures. I have already indicated that the United Kingdom Register of Organic Food Standards would, in this country, be the designated authority.

Calves' Brains

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he intends to introduce measures to restrict the use of calves' brains for human consumption.

Mr. Maclean: I have no plans to restrict the use of brains from calves aged under six months beyond the controls contained in the Meat Products and Spreadable Fish Products Regulations.

Hill Farming

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he anticipates announcing the outcome of the hill farming review and the hill livestock compensatory allowances to be paid in 1990.

Mr. Gummer: I refer the hon. Member to the statement I made to the House on 30 January 1990, at column 159-70.

Pesticides

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, further to his answer to the hon. Member for South Shields on 16 January, Official Report, column 220, he will give the dates when each of the active ingredients first received approval; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 29 January 1990]: The information requested is as follows:

Active Ingredient	First Approved
Aldicarb	1973
Aldrin	1956
Aminotriazole	1961

Active Ingredient	First Approved

Glycol ethers, which appeared under "Use continues unchanged" in my answer of 16 January to the hon. Member for South Shields, at column 220, is in fact a solvent and not an active ingredient. It has been in use for a number of years and was last reviewed in 1983.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his answer to the hon. Member for South Shields on 11 January, Official Report, columns 748-49, how many new active ingredients in 1986 were (a) received, (b) approved and (c) rejected prior to 6 October 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [holding answer 29 January 1990]: The information set out relates to new pesticide active ingredients for which my Department has responsibility:

	Numbers
(a) Applications received before 6 October 1986	28
(b) Approvals (full/provisional/experimental permit) granted before 6 October 1986	9
(c) Applications rejected before 6 October 1986	3

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 2 February 1990

PRIME MINISTER

EC Membership

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a further statement on the Government's policy about European countries not currently members of the EEC applying for membership of the EEC.

The Prime Minister: According to the EEC treaty (article 237), any European state may apply to become a member of the Community. However, we agree with the general view within the Community that—until at least 1993—the emphasis must be on consolidation, not enlargement. The Community's priority must be completion of the single market.

Mice

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister if she will be raising the issue of the European Commission's proposed appointment of a European mouse care expert at the forthcoming European summit; and what assessment she has made of the value of the Commission's encouragement of inter-community trade in mice and rats.

The Prime Minister: There is no such proposal. I assume that the hon. Member is referring to a proposal for a Council regulation on animal health conditions governing trade in rodents. These proposals are of real concern as they are relevant to Her Majesty's Government's fight against rabies. The Government's assessment of it was set out in the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food's explanatory memorandum 9715/89 of 27 November 1989, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Football Spectators Act 1989

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Prime Minister what has been the cost to the Cabinet Office of the introduction and passage of the Football Spectators Act 1989 through Parliament.

The Prime Minister: It is not possible to identify separately the cost to the Cabinet Office attributable to this legislation.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Michael: To ask the Prime Minister what split of responsibilities has been decided between the Department of Health and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food regarding areas of overlap in responsibility for problems relating to food poisoning.

The Prime Minister: Departmental responsibilities for food safety have not been changed. Food safety is a shared responsibility, as reflected in the Food Safety Bill. Most food safety regulations are jointly signed by the Secretary of State for Health and the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. The Department of Health leads on food hygiene and microbiological contamination except in respect of milk production and distribution, hygiene of meat and meat products, and eggs, where the lead is with MAFF. The Department of Health also operates a hazard warning system to deal with emergencies when unfit food poses an immediate hazard to health. MAFF leads on emergency measures under the Food and Environment Protection Act when a pollution incident threatens the food supply and leads on chemical contamination but takes advice on health risks from the Department of Health. There is close liaison between both Departments and consultation with relevant outside interests.

Transport (Official Duties)

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Prime Minister (1) how many miles she travelled in 1989 on official business in a motor vehicle;

(2) when she last travelled on a public omnibus on official business.

The Prime Minister: For reasons of practicality and security it is difficult for me to travel by public transport on official business. I do so when a suitable opportunity arises. Information on miles travelled in a motor vehicle is not available.

Civil Servants (Posts)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make it her policy to consult all departments before authorising the acceptance of a post by any senior civil servant.

The Prime Minister: No. There are well established procedures for dealing with the acceptance of outside appointments by civil servants.

Projects (Funding)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what is her policy towards making the offer of funding for a project conditional on the association of a civil servant with that project.

The Prime Minister: Public funding for expenditure projects is allocated on the basis of the merits of individual proposals and the need to obtain the best value for money for the taxpayer.

TRANSPORT

Communications Infrastructure

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the policy of his Department on the provision of future fixed-link improvements in communications infrastructure from (a) public funds and (b) the private sector.

Mr. Portillo: In deciding what public funds are to be spent on transport infrastructure, the Government take account of the demands of other areas of Government expenditure; but will increase capital investment where this is justified. The amount of public expenditure provided for investment in rail and national road schemes over the next three years is over 60 per cent. higher in real terms than in the three years up to the end of 1989-90.

Although the public sector will for the foreseeable future account for the majority of infrastructure funding, as indicated in "New Roads by New Means", I am always looking to secure the benefits which the private sector can bring in terms of innovation, enterprise and management efficiency. Road infrastructure measures are judged on their individual merits. For example, the M25 Dartford-Thurrock crossing and the Channel tunnel are projects at the construction stage which show how the private sector can make a valuable contribution towards the provision of transport infrastructure.

Air Traffic Distribution

Mr. Haselhurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the reasons for maintaining the air traffic distribution rules which determine priority between classes of air transport carrier using airports in the London area.

Mr. McLoughlin: The 1985 White Paper, "Airports Policy", noted that as airports become busier the need may arise for a form of regulation to distribute traffic rationally between the airports of a single system. The present traffic distribution rules for airports serving the London area were made in 1986, following advice from the Civil Aviation Authority. Last July, in response to a request for fresh advice on London air traffic distribution policy, the authority recommended only minor modifications to the existing rules. My right hon. Friend decided not to make those modifications, and awaits the authority's further and more wide-ranging advice, due this summer, on the adequacy of United Kingdom airport capacity in the longer term.

Mr. Haselhurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department has had access to independent legal opinion on the legality under United Kingdom and European Economic Community law of any future rule designed to give preference in slot allocation at Gatwick to scheduled traffic at the expense of charter traffic; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: We have no plans to make such a rule, and have sought no advice on how the law might bear on it.

Wales (Railways)

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has received any requests for further investment in the valley lines of south Wales.

Mr. Portillo: No.

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has received any representations proposing the re-opening of railway stations and lines in Wales.

Mr. Portillo: My right hon. Friend has received a number of such representations. The opening or re-opening of stations or railway lines to passenger services is for the British Railways Board to decide, in the light of the objectives set for it by the Government.

Pilotage Exemption Certificates (Portsmouth)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to announce a decision on the charges imposed on the use of pilotage exemption certificates at Portsmouth, following the inspector's report conducted by Mr. James Fitzpatrick.

Mr. McLoughlin: The inspector has submitted his report to the Secretary of State following the public inquiry held on 17 October 1989. This is now being considered and a decision will be announced as soon as possible.

Road Building

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the implications of the recently announced £12 billion road building programme for (a) atmospheric pollution levels, (b) the greenhouse effect, (c) existing sites of special scientific interest, (d) existing areas of outstanding natural beauty and (e) populations of native flora and fauna; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The Government's road building programme will contribute to reducing pollution and CO_2 emissions from vehicles by cutting down on congestion and removing traffic from unsuitable roads and communities.

Wherever possible, roads are kept away from protected areas such as sites of special scientific interest and areas of outstanding natural beauty. When there is a risk that a proposed scheme will affect such an area it is examined with particular care to establish that a new or improved road is needed, and that the route has been chosen to do as little damage to the environment as possible. Every effort is made to blend the road into the landscape and to take all reasonable measures to minimise any adverse effects, including appropriate measures to preserve flora and fauna.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if it remains Government policy to match the level of their road building programme with the anticipated level of future traffic demand.

Mr. Atkins: Forecasts of traffic demand are an important, but not the only, factor in considering road schemes and programmes. There have always been cases where traffic demand could not be met for economic or environmental reasons. This was set out clearly in "Roads for Prosperity" (Cm. 693, May 1989), which stated in paragraph 27 that "it is not possible or economic to remove all congestion".

The need for substantial investment on the major inter-urban network remains. This is the basis on which the expanded programme was drawn up. It remains the Government's judgment of what needs to be done.

NATIONAL FINANCE

USA Budget

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the economic impact on the United Kingdom economy of the proposed United States of America budget.

Mr. Ryder: Assessments of the fiscal position of major trading partners and the consequences for the United Kingdom economy are made routinely as background to the Industry Act forecast.

Trade Deficits

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of gross domestic product are the trade deficits of the United States of America and of each of the European Community countries, in descending order, for the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Ryder: Data on trade balances and nominal gross domestic product for the United States and each of the European Community countries are published in the IMF's international financial statistics each month.

Tobacco Products

Mr. Parry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the incidence of taxation of tobacco products in the United Kingdom and in other Economic Community member states; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 31 January 1990]: The table shows the combined burden of excise duty and VAT on cigarettes in each of the EC member states. Cigarettes represent over 90 per cent. of the Community market in tobacco products. Information on the incidence of taxation on the other tobacco products (cigars, smoking and chewing tobacco) is not readily available.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the yield from and cost of collection of stamp duty in the current financial year.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 1 February 1990]: The latest forecast of receipts from stamp duties for 1989-90 was given in the reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley) on 30 November 1989, (Official Report, column 431-32). The cost of collection is expected to be around 0·3 per cent. of those receipts.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Allen Stewart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the yield from and cost of collection of capital gains tax in the current financial year.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 1 February 1990]: The latest available forecast of receipts from capital gains tax for 1989-90 was given in the reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Cambridgeshire, South-East (Mr. Paice) on 23 January 1990, Official Report, column 622. The cost of collection is expected to be around 1·4 per cent. of those receipts.

THE ARTS

Museums and Galleries

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Minister for the Arts what is the increase in the provision for the maintenance of museums and galleries in the current financial year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: The current year's provision for the building and maintenance programmes at the national museums and galleries which I sponsor is £48 million. This represents a real terms increase of 50 per cent. since 1979-80 and an increase of £3 million on the previous year's allocation.

I announced on 16 November 1989 that this provision will rise to some £64 million in 1992-93. This will bring the total provision for building and maintenance over the next three years to over £180 million.

Arts Funding (North-West)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will meet North West Arts representatives to discuss the implications of the Wilding report on funding of the arts.

Mr. Luce: I discussed Mr. Wilding's report with representatives of North West Arts on 23 January.

Arts Funding

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister for the Arts when he intends to make a statement on the results of his consultations with the regional arts associations on the Wilding report.

Mr. Luce: I shall make an announcement as soon as I have had an opportunity to consider carefully all the responses to Mr. Wilding's report.

Science Museum

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Minister for the Arts (1) what was the income from admission charges at the Kensington site of the science museum for the period October 1988 to October 1989;

(2) what was the total cost of (a) setting up the admission charging system in equipment and staff and (b) running the admission charging system between October 1988 and October 1989 at the Kensington site of the science museum;

(3) what were the admission figures at the Kensington site of the science museum for the periods (a) October 1987 to October 1988, (b) October 1986 to October 1987, (c) October 1985 to October 1986, (d) October 1984 to October 1985 and (e) October 1983 to October 1984;

(4) what were the admission figures for the Kensington site of the science museum for the period October 1988 to October 1989 (a) in total, (b) for those paying the full admission price and (c) for each exempt or partially exempt category.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 29 January 1990]: I am advised that the estimated number of admissions at the science museum, including outstations, for the years 1983 to 1989 are as follows:

Year	Admissions
1983	4,784,000
1984	4,510,103
1985	4,607,852
1986	4,824,906
1987	4,732,784
1988	3,861,433
1989	2,607,724

The staffing and administration of the arrangements for the collection of admission charges at the science museum are matters for the museum's trustees. I understand, however, that not only has the science museum generated a substantial income of just over £1 million from the introduction of admission charges, but has done so with the museum being free of charge, or accessible at reduced rates, to 65 per cent. of all visitors.

I also understand that the science museum intends to invest its admissions income in improved visitor facilities.

I shall ask the director of the science museum to write to the hon. Member about the other points raised.

WALES

Employment Training

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will identify the relevant costs per head for employment training trainees participating in the programme through training managers that operate nationally and locally in the voluntary sector.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Information on the cost per trainee in employment training for training managers which are voluntary organisations is not available.

Training Managers

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what changes in supplementary grants to local training managers and those that negotiate their supplementary grants with their area office occurred in 1989-90.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: In 1989-90 there has been no change in the range of supplementary grants available to training managers, local or national. Each training manager's level of supplementary grant was reviewed and agreed in contracts for 1989-90.

School Building

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give details of the (a) bids and (b) allocations for capital expenditure in respect of school building for each Welsh local education authority since 1974.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The information is not available in the form requested. Capital allocations to local education authorities are formula rather than bid-based.

Capital allocations since 1984-85 are unhypothecated between services. The public expenditure provisions for education capital at an all-Wales level for those years are shown in the table. Figures for previous years were not produced on a comparable basis.

	Constant 1988-89 prices
1984-85	37
1985-86	37
1986-87	38
1987-88	44
1988-89	46
1989-90	48

Welsh Language

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the present number of school students that are currently educated through the medium of the Welsh language, in each county education authority in Wales both primary and secondary.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: At September 1988 the number of pupils educated through the medium of Welsh was as shown in the table:

	Primary[1]	Secondary[2]
Clwyd	6,674	2,871
Dyfed	15,102	4,629
Gwent	704	52
Gwynedd	18,817	11,785
Mid Glamorgan	6,319	3,178
Powys	1,292	1,287
South Glamorgan	2,621	986
West Glamorgan	3,029	1,198

[1] Includes full-time and part-time pupils in classes taught solely through the medium of Welsh or in classes where some of the teaching is through the medium of Welsh.

[2] Includes pupils in Welsh-speaking secondary schools as defined in section 3(7) of the Education Reform Act 1988.

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will make it a statutory requirement for all Welsh principal local authorities to publish notices and forms bilingually.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has no plans to do so.

Radiation (North Wales Coast)

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether the Welsh Office will carry out a detailed study of possible radiation hot spots along the north Wales coast as a matter of urgency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: No. Recent reports that hot spots of radioactivity were detected in north Wales have been investigated by Government scientists and the tests showed that the radiation dose rates were not above background levels.

Cardiff Bay Barrage

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will place copies in the Library of agreements he reached with Welsh Water in relation to the allocation of unforseeable costs arising from the achievement of new or unexpected water quality standards within the artificial lake to be created by the proposed Cardiff bay barrage, via the K factor, the cost pass-through formula to customers, as distinct from the shareholders;

(2) what agreement he has reached with Welsh Water in respect of the K factor, cost pass-through mechanism, for any costs involved in meeting new or enhanced water quality standards within the artificial lake created by the proposed Cardiff bay barrage, that are not met by the Cardiff Bay Development Corporation; and if he will publish details;

(3) what agreements he reached with Welsh Water Cyf, or Welsh Water Authority prior to its privatisation to allocate all unforseeable costs related to water quality standards in the inland lake created by the proposed Cardiff bay barrage to Welsh Water customers through the K factor, the cost pass-through mechanism and not to its shareholders;

(4) when he reached agreement with Welsh Water Authority or Welsh Water Cyf to allocate any unforseeable costs related to the achievement of new or unexpected water quality standards within the lake to be created by the proposed Cardiff bay barrage to the customers of Welsh Water, through the K factor, the cost pass-through mechanism and not to its shareholders.

Mr. Grist: The Cardiff Bay Barrage Bill currently before the House seeks to ensure that any reasonable costs incurred by organisations or individuals as a result of the construction of the barrage that would not otherwise occur are met by the promoters of the Bill.

The Bill therefore provides that the costs of carrying out necessary works or operations outside the inland bay to maintain prescribed water quality standards in the inland bay will be met by the promoters in the 20-year period following the commencement of impoundment. The period is in line with all other such undertakings in the Bill.

The cost of works undertaken within the inland bay to maintain water quality will be the responsibility of the promoters.

These provisions were fully recognised and made known at the time of flotation of Welsh Water. The prospectus set out that expenditure arising from changes to discharge consents resulting from the construction of the barrage to the extent not covered by the promoters would be eligible for consideration by the Director General of Water Services for specific K adjustment in the normal way. These arrangements are described in section 9 of the prospectus, a copy of which was placed in the Library in November 1989.

Part IV of condition B of the licence appointing water and sewerage undertakers, a copy of which is also in the Library, fully sets out the mechanism by which K may be adjusted.

Water Supply (Disconnections)

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the latest figures for the number of people who were disconnected from their water supplies in Wales.

Mr. Grist: The information is not available in the form requested. The latest available figures are for 1988-89, when in the Welsh Water Authority's water supply area a total of 1,249 domestic and non-domestic customers were disconnected.

The figures do not reflect the new procedures that each water undertaker is required to follow before disconnecting domestic customers under their conditions of appointment, which came into force on 1 September 1989.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Select Committees

Mr. Wray: To ask the hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed, as representing the House of Commons Commission, what was the total funds made available by the Commission for overseas travel by Select Committees in the financial year 1989-90; how much of this was specifically for European travel; and what are the corresponding figures, for the financial year 1990-91.

Mr. Beith: The total funds made available for overseas Select Committee travel in the financial year 1989-90 was £495,980 of which £60,000 was earmarked exclusively for visits to Community countries. The equivalent figure for the financial year 1990-91 is £505,400 of which £100,000 is set aside for travel to Community countries.

Vote Office Bundle

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he has any proposals to reduce the size of the Vote Office bundle.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: I have recently received an undertaking from the Chairman of the Accommodation and Administration Sub-Committee that once the Procedure Committee's study of matters affecting the Order Paper is completed and any recommendations for change agreed, the Sub-Committee is prepared to conduct a comprehensive examination of the Vote bundle itself.

Football Spectators Act 1989

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Lord President of the Council what is his estimate of the cost to Parliament of the introduction and passage of the Football Spectators Act 1989; and if he will give a breakdown of these costs.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: It is not possible to identify separately the costs arising from the preparation and consideration of any particular piece of legislation.

Non-smoking Areas

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Lord President of the Council whether he will give consideration to the establishment of non-smoking areas in the Westminster Hall canteen, the Strangers Cafeteria, the Harcourt Room and the Strangers Dining Room.

Sir Geoffrey Howe [holding answer 1 February 1990]: The upper part of the Westminster Hall Cafeteria has for some time been designated as a no-smoking area. The crowded nature of the Strangers Cafeteria does not lend itself to the establishment of a no-smoking section. There are no areas in the Harcourt Room or the Strangers Dining Room reserved for non-smokers, but notices displayed in both rooms request diners to refrain from smoking before 1.30 pm at lunchtime and before 9 pm in the evening. No-smoking areas have also been identified for the catering facilities to be established in phase 1 of the new parliamentary buildings. It remains the Catering Sub-Committee's policy to increase the number of no-smoking areas in all its outlets as further opportunities arise.

EMPLOYMENT

Minimum Wages

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give details of research his Department has commissioned into the minimum wage proposals of the social charter; and if he will place the findings in the Library.

Mr. Howard: My Department has commissioned no external research into the minimum wage proposals of the social charter. Officials in the Department have carried out work to estimate the costs of imposing a national minimum wage in Britain. A note explaining the method used has been placed in the Library.

Training

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much has been allocated since 1987 by the European social fund to each of the Manpower Services Commission and Training Agency training and employment measures; what proportion these allocations represented of total Great Britain European social fund allocations; and what sums have been applied for in 1990, for each individual Training Agency programme.

Mr. Eggar: The figures for the European Commission's individual ESF allocations to the Manpower Services Commission, Training Commission and Training Agency for the years 1987 to 1989 inclusive can only be provided at disproportionate cost. The decisions of the European Commission on funding for these years have been placed in the Library.

The amounts applied for by the Training Agency for 1990 are as follows:

Programme	Amount £ million
Employment Training	206·17
Youth Training Scheme	111·40
Enterprise Allowance Scheme	78·32
Work Related Further Education	12·50
Business Growth Training	14·74

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to introduce outside consultants to evaluate the effectiveness of the Government's employment training programmes including YTS; and if he will make a statement.

Mr Nicholls: There is an extensive programme of research and evaluation covering the full range of the Government's employment and training schemes including YTS. External consultants and researchers play a major part in this programme.

Tourism

Mr. Lee: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the latest estimate of the spend per head of (a) Japanese and (b) North American visitors.

Mr. Nicholls: During the first two quarters of 1989 Japanese residents spent an estimated £429 per visit to the United Kingdom. For the same period, residents of North America spent an estimated £456 per visit.

Mr. Lee: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the latest estimate that he has of the amount of new investment under way in the tourism and hospitality industries; and what regional analysis is available of this figure.

Mr. Nicholls: The table gives the latest figures published by the English Tourist Board of the amount spent on tourism projects (worth £0·5 million or more) which were completed during the period July to December 1989, and those still under construction on 31 December 1989.

Tourism investments completed and under construction, by tourist board region

Tourist board region	Completed during July-December 1989 £ million	Under construction on 31 December 1989 £ million
Cumbria	—	73
Northumbria	—	135
North West	72	583
Yorkshire and Humberside	38	631
Heart of England	70	283
East Midlands	38	176
Thames and Chilterns	8	125
East Anglia	98	114
London	84	674
West Country	80	215
Southern	37	172
South East	26	438
Total England	551	3,619

Mr. Lee: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the latest estimate that he has of the number of new jobs being created in the tourism and hospitality industries.

Mr. Nicholls: Between September 1988 and September 1989, the number of employees in employment in tourism-related industries in Great Britain rose by 44,000 to 1,374,000. In addition, it is estimated from the labour force survey that there were 204,000 self-employed workers in tourism-related industries in spring 1988, 4,000 more than in spring 1987.

Supplementary Grants

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what changes in supplementary grants to local training managers and those who negotiate their supplementary grants with their area office occurred in 1989-90.

Mr. Nicholls: In 1989-90 there has been no change in the range of supplementary grants available to training managers, local or national. Each training manager's level of supplementary grant was reviewed and agreed in contracts for 1989-90.

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many staff of the Health and Safety Executive in the grade deputy superintending inspector possess formal health and safety qualifications; and what percentage of those in that grade this represents.

Mr. Nicholls: There are currently 38 staff in the grade of deputy superintending inspector. All of these have secured the formal qualification awarded on the successful conclusion of the training of a factory inspector; and five (13 per cent.) have additionally an externally validated health and safety qualification.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the Health and Safety Executive directorate of information and advisory services budget for the year 1989-90.

Mr. Nicholls: The gross budget for 1989-90 allocated to the directorate of information and advisory services (part of Resources and Planning Division) was £3·9 million. The Health and Safety Commission's planned use of resources was described in its "Plan of Work for 1989/90 and beyond" published on 3 May 1989.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what formal qualifications in occupational health and safety are held by the Health and Safety Executive's chief inspector of factories and the three deputy chief inspectors of factories.

Mr. Nicholls: The chief inspector of factories and his three deputy chief inspectors underwent the full two-year training programme, concluding in an examination in all aspects of health and safty conducted by the Civil Service Commission, which was the required formal qualification for all inspectors of factories.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the average length of time taken for inspector (specialists), within the technology division of the Health and Safety Executive, to be promoted to the grade principal specialist inspector, for the last year for which figures are available; and what was the average length of time taken in 1978.

Mr. Nicholls: The average length of time taken for inspector (specialist) within the technology division of the Health and Safety Executive to be promoted to the grade of principal specialist inspector for the promotion board held in December 1988 was seven years six months.

Comparable information for 1978 is not available.

Stroboscopic Light

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if his Department has carried out a recent review of the health and safety implications of flicker or stroboscopic light sources.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Executive has recently supported a research project undertaken by the Medical Research Council's applied psychology unit in Cambridge which included an investigation into the effects of flickering fluorescent lighting on people working with this type of illumination.

Dirty Stonework

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information his Department has on health hazards resulting from dirty stonework.

Mr. Nicholls: The Employment Department has no evidence of any health hazards resulting directly from dirty stonework.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has as to the number of workers refused employment because of non-membership of a trade union.

Mr. Nicholls: There is no requirement for workers who are refused employment on the grounds of non-membership of a trade union to report such refusals to my Department. In any case, such a requirement would be of limited value. It would not, for instance, provide information which would take account of vacancies filled by way of arrangements to which non-members of unions are denied access. Nor could it take into account those workers who decide not to apply for a particular position because they are aware of the operation of a closed shop.

British Refugee Council

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make representations to the European Commission in Brussels about the adverse financial effect on the British Refugee Council of delays in making European social fund payments.

Mr. Eggar: I understand from the European Commission that the Council's outstanding payments have been authorised and payment can be expected soon.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. McCusker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how may cattle showing symptoms of bovine spongiform encephalopathy were detected and brought to the attention of the Department of Agriculture during f989; and how many cattle were detected at slaughterhouses and meat plants in 1989.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: During 1989, 54 cattle showing symptoms suggestive of bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE) were brought to the attention of the Department of Agriculture. Thirty of these were confirmed as BSE cases on post-mortem. Four of the suspect cases were found in the course of routine official inspection of all animals presented at slaughterhouses. Of these only one proved positive.

Sewage Sludge

Mr. McCusker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what tonnage of sewage sludge has been dumped around the coast of Northern Ireland by the Department of the Environment water service during the past five years.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Complete statistics for 1989 are not yet available but the figures for sewage sludge from water service treatment works which was dumped in the coastal waters of Northern Ireland during the years 1984-85 are as follows:

	Tons
1984	310,203
1985	326,022
1986	285,436
1987	309,489
1988	291,904

Concessionary Fares

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland under what statute transport undertakings in Northern Ireland are able to offer concessionary fares; and what arrangements are made to reimburse them for the cost of such schemes.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The concessionary fares scheme in Northern Ireland, sponsored by the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland and administered by the passenger transport undertakings, is provided under article 5 of the Transport (NI) Order 1977. The Department reimburses the undertakings on the basis of claims which are subject to audit.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what categories of person are currently eligible for consessionary fares on Ulsterbus, Citybus and Northern Ireland Railways; and what are the numbers in each category who have used concessionary fares in the last year.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The concessionary fares scheme provides unlimited travel at half fare at all times on all scheduled services by road and rail throughout Northern Ireland for passengers over 65-years-old, children up to the age of 16 years and war disabled pensioners. Registered blind people are entitled to free travel.

The passenger transport undertakings do not maintain records of the number of people in each category who are entitled to half fare concession. Taken together there were about 17·7 million passenger journeys by public transport at half fare in the last year. There are 1,163 registered blind person passes in issue at present.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether consideration was given to including a concessionary travel scheme for disabled people in the draft Transport (Amendment) Northern Ireland Order 1989 similar to that provided for in the London Regional Transport Act 1984; what representations were received on the question of a concessionary scheme for the disabled; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Article 5 of the Transport (Northern Ireland) Order 1977 already makes satisfactory statutory provision for concessionary travel schemes in Northern Ireland. The draft Order has been given a general welcome. Such representations were not made.

Transport Consultation

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what time was allowed by his Department for the submission of views by individuals and organisations on the draft Transport (Amendment) Northern Ireland Order 1989; and if he will list those organisations who submitted their views.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: A proposal for a draft Order was published on 20 November 1989. The consultation period ended six weeks later on 29 December.

Ten organisations responded:

The Southern Education and Library Board
The General Consumer Council for Northern Ireland
Northern Ireland Council on Disability
Northern Ireland Transport Holding Company
South Eastern Education and Library Board
Western Health and Social Services Board
Northern Health and Social Services Board
The Royal Ulster Constabulary
North Eastern Education and Library Board
Ulsterbus

Teachers

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will establish a teaching council representative of teachers in Northern Ireland to work in partnership with Government on professional matters related to the teaching profession and the raising of educational standards.

Dr. Mawhinney: I am satisfied that the current arrangements for matters such as the standards of qualifications and entry to the profession and responsibility for teachers' probation and recognition are working satisfactorily. There are no plans for changes of the type suggested by the hon. Member.

On the general issue of raising educational standards, I look forward to a continuing partnership with the teaching profession to achieve the objectives set out in the Education Reform (NI) Order 1989.

Non-smokers

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provisions are being made in all the offices and other places under his Department's control for the convenience and comfort of non-smokers; and if he will make a statement on his Department's policy for non-smokers.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 29 January 1990]: The Northern Ireland Civil Service, with the support of the Trade Union Side of the Whitley council, introduced in 1987 a formal policy on smoking in Government premises.

Under the terms of this policy smoking is specifically prohibited in:

1. Conference rooms when used for meetings with civil servants;
2. Training rooms;
3. Lifts;
4. Official cars;
5. Kitchens, other cooking facilities, mess rooms and food stores;
6. Public counters and security/reception points.

A mechanism was also established by which, through local agreement, the occupants of buildings could introduce further measures.

In recognition of members of staff who choose to continue smoking, smoking rooms have been provided in those buildings where smoking at the workplace has been restricted or banned.

The policy is monitored on a continuous basis.

With regard to the Home Civil Service element in the Northern Ireland Office, management endorse the ideal of non-smoking as a safeguard to health. However, HCS staff occupy accommodation which is shared with other Government Departments, and it is also difficult to secure extra space for designated smoking areas. Smoking is not permitted in areas such as lifts. The matter is kept under review.

Educational Maintenance Allowance

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the operation of the educational maintenance allowance and its future.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 1 February 1990]: In August 1988, I announced that I had decided to let the educational maintenance allowance scheme continue to operate in its present form until I had had an opportunity to assess the effects, if any, of changes brought about by the introduction of the new social security benefits in April 1988. This examination is still being undertaken.

Council for Catholic Maintained Schools

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth will receive a reply to his letter dated 13 December 1989 referring to the Council for Catholic Maintained Schools.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 1 February 1990]: I signed the reply to the hon. Member's letter on 31 January 1990.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Nursing and Residential Homes

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much has been spent on keeping residents in nursing homes and in residential care homes throughout England and Wales since 1984.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that the figures are not available in the form requested. The figures as collected for Great Britain are shown in the table:

Supplementary benefit/Income support
Residential care and nursing homes expenditure and caseloads—1984-1989

	Numbers of claimants	Annual equivalent expenditure (nearest £ million)
Residential Care Homes (RCH)
December 1984[1]	—	—
December 1985	55,000	259
February 1986	70,000	328
May 1987	85,000	438
May 1988	103,000	556
May 1989	119,000	658
Nursing Homes (NH)
December 1984[1]	—	—
December 1985	15,000	89
February 1986	20,000	129
May 1987	32,000	233
May 1988	44,000	322
May 1989	57,000	446

[1]Figures for 1984 not collected separately. RCH and NH combined: Claimants 42,000. Annual equivalent expenditure £200 million.

[Due to the effects of rounding when separating categories, combined figures may vary slightly from previously published totals.]

Community Charge

Sir Rhodes Boyson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide examples of the effects of community charge benefit on the levels of gross earnings in 1990-91 at which families with children are free of the poverty trap assuming two-parent families with one, two, three and four children, community charge per adult of £200, £300, £400, £500 and £600, and that family credit entitlement is taken up in full.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he has any plans to raise the present upper limit on the amount of capital which may be held by community charge payers before they become ineligible for any rebate; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have no such plans. The upper capital limit of £8,000 strikes the right balance between helping those people who need assistance to pay their community charge and protecting the interests of taxpayers.

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will place in the Library a copy of the latest draft of the proposed claim form for terminally ill persons claiming attendance allowance.

Mr. Scott: We intend to put a draft claim form to the organisations involved in the care of terminally ill people and to terminally ill people themselves to ensure that we have found the most acceptable and sensitive form of wording. Once we are satisfied on this point, copies of the form will be placed in the Library.

Pensioners

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he intends to reply to the hon. Member for Crawley's question for priority answer on 18 January, concerning Her Majesty's Government's policies for caring for pensioners.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply given today.

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the past achievements and present objectives of Her Majesty's Government's policies for caring for pensioners.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 18 January 1990]: The Government have always attached the highest priority to the interests and needs of elderly people, and will continue to do so. We believe that our record demonstrates the depth of our commitment in caring for pensioners. We would particularly point to the improving economic circumstances of pensioners brought about by the wide range of successful Government policies aimed at creating a stable economic environment.

This success led to an increase in average pensioners' total net income of 23 per cent. in real terms between 1979 and 1986. The increases during the same period of the value of income from savings of 64 per cent. and occupational pensions of 56 per cent. are particularly encouraging. This demonstrates the vital importance to elderly people of the economic policies which the Government have pursued, and will continue to pursue. We think it is fair to say that the elderly are not a homogeneous group with wholly common interests and circumstances and our policies recognise this. For example, we are conscious that not all pensioners have benefited from sources of incomes other than their state pension. In recognition of that the package of measures introduced last October directed an extra £200 million towards 2·6 million individuals in greatest need—the less well-off, elderly and disabled pensioners on income support and housing benefit. However, many people wish to continue in work beyond pension age and the abolition of the retirement pension earnings rule, also last October, allows them the freedom to choose to do so and receive their pension.

In addition, many pensioners may benefit from the changes to personal taxation to be made from this coming April.

These are, we believe, all good examples of the sound policies which have enabled pensioners to share in the increased wealth of the nation.

Finally, the depth of our commitment may be measured by the levels of spending on the provision of benefits and services for the elderly; spending on social security benefit rose by 24 per cent. in real terms between 1979 and 1989-90; spending on health services for the elderly rose by 29 per cent. between 1978 and 1987 and spending on social services for the elderly rose by 21 per cent. between the same dates. This Government are committed to continuing to look after the interests of elderly people.

Social Security Claimants

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give for the Greenock and Port Glasgow local offices of his Department the statistical information he has to date regarding the different reasons given by social fund officers for refusals to claimants for (a) budgeting loans, (b) crisis loans and (c) community care grants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 25 January 1990]: Provisional figures for the period 9 April 1989 to 31 December 1990 are set out in the table.

The table gives the number of times that a reason for decision is used by social fund officers for determining a nil award for community care grants, budgeting and crisis loans.

An application can be refused for more than one reason. The total number of reasons for decision used will be equal to or greater than the number of applications refused. Information on the numbers of applications processed and awarded is available in the Library.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 19 May 1989, (Official Report, column 327-28), which gave the data for April 1988 to April 1989 for these offices.

ENERGY

BNFL (Contracts)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what recent export contracts have been awarded to British Nuclear Fuels plc; and what permissions have been sought by British Nuclear Fuels plc under the Nuclear Installations Act 1965 to carry out exports.

Mr. Baldry: Within the past two years, British Nuclear Fuels plc has been awarded export contracts amounting to some £80 million for providing a variety of nuclear services including uranium processing and enrichment, design and engineering work, and transport of spent fuel. Following the increase in capacity available to overseas customers for the first 10 years of reprocessing in its thermal oxide reprocessing plant (THORP), the company has also secured orders for over 80 per cent. of this additional capacity. Of these exports only those which involve the disposal of fissile material require approval by the Secretary of State for Energy under the Nuclear Installations Act 1965.

All exports of nuclear materials, equipment and technology are made within the guidelines set out in the statement by the then Foreign Secretary, James Callaghan, on 31 March 1976 at columns 514-16.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether there have been any changes in the arrangements for operating the return to sender options in contracts for reprocessing nuclear fuel from overseas as set out in his answer to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell), Official Report, 2 May 1986, column 500.

Mr. Baldry: There have been no changes to the arrangements mentioned by the hon. Member.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Hoax Alarm Calls (Deaths)

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many members of the general public in the past 10 years have been killed; and how many have been injured by vehicles of the emergency services whilst responding to hoax alarm telephone calls.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: One hundred and three police officers in England and Wales were killed in the course of duty during the last 10 years as a result of criminal action or accidents. Details of the circumstances surrounding these deaths are not held centrally. It is not therefore possible to determine whether an officer was killed whilst responding to a hoax alarm telephone call. Details of officers injured on duty are also not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Firearms

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the total number of firearms certificates on issue in England and Wales as at 31 December 1988; and when he will be able to supply detailed statistics in the form previously made available by his Department.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The number of firearms certificates on issue in England and Wales as at 31 December 1988 was 155,468. This information is included in table 2 of the Home Office statistical bulletin, issue 18/89, "Statistics on the operation of the Firearms Act 1968 England and Wales 1988". The bulletin also contains further information about the number of firearms certificates. A copy of this bulletin is in the Library, as are those relating to previous years.

Boundary Commissions

Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will indicate the matters relating to the boundary commissions on which he is prepared to answer questions.

Mr. Waddington: The boundary commissions are independent bodies operating under statute. I answer questions relating to those matters which are my responsibility (for example, making appointments to and meeting the costs of the English and Welsh commissions, and the consideration of their reports) and I will, as appropriate, answer questions relating commonly to all four parliamentary boundary commissions. Customarily I also answer questions seeking information about the commissions' work; this information is in the public domain and is available directly from the commissions. So far as the local government boundary commissions for England and Wales are concerned, I receive reports on electoral arrangements and will answer questions on my consideration of those.

Burglaries (Rochdale)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many burglaries and attacks on the person there were in 1987 and 1988 in the borough of Rochdale.

Mr. John Patten: The information readily available to the Home Office is for recorded crime in the Greater Manchester police force area and is published annually in table 2·5 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales". More detailed information, for areas within Greater Manchester such as Rochdale, is published annually in the report of the chief constable for Greater Manchester. Copies of these publications are in the Library.

Vice Rings

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to whether the Metropolitan police have requested assistance from Scottish police in respect of vice rings.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that no such request has been made in recent months.

Brixton Prison

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ask the chief inspector of prisons to carry out a full inquiry into the recent spate of suicides and deaths in suspicious circumstances in Brixton prison.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to a question from my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Burton (Mr. Lawrence) on 1 February 1990.

All deaths in prison custody are the subject of a coroner's inquest and any death in suspicious circumstances would be a matter for the police to investigate.

Drugs

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his best estimate of the current number of (a) opiate abusers and (b) non-opiate abusers in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Mellor: Information about the numbers of drug addicts notified to the Home Office in 1988 was published in Home Office statistical bulletin, issue 13/89, "Statistics of Drug Addicts notified to the Home Office, United Kingdom, 1988", a copy of which is in the Library. Notification applies only to certain controlled drugs, mainly opiates, but including cocaine, and many misusers will not have sought treatment and so will not have been notified. The Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs has estimated that there may be between 75,000 and 150,000 misusers of notifiable drugs in the United Kingdom, and as many again misusing a variety of non-notifiable drugs such as amphetamine (but excluding cannabis) on an experimental or occasional basis.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number and weight of seizures of (a) cocaine, (b) crack and (c) heroin in each of the last five years.

Mr. Mellor: Information about seizures by the police and Customs of cocaine and heroin from 1978 to 1988 was published in table 2.4 of Home Office statistical bulletin issue 30/89, "Statistics of the Misuse of Drugs: Seizures and Offenders Dealt with, United Kingdom, 1988", a copy of which is in the Library. Comparable information is not yet available for 1989.

Crack is a form of cocaine which was not analysed and reported separately before 1987 and has not, so far, been recorded separately in published statistics. Seizures of crack by the police and Customs and reported to the National Drugs Intelligence Unit since 1987 are as follows:

Year	Seizures	Grams
1987	12	6·7
1988	27	113·7
1989	[1]139	243

[1] Provisional figures.

Immigration Policy

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with his European Community counterparts about (a) immigration policy and (b) racism after 1992.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: For details of the most recent of the regular reports to the House on the meetings of immigration Ministers, I would refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Hampstead and Highgate (Sir G. Finsberg) on 20 December 1989 at column 276. As to racism, the Government participated in the joint declaration against racism and zenophobia by the EC institutions in June 1986. A draft resolution, submitted to Parliament as COM(88) 318 Final under a Home Office memorandum in October 1988, is still under consideration.

Children (Crimes)

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has on (i) the incidence of crime committed by children between (a) the age groups of five to 11 years and (b) 12 to 16 years, (ii) the time at which these crimes are committed; immediately after school hours, during school hours and during weekends and holidays and (iii) an analysis of the crimes committed together with regional variations.

Mr. John Patten: The earliest age at which a juvenile can be brought to court in criminal proceedings is 10 years. Information on the number of persons in the age groups 10-13 and 14-16 proceeded against at magistrates courts and the Crown court can be found in the "Criminal Statistics England and Wales 1988", supplementary volumes 1 and 2, tables S1.1(B), S2.1(B) and S1.1(C), S2.1(C), analysed by offence, sex and court disposal. Supplementary volumes 3 and 5 give a further breakdown by police force area, commission of the peace area and petty sessional division. Copies of these volumes may be found in the Library.

Data on the times and dates when offences occur are not collected centrally.

Police

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will list for each year since 1979, the countries from Latin America and from non-democratic states, that have sent delegations of police officers or military to study the police technology, crowd control techniques and computers used by United Kingdom police forces.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The table gives details of all centrally recorded visits by police officers and associated civilian personnel from overseas to study police technology, computers or crowd control techniques since 1980:

Year	Technology	Computers	Crowd Control
1980	Japan Saudi Arabia	Australia
1981		United Arab Emirates Singapore	Kuwait Australia United Arab Emirates
1982	Sri Lanka Egypt Qatar	Sweden India Sri Lanka	Hong Kong

Year	Technology	Computers	Crowd Control
1983		Oman Pakistan Israel Japan	New Zealand Sri Lanka
1984	Gabon Kuwait Singapore	Australia Zimbabwe Canada Pakistan Oman	Australia
1985	Greece	Kenya Australia	Turkey Australia Japan
1986	Indonesia	Australia Tanzania	Canada Australia Guyana
1987		North Cyprus Zambia	Uruguay Mexico
1988	France Malawi	Portugal Kenya India Australia Hungary Netherlands	France Botswana West Germany Belgium Netherlands
1989	Brazil Spain Portugal United Arab Emirates	Israel India Australia Saudi Arabia Sri Lanka	Nigeria Brazil Pakistan Tunisia Australia Belgium

Civil Defence Grant Aid

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total amount of civil defence grant aid for (a) staff costs, (b) building works and (c) other costs in the financial years from 1983-84 to 1988-89; what is the projected sum for 1989-90 received by each local authority in south Yorkshire; and if he will express the costs in real terms.

Mr. John Patten: Payments of civil defence grant in the financial years from 1983-84 to 1988-89 are not recorded in the form requested, and the information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Total grant payments made in cash terms to local authorities in each of the years in question were as follows:

Year	£ million
1983-84	9·406
1984-85	9·170
1985-86	11·861
1986-87	13·431
1987-88	19·740
1988-89	21·780

The projected total grant payment to South Yorkshire fire and civil defence authority in 1989-90, which is based upon information about forecast expenditure provided by that authority in October 1989 and is subject to final scrutiny, is £396,000. Information on grant payments to district councils in south Yorkshire will not be available until later this year.

Football Spectators Act 1989

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the cost to his Department of the introduction and passage of the Football Spectators Act 1989 through Parliament.

Mr. Waddington: The central staff costs incurred by my Department on the introduction and passage of the Football Spectators Act 1989 were approximately £80,000. This excludes other costs, which cannot readily be separately identified.

Nottinghamshire Police Authority

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what amount of grant has been given to the Nottinghamshire police authority in each year since 1979.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Payments of police grant were made as follows:

Year	£
1978-79	9,905,741
1979-80	12,639,235
1980-81	14,822,138
1981-82	17,976,392
1982-83	20,569,628
1983-84	23,731,818
1984-85	[2]45,426,033
1985-86	23,713,300
[1]1986-87	27,248,372
1987-88	28,329,014
1988-89	30,624,673

[1] The rate of police grant was increased from 50 per cent. to 51 per cent. from 1986-87.

[2] In addition to the above payments, Nottinghamshire police authority has received £23,840,404 in special grant arising from additional expenditure incurred in policing the coal strike; the bulk of this was paid in 1984-85.

Low-alcohol Drinks

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will list the alcohol percentages used for legal definitions of low-alcohol drinks in all those European Economic Community and European Free Trade Association countries which have such definitions.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information about labelling and licensing practices in these countries is not readily available. I will write to the hon. Member.

Sentenced Prisoners

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the prison population in England and Wales for the latest available date; and how many of those prisoners had been sentenced by (a) a Crown court and (b) a magistrates court; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 January 1990]: On 26 January 1990 there were 46,630 prisoners in prison service establishments in England and Wales.

Details of sentencing courts are published annually in "Prison Statistics, England and Wales" (table 1.15 of the latest volume, for 1988 (Cm. 825)), copies of which are in the Library. The latest available information is for June 1989 and is given in the table:

Population under sentence in prison service establishments on 30 June 1989: by court sentencing

Court sentencing	[1] Number
Crown Court	33,100
Magistrates court	3,400
Other courts	100
Not recorded	1,500
Total sentenced population	38,000

ENVIRONMENT

Councillors

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about the changes in the Local Government Act abolishing payments for loss of earnings and affecting councillors' allowances, and in particular on their impact on the full participation of elected council members in council business and the implications for local democracy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations from local authority associations, from local authorities, and from individual councillors about the proposed changes to the system of councillors' allowances. My hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and Inner Cities met the chairmen and leading members of the local authority associations on 25 January to discuss these proposals. Since the meeting he has written to the chairmen of the local authority assocations and offered to consider any modifications to the proposals—within the basic framework that has already been established—which they are able to agree by 16 February. We are anxious to secure the fairest possible distribution of the total available resources and thereby to ensure that people from all walks of life will continue to be able to serve as councillors without suffering undue hardship.

Councillors' Allowances

Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will bring forward proposals for local authority councillors' allowances to take into account the size of the council; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether he will consider introducing greater allowances for elected councillors for those local authorities with populations in excess of 200,000 as against ex-rural district councils; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Knowles: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) whether he will make it his policy in considering changes to the scheme of local councillors' allowances to take account of the special situation of ex-county boroughs;

(2) whether he will make it his policy to take account in any changes to the scheme for local councillors' allowances of the position of the ex-county boroughs with populations in excess of 200,000;

(3) whether, in considering changes to the scheme of local councillors' allowances, he has considered the size of population of the local authority area;

(4) whether, in considering the suggested changes to the scheme of local councillors' allowances, he proposes to distinguish between district authorities with under 100,000 population and those with populations over 200,000.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: In discussions with the local authority associations we have made it clear that if they wish to propose a distribution of the total amounts available to particular types of authority by population bands we shall be ready to consider it. No such proposals have so far been received. However, following a meeting with the chairmen and leading members of the local authority associations on 25 January my hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and Inner Cities has offered to consider any modifications to the proposals—within the basic framework that has already been established—which they are able to agree by 16 February. He has indicated that such modifications could be in respect of the distribution of the total resources, and it is open to the associations to propose population banding.

Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what allowances are available to elected members of (a) district councils in rural areas and (b) county boroughs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: All councillors, whatever the type of authority, are currently entitled to either attendance or financial loss allowance, and travel and subsistence allowances, in respect of approved duties at a rate set by the authority, subject to maxima prescribed by the Secretary of State. In addition, a council may pay special responsibility allowances within prescribed maxima, which vary according to the type of authority and the population of its area.

Building Maintenance (Tenders)

Mr. Thornton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing for each metropolitan local authority the number of tenders received in 1989 for day-to-day building maintenance contracts from (a) local authority direct labour organisations and (b) private building contractors.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: This information is not available. Local authorities are not required to provide details of these tenders to my Department.

Canals and Waterways

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what grants from his Department are available to voluntary organisations to help with the work of restoring canals and waterways; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what grants his Department has made to local authorities for help in restoring canals and waterways; what is the total amount of each grant; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 29 January 1990]: Derelict land grant may in certain cases be paid to both public and private sector bodies; including voluntary organisations towards the cost of canal and waterway restoration. It is normally available only where the work forms part of a wider reclamation scheme and is limited to the reclamation element in the restoration scheme. The Department has made derelict land grant available to local authorities for water-related reclamation schemes, but it is not possible to distinguish the amounts of grant paid in respect of the canal or waterway involved.

Grants may also be made to voluntary organisations under the Department's special grants programme towards their management costs.

Under the urban programme grant is paid to local authorities in support of a wide range of projects. In 1988-89 grant-eligible expenditure of £796,029 was approved to help with restoring canals and waterways.

Grants from the European regional development fund (ERDF) are available through the Department for infrastructure schemes in assisted areas where the cost of the works is wholly or substantially financed by public authorities. Work undertaken by a voluntary organisation may be eligible depending on whether its obligations to carry out such works are incorporated in its articles of association or trust deeds.

Local authorities also have power in section 114 of the Transport Act 1968 to assist the maintenance or improvement of any inland waterway in or near their area.

Radioactive Waste Conference

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department will be (a) represented or (b) presenting a paper at the radioactive waste conference to be held at the Gloucester hotel, London, on 5 and 6 February.

Mr. Trippier: The Department will be represented at the conference by three officials from Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution. The head of HMIP's northern region will present a paper on the regulation of radioactive waste in the United Kingdom.

Football Spectators Act 1989

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the cost to his Department of the introduction and passage of the Football Spectators Act 1989 through Parliament.

Mr. Moynihan: The central staff costs incurred by my Department on the introduction and passage of the Football Spectators Act 1989 were approximately £130,000. This excludes ministerial and other costs which we are unable to identify separately.

Chemicals (Clearance and Control)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to review the clearance of and controls on existing chemicals.

Mr. Trippier: The Department of the Environment and the Welsh Office published a consultation paper on statutory powers to evaluate and control the environmental hazard of existing chemicals in April 1989. The Secretary of State for the Environment announced on 20 December 1989 that further provisions on the control of chemicals forming a legal framework for the evaluation of potentially harmful effects on human health or the environment would be introduced in the Environmental Protection Bill.

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to introduce a benign list clearance system for new chemical substances.

Mr. Trippier: New chemical substances are subject to the provisions of the Notification of New Substances Regulations 1982 which implement European Communities directive No. 79/831/EEC. The regulations require that specified information on the properties and use of new substances is provided to the Department of the Environment and the Health and Safety Executive. The information is evaluated to assess any potential risk to man or the environment resulting from the use of the substance and where necessary appropriate action is taken.

Badgers

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to make provision for the protection of badger setts.

Mr. Trippier: It is an offence to destroy a badger sett if badgers may be unavoidably killed or injured as a result. A recent survey has shown that the badger is not under threat of extinction, not likely to become so and there are therefore no conservation grounds for extending the already substantial degree of protection afforded to badgers to the badger sett.

Marine Nature Conservation

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements he intends to make for the completion of a marine nature conservation review.

Mr. Trippier: The marine nature conservation review is a long term programme to provide a descriptive framework of British marine ecosystems and is being conducted by the Nature Conservancy Council. This review commenced in 1987 and the Nature Conservancy Council has always envisaged that it would take 10 years to complete. I am satisfied with the Nature Conservancy Council's arrangements for its completion, although it is for the council to decide where its priorities lie.

Water Supply (Disconnections)

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the latest figures for the number of people who were disconnected from their water supplies in England.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The latest available figures are for 1988-89, when a total of 13,967 domestic and non-domestic customers in England were disconnected for non-payment of charges. The figures do not therefore reflect the new procedures which each water company is required to follow, under their conditions of appointment, before disconnecting domestic customers.

Water Meters

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will withdraw the £240,000 payment by the Government to the compulsory meter trial in the Normanton constituency in view of the statement made by Sir Gordon Jones, chairman of Yorkshire Water, that domestic metering of water may not now take place; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what assessment he has made of the value for money of the Government's 50 per cent. contributions to South Normanton in the light of the announcement that meters may not be used in Yorkshire for assessing water charges for domestic customers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 1 February 1990]: I understand that, although Sir Gordon Jones has expressed a personal preference for charging domestic customers on the basis of a flat rate charge in the future, the board of Yorkshire Water has made no decision as to a future method of charging to replace charging by rateable values. Whatever method of charging is adopted by Yorkshire Water, it will not affect the Government's decision to contribute towards the cost of the South Normanton trial, which, together with the other metering trials, will provide information to the Director General of Water Services and the water industry generally on a wide range of metering issues. The Government consider that the lessons learnt from all of the trials will help ensure that those companies who decide to adopt metering in place of charging by rateable values will do so cost effectively and with the least inconvenience to customers.

Mice

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what facilities he intends to provide for the European Community Commission's European mouse care expert in order to facilitate his work in this country.

Mr. Gummer: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to his related questions today.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Student Loans

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many representations he has had regarding student loans and the effect they might have on those students studying four and five year courses such as medicine.

Mr. Jackson: We have received some 5,100 letters about top-up loans, including many referring to long courses and many supporting the principle that students should contribute towards their own living costs.

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has been in further correspondence with the banks since they pulled out of the student loans scheme.

Mr. Jackson: There has been no correspondence with the banks since the transfer of ownership of the Student Loans Company.

Foreign Language Students

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the number of students pursuing (a) a degree, (b) an A-level and (c) a GCSE, or nearest appropriate equivalent, in (i) French, (ii) German, (iii) Spanish, (iv) Portuguese, (v) Italian, (vi) Japanese, (vii) Chinese and (viii) Russian for 1970, 1975, 1980 and 1985 and any estimate he has for 1990.

Mr. Jackson: The available information is given in the tables.

Schools (Information)

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if head teachers are not now required to submit precise information in regard to educational provision under the 1989 Information Regulations; and why detailed questions are presented;

(2) if he will advise head teachers that there is no need for them to provide particularly precise information when responding to the 1989 Information Regulations;

(3) what is his estimate of the time which head teachers will need to devote to provide a response to the 1989 Information Regulations concerning the submission of statistical information regarding educational provision in their schools;

(4) what is his policy on whether head teachers should respond with a broad brush when submitting information concerning educational provision under the 1989 Information Regulations.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley) on 29 January at column 31.

BNFL (Sponsorship of University Appointments)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the university appointments currently sponsored by British Nuclear Fuels plc.

Mr. Jackson: This information is not collected by the Department.

Cash Limits

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether there are any changes to the cash limits for his Department's votes.

Mr. MacGregor: The cash limit for class XII, vote 5 will be increased by £1,489,000 from £815,875,000 to £817,364,000. A total of £1,191,000 of the increase reflects the take-up of the entitlement to carry forward capital underspend under the end-year flexibility arrangement, as announced by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 20 July 1989. A total of £548,000 of the increase reflects an adjustment to the level of grant following an administrative error in the payment of 1988-89 grant to the Science and Engineering Council. Increased expenditure on fees paid under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 accounts for a further £4,000.

These increases are offset by a reduction of £254,000 in the grant to the Agricultural and Food Research Council (AFRC) to reflect a further reduction in the AFRC's grant to the Institute of Plant Science Research following the institute's retention of proceeds from the sale of the Plant Breeding Institute.

SCOTLAND

Social Security Benefit

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of the Scottish population of 16 years and over receive any form of social security benefit payment or pension; and if he will make a statement containing numerical information on this matter.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have been asked to reply.

In 1988 about 2·5 million adults in Scotland (65 per cent.) were in receipt of some form of social security benefit. This figure includes both partners of all couples in receipt of benefit but excludes dependent young people aged 16 to 18 as well as children under 16. The total includes about 1·1 million adults in families receiving child benefit and about 800,000 pension recipients.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Family Law

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Attorney-General when the family law and administration working party intends to report its interim deliberations for consultation.

Mr. Key: To ask the Attorney-General when the family law and administration working party intends to report its interim deliberations for consultation.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Attorney-General when the family law and administration working party intends to report its interim deliberations for consultation.

The Attorney-General: The role of the family law and administration working party is to oversee and where necessary co-ordinate advice to Ministers on matters within the announced rolling programme to review family law and administration. Accordingly it is not expected itself to publish reports or consultation documents.

Mr. Day: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the rolling programme of family law reform promised in the later stages of the Children Act 1989.

Sir George Young: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the rolling programme of family law reform promised in the later stages of the Children Act 1989.

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the rolling programme of family law reform promised in the later stages of the Children Act 1989.

The Attorney-General: The Government's rolling programme of review of family law and its administration includes:

(a) implementation of the Children Act 1989, including a review of court procedures;
(b) consideration of the Law Commission's report on divorce when it is received and with it the future provision of conciliation and reconciliation services;
(c) consideration of the law relating to financial provision in family cases;
(d) consideration of the Law Commission's report on domestic violence and rights to occupy the family home when received;
(e) the future provision and organisation of the services which provide independent and expert advice to the courts in family proceedings or which provide representation for the child or his interests; and
(f) consideration, in the light of other changes, of the jurisdiction of the courts in family matters.

The Government have set up an interdepartmental working party, the family law and administration working party, to oversee and, where necessary, to co-ordinate advice to Ministers on implementation of the Children Act 1989 and matters falling within the rolling programme.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Attorney-General if the family law and administration working party is considering the future of welfare and conciliation services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gregory: To ask the Attorney-General if the family law and administration working party is considering the future of welfare and conciliation services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Squire: To ask the Attorney-General if the family law and administration working party is considering the future of welfare and conciliation services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Doran: To ask the Attorney-General if the family law and administration working party is considering the future of welfare and conciliation services.

The Attorney-General: The role of the family law and administration working party is to oversee and where necessary co-ordinate advice to Ministers on matters within the announced rolling programme to review family law and business. Work is in hand in the responsible Departments on the future of welfare and conciliation services but it is too early to say what the results may be.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Attorney-General when the family law and administration working party last met; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Attorney-General when the family law and administration working party last met; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Attorney-General when the family law and administration working party last met; and what matters were discussed.

The Attorney-General: The family law and administration working party last met in November 1989, when it discussed the parliamentary passage of the Children Bill and progress towards the Bill's implementation, including training in the handling of children's cases.

Mr. French: To ask the Attorney-General if he has any proposals to increase the rate at which divorce hearings and child custody hearings are processed.

The Attorney-General: It is the aim of the Government that child custody cases should be processed expeditiously. When the Children Act 1989 comes into force it will re-emphasise the importance of avoiding delay in determining any issue relating to the upbringing of a child and will facilitate the imposition of timetables in such proceedings.

Mr. French: To ask the Attorney-General if he will introduce legislation to provide for indexing of maintenance payments in divorce proceedings to the retail price index.

The Attorney-General: No. The Government are, however, reviewing the arrangements for assessing, collecting and enforcing maintenance payments; and means of keeping the levels of maintenance awards up to date is one of the major aspects being addressed.

Mr. French: To ask the Attorney-General what information he has on the length of time taken to process (a) divorce hearings and (b) child custody hearings; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The length of time a divorce hearing or child custody hearing takes from application to completion is subject to several factors, including the action of the parties.

The only measurement of time recorded is the interval between a request from the parties for a hearing, or at the instigation of the court, and the next date with sufficient time available to hear the case. It is not possible to distinguish between divorce or child custody hearings and other civil cases.

Mr. Waller: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the future of welfare services and their role in resolving matrimonial disputes.

The Attorney-General: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer which I have given today to the questions on the rolling programme of family law reform.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Attorney-General when proposals from the family law and administration working party on the future of welfare and conciliation services will be available for consultation.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Attorney-General when proposals from the family law and administration working party on the future of welfare and conciliation services will be available for consultation.

Mr. Graham: To ask the Attorney-General when proposals from the family law and administration working party on the future of welfare and conciliation services will be available for consultation.

The Attorney-General: The role of the family law and administration working party is to oversee and where necessary co-ordinate advice to Ministers on matters within the announced rolling programme to review family law and administration. Accordingly it is not expected to publish reports or consultation documents. Work is in hand in the responsible Departments on the future of welfare and conciliation services but it is too early to say what the results might be.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the future of the conciliation services.

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the future of the conciliation services.

The Attorney-General: I refer my hon. Friends to the answer I gave on 29 January at column 27.

Divorce Laws

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Attorney-General what plans have been formulated for a reform of the divorce laws; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Attorney-General what plans have been formulated for a reform of the divorce laws; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Attorney-General what plans have been formulated for a reform of the divorce laws.

The Attorney-General: The Law Commission is reviewing the law of divorce and is expected to report later this year. It would be premature to reach any conclusions until its proposals have been considered in detail.

Crèches

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list by location where crèche facilities are provided for working mothers employed in his Department; and if they have to make any payment for this service.

The Attorney-General: Crèche facilities are not provided at the legal secretariat to the Law Officers or the Serious Fraud Office. The Crown prosecution service is encouraging the establishment of crèche facilities where this is justified by demand and local CPS offices are encouraged to co-operate with other Departments. The Treasury Solicitor's Department provides accommodation in Queen Anne's chambers for a holiday play scheme, run in conjunction with the Cabinet Office, and which offers 32 places for five to 12-year-olds. A payment of £5 per day per child is required for this service. The Treasury Solicitor's Department is actively considering a crèche and hopes to establish such facilities in conjunction with the Charity Commission when its property division relocates to Taunton in August 1991.

Welfare Services

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the future of welfare services and their role in resolving matrimonial disputes.

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which I have given today to the questions on the rolling programme of family law reform.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Local Government Pensioners

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received concerning the level of pensions paid to retired Kenya local government officers.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have received representations on behalf of retired Kenya local government officers on a number of occasions, both from the retired officers themselves and through hon. Members.

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will estimate the cost of extending United Kingdom pension increase arrangements to (a) all expatriate local government pensioners and (b) local government pensioners formerly employed in Kenya.

Mr. Waldegrave: We do not hold sufficient information about these groups of pensioners to enable us to provide meaningful estimates.

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans his Department has to assume responsibility for pensions paid to retired Kenya local government officers.

Mr. Waldegrave: None. I refer my hon. Friend to the answer which my right hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development gave him on 16 January.

Ethiopia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the Government's policy on giving (a) emergency famine relief to Ethiopia and (b) assistance for long-term development.

Mr. Waldegrave: We shall continue to respond generously to the renewed threat of famine in Ethiopia and the hon. Member will be aware of the most recent commitment of relief aid announced by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development on 31 January at column 189. As to the question of assistance for longer-term development, the Government's policy remains as stated in their observations (column 432) on the report of the Select Committee on Foreign Affairs on famine in the Horn of Africa and, in particular, in the response (page 6) to the recommendations contained in paragraph 101 of the report.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will give details of the £0·7 million provided for food-growing programmes in Ethiopia referred to by the Minister for Overseas Development on 29 January, Official Report, column 16; and whether the Government will support agricultural rehabilitation programmes in Ethiopia, sponsored by British voluntary agencies.

Mr. Waldegrave: The figure stated by my right hon. Friend represents anticipated expenditure in the current financial year against overall commitments totalling £2·6 million in respect of four community-level, agricultural rehabilitation and development projects being implemented by British non-governmental organisations (CARE Britain, Farm Africa and SOS Sahel) and a commitment of up to £400,000 in respect of a research project designed to produce improved strains of teff (an indigenous cereal crop). Two further NGO proposals are under consideration and we remain ready to consider any others which may be submitted.

Development Assistance

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was United Kingdom official development assistance as a percentage of gross national product for each year from 1979 to 1989; what is the estimated percentage for 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: United Kingdom official development assistance as a percentage of gross national product for each year from 1979 is given in the table. The figure for 1989 is not yet available, nor is an estimate for 1990.

Arms Exports

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he will take in order to implement the resolution on arms exports unanimously adopted by the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe in September 1989.

Mr. Waldegrave: We already apply stringent licensing controls to all proposed arms exports; the sale of equipment judged likely to be used for internal repression, for example, would not be allowed. We are now taking part in the United Nations study group promoting transparency in international transfers of conventional arms, which had its first meeting in New York on 22 to 26 January.

PHARE

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on British involvement in the Poland and Hungary Assistance for Economic Restructuring, PHARE, programme with reference to that priority sector of the programme which concerns environmental issues.

Mr. Waldegrave: We strongly support the work of the Group of 24 in providing co-ordinated help to Poland and Hungary, under the chairmanship of the European Commission. The European Community has so far provided £210 million for aid to Poland and Hungary in 1990, some £35 to £50 million of which has been earmarked for expenditure on the environment. United Kingdom experts participated in two recent fact-finding missions to Poland and Hungary to assess environmental priorities in those two countries. Proposals based on their reports are in preparation. We shall continue to urge that resources and expertise are deployed according to a scientifically based assessment of those countries' needs.

Ivory

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a further statement on how the existing 600-tonne stock of ivory in Hong Kong was acquired.

Mr. Waldegrave: Hong Kong's ivory stock was acquired in the normal process of trade. Most was imported in the raw form from all major sources, either directly or through intermediaries.

Hong Kong

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much elephant ivory and rhino horn has been seized by the authorities in Hong Kong during the last six months.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 22 January 1990]: In the last six months, the following has been seized by the authorities in Hong Kong:

	Number of seizures	Quantity
Elephant ivory	27	2·16 tonnes
Rhino horn	2	21·2 kilogrammes

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much ivory has been exported from Hong Kong in the last six months; to which countries it was exported; and how much of such ivory was (a) worked and (b) raw.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 22 January 1990]: Since 1 June 1989, Hong Kong has exported 4·8 tonnes of worked ivory and 50 tonnes of raw ivory. The principal destinations were China, Macau, Singapore, Taiwan, Japan, India, Thailand, South Korea, the Federal Republic of Germany and Mexico.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if all the current ivory stock in Hong Kong is marked and registered in accordance with CITES requirements.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 22 January 1990]: All ivory stock in Hong Kong that may be traded is marked and registered in accordance with CITES requirements.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give details of the steps being taken by the Hong Kong authorities to monitor the disposal of the ivory stocks which can be traded during the next six months.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 22 January 1990]: All traders are required to take out possession licences for all commercial ivory and personal effects in excess of 5 kg. Details of stocks are entered into the computer data base of the CITES management authority. The authority has to be notified of transfers of stocks between traders and their stock balance is varied accordingly. An export licence is required for any trader to export ivory, either in raw or in worked form. An export licence will be granted to the trader only if the ivory in question is from the trader's legally registered stock from CITES approved sources and the destination of the export is not a CITES party which exercises a ban on ivory imports.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has as to whether all the current ivory stock in Hong Kong was legally acquired.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 22 January 1990]: The Hong Kong authorities have inspected all the ivory stocks in the territory. They have found no evidence that the stocks were illegally acquired.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the exact current stock of ivory in Hong Kong which may be traded in the next six months; and how much of it is (a) worked and (b) raw.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 22 January 1990]: The current stocks of ivory in Hong Kong that may be traded in the next six months are 104 tonnes of worked ivory and 254 tonnes of raw ivory.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what will happen to that Hong Kong ivory not disposed of by the end of the six months exemption to the current trade ban.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 22 January 1990]: Under the CITES ban, all commercial exports of ivory will cease. Ivory not disposed of by the end of the six months exemption period could not be legally exported as no licence for this would be issued by the Hong Kong authorities. It will remain in Hong Kong.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs where the legally held ivory in Hong Kong came from.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 30 January 1990]: The Hong Kong authorities believe that Hong Kong stocks are likely to include ivory originating from all major sources, either directly or via intermediary countries.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the shipment records of Hong Kong ivory recently given an exemption from the ivory trade ban will be open to inspection by the public.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 January 1990]: Commercial documents such as bills of lading and export licences are not open to public inspection.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the Hong Kong authorities have received from the ivory trade to extend the six-month exemption on the sale of ivory.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 January 1990]: No representations have been received since the exemption was announced.

EEC Overseas Territories

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the names and populations of overseas territories of members of the EEC; if he will futher indicate what plans there are to allow persons from such territories the right of abode within the EEC; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude [pursuant to his reply, 22 January 1990, c. 527-28]: The following additions should be made to the list of United Kingdom dependent territories:

Territories	Numbers and Year
Pitcairn	56 (1989)

DEFENCE

Defence Expenditure

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his latest information on defence budget reductions (a) proposed and (b) implemented by (i) the United States of America, (ii) Hungary, (iii) NATO as a whole and (iv) the Warsaw pact as a whole.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Member states of NATO report their budgetary plans each summer in their response to the NATO defence planning questionnaire. The plans reported in 1989 generally provided for budget increases. We expect the plans reported by the United States in 1990 to reflect the Administration's proposals now before Congress for reductions in defence spending over the next five years.

With the exception of Romania, all Warsaw pact countries have announced reductions in defence spending and there is evidence that these reductions are being implemented. Hungary, whose contribution to total Warsaw pact defence expenditure is very small, announced a reduction of about one quarter in its defence budget for 1989.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has made any estimate of the likely increase or decrease in expenditure of (a) North Atlantic Treaty Organisation and (b) Warsaw pact countries over the next five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The plans reported last year to the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation by member states generally provided for modest real increases in defence expenditure in the years immediately ahead. All Warsaw pact countries, with the exception of Romania, announced cuts in defence expenditure in 1989 to take effect in that and subsequent years. We are monitoring the implementation of these announcements.

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what additional review of defence expenditure he is carrying out in the light of developments in Warsaw pact countries.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evaluation he has made of the implications of developments in eastern Europe for United Kingdom defence spending.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are no plans to reduce defence expenditure.

British Army of the Rhine

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of (a) the capital costs and (b) the revenue savings of reducing the number of men in the British Army of the Rhine.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We have no current plans to reduce the number of men in the British Army of the Rhine, and it is not our practice to speculate on hypothetical possibilities concerning future force levels.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost of the armed services covering civilian ambulance services.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Up to 31 December 1989 extra costs in the region of £1·9 million have been reported for recovery by the Ministry of Defence from the Department of Health, the Scottish Home and Health Department and the Welsh Office.

Skye Toll Bridge

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the stipulations which his Department has imposed upon the design of the proposed Skye toll bridge and the reasons for so doing.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My Department has asked that the bridge should have a minimum height clearance of 34 m above mean high water springs, or 36 m if a tidal gauge is installed. This is to ensure that the channel can be used by ships of up to and including destroyer or frigate size as well as by the vessels of the Royal Maritime Auxiliary Service, which regularly use the channel en route to the range at Raasay.

Britannia

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the clearance height required by the royal yacht Britannia.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The royal yacht requires a clearance of approximately 130ft (39·62m), or 122ft (37·18m) if the mast is "scandalised".

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the number of occasions in each of the past few years on which the royal yacht Britannia has passed through the Kyles of Lochalsh.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The royal yacht has passed through the Kyles of Lochalsh on three occasions in the past five years: once each in 1986, 1988 and 1989.

TA Depot, Govan

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from Govan Initiative arising out of its secure communities project which referred to excessive noise levels from the Territorial Army depot adjacent to the Teucharhill housing scheme; and what action has been taken.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None.

Defence Support Agencies

Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the organisational and financial differences between defence support agencies run on next steps lines and next steps executive agencies such as the Defence Research Agency and the Meteorological Office.

Mr. Neubert: Organisationally the main difference will lie in the relationship between the chief executive and the Minister. In the case of next steps executive agencies, the chief executive is personally and directly accountable to the Minister, for his or her performance. This is the relationship which will apply in the cases of, for instance, the Meteorological Office and the Defence Research Agency.

Other defence support organisations must, however, remain fully embedded within the defence chain of command, for the reasons that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence gave in the House of Commons on 18 October, column 155. In these cases, the chief executive will be accountable to Ministers, through the chain of command.

In most other respects it will not be possible to differentiate the characteristics of defence support agencies from the normal next step agencies. The aim of both is to secure improved management and better results. Each agency will have different requirements and the policy and resources framework in each case will be tailored to the individual circumstances of the organisation concerned.

Cash Limits

Mr. Bendall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he can announce any changes to the defence cash limits and running costs limit for 1989-90.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Subject to parliamentary approval to the necessary spring Supplementary Estimates the following changes will be made:

(1) Defence Cash Limits

£'000s

Class and Vote	Current Cash Limit	Increase/ Decrease	Revised Cash Limit
I, 1	8,349,433	+130,282	8,479,715
I, 2	8,339,159	+260,841	8,600,000
I, 3	1,202,721	+9,606	1,212,327
I, 4	1,816,030	+52,518	1,868,548
I, 5	441,372	+43,858	485,230

These changes, totalling £497,105,000, reflect the take-up of part of the entitlement to carry-forward of capital underspending under the end-year flexibility scheme (announced by my right hon. Friend the Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 20 July 1989, Official Report, columns 258-62) and the additional arrangements for defence procurement (announced on 16 January 1990 by my right hon. Friend the Member for Bridgwater (Mr. King), Official Report, columns 135 and 136). These increases will be charged to the reserve.

The changes also take account of a transfer of £800,000 from the Department of Transport (class VIII, vote 2) to class I, vote 1, reflecting the transfer of responsibility for the costs of royal flights in civil aircraft (announced by my right hon. Friend the Member for Southend, West (Mr. Channon) Official Report, 18 May 1989, column 280), and a further transfer of £34,000 from the Cabinet Office:

Office of the Minister for the Civil Service (class XX, vote 1) in respect of the challenge funding scheme for senior management development training. These changes will not add to the planned total of public expenditure.

(2) Running Costs Limit

The running costs limit for the Department will be increased by £2,034,000 from £5,149,347,000 to £5,151,381,000 reflecting both the transfer of £34,000 in respect of challenge funding and an increase of £2,000,000 for the running costs element of the additional expenditure incurred by the Ministry of Defence in providing assistance in the ambulance dispute.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Pet Foods

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether the use of those bovine offals currently banned for use in products for human consumption is permitted for use in pet foods; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether pet food manufacturers can currently use without restriction brine offals currently banned from human consumption.

Mr. Maclean: Spongiform encephalopathies have never been recorded in domestic pets. Moreover, the industry's policy is not to use these materials. There is thus no need for regulatory action.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will state (a) when the first case of bovine spongiform encephalopathy was positively identified, (b) when bovine spongiform encephalopathy was made a notifiable disease, (c) when offals from cattle were banned for use for human consumption, (d) when compensation for farmers for bovine spongiform encephalopathy-infected cattle was introduced, (e) when research into the possibility of transmission of the bovine spongiform encephalopathy infective agent from generation to generation was begun; and (f) if he will make a statement about the sequence of events, and their respective timings.

Mr. Maclean: It was made notifiable in June 1988 as soon as research and field investigation had established a clear clinical picture and techniques had been developed to obtain a definitive diagnosis. Without such action it is not possible to deal with any disease, let alone a new disease never previously reported in cattle.

The feeding of ruminant-based rations to ruminants was banned from July 1988 as soon as studies had confirmed this to be the most likely cause of the disease.

In April 1988 the Government set up an independent working party under the chairmanship of Sir Richard Southwood to look at BSE, in particular at any human health implications. An interim recommendation was made in June 1988 that, although there was no evidence of a risk to humans, as a precautionary measure all cattle suspected of having BSE should be slaughtered and destroyed to take them out of the food chain. The Government acted promptly on this and the slaughter policy began on 8 August that year.

A research committee under the chairmanship of Dr. David Tyrrell was established to advise on research in relation to BSE and the other transmissible spongiform encephalopathies following another interim recommendation. In January this year the Government announced that over £12 million would be spent over the next three years as part of a comprehensive programme of research which had been started as soon as the disease was first identified. The Southwood report was published in February last year. It welcomed the Government's action to deal with the disease, including the prompt implementation of its interim recommendations, and concluded that the risk of transmission to humans was "remote". All its final recommendations have been implemented.

The Government's commitment to protecting and reassuring the public following the emergence of BSE is clearly shown by the action taken, which includes, in addition, the ban from November 1989 on the use of certain offals which, although not recommended by Southwood, represents a further safeguard to consumers.

Mice

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how his Department intends to liaise with the European Community Commission's mouse care expert;

(2) whether he was consulted on the European Community Commission's proposal to appoint a mouse care expert to raise the productivity of the European Community market on mice and rats; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: There is no proposal to appoint a European mouse care expert. I assume that the hon. Member must be referring to a proposal for a Council regulation on animal health conditions governing trade in rodents. These proposals are of real concern as they are relevant to Her Majesty's Government's fight against rabies and if adopted will require staff resources to be devoted to ensuring that its requirements are being fulfilled. The Government's assessment of it was set out in the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food's explanatory memorandum 9715/89 of 27 November 1989 a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Cereals

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the benefits which will accrue to the cereals sector from the current year's grants from the European Community for the improvement of marketing and processing facilities.

Mr. Maclean: Awards made by the Commission under European Community regulation 355/77 to projects aimed at improving the marketing and processing of agricultural products are announced in June and December each year. The first awards for 1990 will be announced in June.

For 1989 the Commission announced awards totalling £1,714,160 to seven projects in the cereals sector in the United Kingdom.

European Community Grants

Mr. Moss: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what benefits will accrue to Cambridgeshire from the current year's grants from the European Economic Community for the improvement of marketing and processing facilities.

Mr. Maclean: Awards made by the Commission under European Community regulations 355/77 aimed at improving the marketing and processing of agricultural products are announced in June and December each year. The first awards for 1990 will be announced in June.

For 1989 the Commission announced three awards for projects in Cambridgeshire; one in the cereals sector for £210,012, one in the horticulture sector for £323,312 and one in the pigmeat sector for £533,658.

Nitrate-sensitive Areas

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to announce the level of compensation payable to farmers in nitrate-sensitive areas.

Mr. Maclean: We are currently examining the detailed costs of the measures proposed in each area, and will make a statement as soon as this examination is complete.

Salmonella

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a further statement on his consideration of the testing of imported eggs for salmonella.

Mr. Maclean: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Billericay (Mrs. Gorman) on 11 December 1989 at column 522.

Scrapie

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make scrapie a notifiable disease; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I have no plans to do so. The disease, which has been present in the national flock for well over two centuries, is endemic in a sheep population of over 10 million and there is no test in the live animal. Intensive study has shown that there is no epidemiological relationship between scrapie and the human encephalopathies.

Carcases

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will now outlaw the use of animal carcases as foodstuffs for pigs.

Mr. Maclean: There is no scientific evidence to indicate that such action is necessary. Pigs are omnivores, unlike cattle and sheep, which are ruminants. They are in particular likely to have had heavy exposure to the bovine spongiform encephalopathy agent through the feeding of meat and bone meat derived from ruminants without any ill effect. The Southwood report acknowledged the importance of the feed ban for ruminants but did not recommend it be extended to pigs and poultry.

Milk Quotas

Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he intends to set a deadline for the notification of milk quota transfers in England and Wales.

Mr. Gummer: Following discussions with the industry I have decided to make use of the powers provided by the Dairy Produce Quotas Regulations 1989. Quota transfers notified after 23 April, even if they are notified as having occurred in the previous quota year, will not affect the calculation of supplementary levy liability in respect of that quota year.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Michael: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what part is played by his Department in identifying the causes of trends in figures in the incidence of food poisoning in the United Kingdom;

(2) what responsibilities lie with his Department in regard to monitoring trends in figures in the incidence of cases of food poisoning.

Mr. Maclean: My Department co-operates with the Department of Health in identifying areas where action may be needed to minimise the risk of contamination of food at the point of production, for example in relation to salmonella in eggs. The Department also provides any support which may be needed by the Department of Health in monitoring and interpreting trends in the incidence of food poisoning.

Dredge Spoil

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the percentage of mercury contamination in dredge spoil in (a) the Tyne estuary and (b) Liverpool bay.

Mr. Gummer: Information on the trace metal composition of dredged materials licensed for disposal at sea is held on a public register maintained by my Department. For the Tyne estuary the concentration of mercury in dredged materials is 0·0001 per cent. In the Mersey estuary concentrations in dredged materials range from 0·0001 to 0·0006 per cent. (1 to 6 mg/kg dry weight).

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the contamination of heavy metals of dredge spoil in (a) the Tyne estuary and (b) Liverpool bay; what monitoring of release of heavy metals in dredge spoil in these areas is being or has been carried out; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Licences for the disposal of dredged material at sea are granted for one year and details of trace metal concentrations and other information are placed on a public register held in my Department. For recurrent dredging operations, these data are reviewed annually and locations are resampled at least every three years in accordance with guidelines set down by the Oslo commission. There are currently four licences for the disposal of material in Liverpool bay and three licences for disposal at a site three and a half miles off the mouth of the Tyne estuary.

The Ministry has conducted a programme of both laboratory and field investigations on the fate of heavy metals in dredged materials. The Ministry has also conducted a survey of trace metal contamination in the Tyne estuary and has identified areas where, in the event of dredging, the sediments are not suitable for disposal at sea. Results of the field monitoring surveys have been published in the fisheries research technical report series and are in the Library of the House.

Further work on the quality of fish and shellfish in these and other coastal areas is published in "Aquatic Environment Monitoring Report No. 16", a copy of which is also in the Library of the House. These investigations have shown that, in the case of mercury in Liverpool bay which has been subject to historical industrial inputs, the concentration of mercury in a range of fish satisfies the EC environmental quality standard of 0·3 mg/kg wet weight. For other heavy metals in both locations, concentrations are well below national standards for food quality.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Girobank

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects to announce the completion arrangements for the sale of Girobank.

Mr. Forth: The Post Office and Alliance and Leicester building society are engaged in detailed negotiations with a view to completing the sale as soon as practicable. The sale is a complex matter and it was invevitable that it would take some time to complete.

Fraud (Liability)

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has on the extent of the potential liability of banks to recompense members of the public as a result of frauds being perpetrated by agents tied to life assurance subsidiaries of banks.

Mr. Redwood: The statutory responsibility of the principal of a tied agent under the Financial Services Act is limited to the latter's actions in carrying on investment business for which the principal has accepted responsibility in writing. The liability of the principal's parent company depends on the nature of the parent-subsidiary relationship. If both are limited companies, the liability of the parent, whether or not a bank, is that of any limited liability company to a limited liability subsidiary.

Garston Amhurst

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether Companies House records on Garston Amhurst Associates Holdings Limited are up to date.

Mr. Redwood: There is no company currently registered under the name Garston Amhurst Associates Holdings Limited. There are, however, five similarly named companies on the register which are listed in the table, together with details of their current filing position in relation to annual returns and accounts.

Company name	Outstanding documents Annual accounts	Annual returns
Garston Amhurst Associates (Bristol) Limited	1988	1987-88
Garston Amhurst Associates (Financial Management) Limited	1988	1986-88
Garston Amhurst Associated (Financial Services) Limited	1988	1988
Garston Amhurst Associates (General) Limited	1988	1986-88
Garston Amhurst Associates (London) Limited	1988	1987-88

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will commence an inquiry under the Companies Act into Garston Amhurst Associates Holdings Limited, its directors and its auditors;

(2) what information he has about the auditors of Garston Amhurst Associates Holdings Limited;

(3) what information he has on the corporate entity called Garston Amhurst or Garston Amhurst Associates Group Holdings Limited and its directors.

Mr. Redwood: I am aware of recent developments concerning GAA Group Holdings Limited and other companies in the Garston Amhurst Associates Group.

On 25 January 1990 the Securities and Investments Board presented petitions for the winding up of the following group companies of which the Official Receiver was appointed provisional liquidator on the same day:

GAA Group Holdings Limited
Garston Amhurst Associates (London) Limited
Garston Amhurst Associates (Bristol) Limited
Garston Amhurst Associates (Financial Services) Limited
Garston Amhurst Associates (Financial Management) Limited

These companies have been drawn to the attention of the Serious Fraud Office by the Securities and Investments Board and the Serious Fraud Office has confirmed that an inquiry into them is in progress.

In the circumstances I have no plans to exercise investigatory powers in relation to those companies and I cannot comment further.

Comecon (Joint Ventures)

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received about the need for property rights and a coherent law of contract for individuals within Comecon countries engaging in joint ventures with western countries.

Mr. Redwood: My Department has received many and various comments to this effect. The lack of property rights and a coherent law of contract is of course a primary feature of the Communist system and a great disincentive to investment as well as to personal initiative. Measures to reduce or remove this disincentive have already been implemented in Hungary and are under active consideration in Poland and Czechoslovakia as well as in other Comecon countries. I welcome all such measures and on my visits to the USSR and Poland in March will emphasise the relevance of a proper legal framework to successful inward investment.

Bank Accounts (Monitoring)

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has any proposals to improve the clearing banks' arrangements for monitoring the use of client bank accounts under the Financial Services Act.

Mr. Redwood: The extent of the responsibility of institutions at which client money accounts under the Financial Services Act are lodged is set out in section 55(4) of that Act, and I have no plans to review this legislation.

Securities and Investments Board

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals he has to strengthen the present arrangements of the Securities and Investments Board for monitoring the rule book of LAUTRO.

Mr. Redwood: The Securities and Investments Board's arrangements for monitoring the regulatory bodies it has recognised are a matter for the board.

LAUTRO

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he has taken to ensure that the rules of the self-regulatory body known as LAUTRO are adequate to protect the public against fraud.

Mr. Redwood: Responsibility for ensuring that LAUTRO's rules provide the appropriate level of protection for investors lies with the Securities and Investments Board.

Tied Agents

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to amend the Financial Services Act to make it clear that the liability for monitoring tied agents rests with the life insurance company which has entered into the contractual arrangements which result in the tied arrangement.

Mr. Redwood: The Financial Services Act already makes the principal of a tied agent responsible for the latter's actions in carrying on investment business for which the principal has accepted responsibility in writing. The Securities and Investments Board and the various self-regulatory bodies established under the Act are responsible for making and enforcing rules to ensure compliance with this requirement.

Public Safety

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what assessment he has made of the circumstances in which decision-making involving public safety could be compromised because of the lack of openness to scrutiny by the public or the scientific community of the computer codes which may be involved in that decision-making;

(2) what steps the Government are taking to ensure that decision-making involving public safety is in no way compromised by the commercial secrecy of computer codes which may be involved, directly or indirectly, in that decision-making;

(3) whether he has identified any occasions on which decision-making involving public safety has been compromised because of the lack of openness to scrutiny by the public or the scientific community on computer codes which were involved in that decision-making.

Mr. Forth: In my reply to the hon. Member on 6 November 1989 I described the steps which the Government are taking to encourage the development of suitable standards and guidelines, both at national and international levels, and in particular the work of the Inter-departmental Committee on Software Engineering (ICSE) and its working group on safety-related software, of which my Department and the Health and Safety Executive share the secretariat.

On the relevance of any commercial secrecy pertaining to computer codes, I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Member for Teignbridge (Mr. Nicholls), (Official Report, 2 November 1989, column 358): under section 20 of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974, inspectors have powers to make any necessary examination or investigation.

On the question of openness to scrutiny, the public and the scientific community have the opportunity to contribute to the development of the standards which will be used by regulatory bodies and their inspectorates in assessing the safety of systems which rely on computer codes. These standards are evolving and their coverage in the software field is being made more complete. I know of no occasion on which public safety is known to have been endangered by shortcomings in the existing arrangements for software inspection.

RENAVAL Programme

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make an application for support for Tyne and Wear from the European Community's RENAVAL Programme.

Mr. Ridley: In view of clarification I have received about the relationship between RENAVAL grants and other structural funds' support for British industrial areas, I have decided to make to the European Commission a RENAVAL application for Tyne and Wear. My Department will be discussing the proposed programme of measures with the European Commission, local authorities and others concerned.

Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make an application for support for Langbaurgh from the European Community's RENAVAL programme.

Mr. Ridley: In view of clarification I have received about the relationship between RENAVAL grants and other structural funds' support for British industrial areas, I have decided to make to the European Commission a RENAVAL application for Middlesbrough and Langbaurgh districts. My Department will be discussing the proposed programme of measures with the European Commission, local authorities and others concerned.

Company Financial Statements

Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will implement section 15 of the Companies Act 1989 to enable listed companies to issue summary financial statements.

Mr. Redwood: My Department has today sent draft regulations to interested organisations for their detailed comments, and copies have also been placed in the Library. The proposals take account of the responses to the earlier public consultations and I hope that the response to the proposals will allow regulations to be made early in March, to come into force early in April.

Companies Act 1989

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what further plans he has to commence the provisions of the Companies Act 1989.

Mr. Redwood: I have signed an Order which commences certain parts of the Act, including the provision under which regulations will be made for listed companies to issue summarised financial statements to their shareholders. The Order will also complete the commencement of part III (Investigations and Powers to Obtain Information) and part VI (Mergers and Related Matters) of the Act. The effective commencement dates of the provisions commenced in this Order range from 2 February to 1 April 1990. In addition, I plan to make a further Order within the next month to commence the main accounting and certain other provisions of the Act.

Eastern Europe

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his Department has commissioned any research into the implications and opportunities for British industry to supply equipment and goods to countries of eastern Europe to help repair environmental damage in those countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The European Commission is co-ordinating the Group of 24's package of assistance to Poland and Hungary and consideration is being given to extending the coverage of this assistance to the rest of eastern Europe.

Within the EC's 300 million ecu for Poland and Hungary, specific provision is available to facilitate environmental protection. My Department is encouraging British business fully to exploit these multilateral funds.

Information on specific export opportunities is available under the Department's export intelligence service.

Recycling

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 24 January, Official Report, column 699, if he will list the more than 40 recycling experts who are providing advice to the Government on recycling matters, and indicate what organisations, if any, they represent and why they were selected.

Mr. Forth: The composition of the advisory group has changed slightly since I announced its formation on 22 September 1989. The present members are:

Mike Cohen—Director, Business and the Environment Unit, DTI.
Frank Argent—NAWDC.
Professor Graham Ashworth—The Tidy Britain Group.
Alex Bennett—Plastics and Rubber Institute/Austin Rover Group.
Dr. Robin Bidwell—Environmental Resources Ltd.
Harold Clayton—Hydro Polymers.
Jeff Cooper—Local Authority Recycling Advisory Committee.
Dr. Bill Cook—British Glass Manufacturers Confederation.
Claire Cheney—The Retail Consortium.
Adrian Chalk—Reedpack.
Richard Davis—INCPEN.
Deidre Dowie—Convention of Scottish Local Authorities.
John Elkington—SustainAbility.
Andy Elmer—Association of Metropolitan Authorities.
Lord Ezra—UK Reclamation Council.
Brian Etheridge—Association of District Councils.
Rod Fox—Plas-Tech.
Jo Gordon—National Council for Voluntary Organisations.
Pippa Hyam—Friends of the Earth.
Dr. Alastair Hay—Leeds University.
Dr. David Harris—Aluminium Federation.
Ron Jones—British Plastics Federation.
Brian Kermode—Association of County Councils.
Brian Lymbery—UK2000.
Richard Leveton—British Battery Manufacturers Association/Duracell Batteries.
Cameron McLatchie—Packaging and Industrial Films Association.
John May—British Steel.
David Perchard—David Perchard Associates.
David Peacock—British Paper and Board Industry Federation.
Dennis Smith—Food and Drink Federation.
Peter Stokes—Coca-Cola.
Brian Stone—The Can Makers.
John Winward—Consumers Association.

Members were invited for their individual experience of recycling matters, as well as being representatives of the organisations to which they belong. Several additional experts have been added to this list to sit on working parties examining specific subjects or products.

Single Market

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which representatives from the United Kingdom attended the meeting with Commissioner Millan on 25 January to discuss the EEC Commission/university of Louvain report on the impact of the single market on regions.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 30 January 1990]: I understand that the following British representatives attended the meeting:

Greater Manchester	Councillor Brotherton
Merseyside	Councillors O'Hara, Rimmer and Watts
South Yorkshire	Councillors Salt, Welch Knight and Cooper
West Yorkshire	Councillor Tricket (Leader, Leeds City Council)
West Midlands	Councillor Davis (Vice-chairman, West Midlands regional Forum)
Fife	Councillor MacDougall (Leader, Fife regional administration).

Mice

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assistance he proposes for the encouragement of intra-Community trade in mice and rats and for participating in the efforts of the European Community mouse care expert to raise the productivity of the United Kingdom in mice and rats as the single market develops.

Mr. Gummer: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to his related questions today.

HEALTH

National Health Service

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many National Health Service hospitals he has visited in the last 12 months; and if he will name them.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have visited the following National Health Service hospitals since the start of 1989:

Hammersmith Hospital
Addenbrookes Hospital, Cambridge
Queens Medical Centre, Nottingham
Bealeys Hospital, Bury
Hope Hospital, Salford
Seacroft Hospital, Leeds
Countess of Chester Hospital
Hoylake Cottage Hospital
Bassetlaw District General Hospital, Worksop
The London Hospital
Royal Victoria Infirmary, Newcastle
The Freeman Hospital, Newcastle
Newcastle General Hospital

Anaesthetics

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many persons died as a result of being given anaesthetics before operations for each of the last five years; and what percentage they constituted of those anaesthetised during that period.

Mr. Freeman: Information is not available in the exact form requested since of over 3 million cases operated on in National Health Service hospitals in England each year, a very small number, which cannot be readily identified, will not involve any form of anaesthetic. Information about the number of deaths possibly associated with anaesthesia is given in the table:

Categories of deaths coded under the International Classification of Diseases (ICD) ninth revision

	E855.1	E855.2	E876.3	E938
1984	2	0	0	3
1985	3	0	3	0

E855.1. Accidental poisonings by other drugs acting upon the central and autonomic systems: includes either, gaseous anaesthetics, intravenous anaesthetics, halogenated hydrocarbon derivatives, thiobarbiturates.

E855.2. As above for local anaesthetics; includes cocaine, lidocaine, procaine and tetrocaine.

E876.3. Cases of misadventure during medical care.

E938. Other central nervous system depressants. Correct drug properly administered, but adverse reaction to it.

HIV Infection

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has on the rates of HIV infection among heterosexuals with no other risk factors in sexually transmitted disease clinics in London.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There are published papers (Loveday et al, British Medical Journal, Vol. 298, 18 February 1989, 419-422 and Evans, B. A. et al, British Medical Journal, Vol. 296, 13 February 1988), which suggest that the identified prevalence of HIV infection among heterosexuals with no other risk factors in sexually transmitted disease clinics in London in 1987 was rather less than 1 per cent. The numbers in these studies were small and should be treated with great caution. Copies of the papers are available in the Library.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he proposes to publish the report on stress in the ambulance service.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Consideration of the final report of the working party on the problems of long-serving ambulance men and women has not yet been completed. I shall consider the question of publication when it has been.

Disabled Persons

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to monitor the implementation of sections 5 and 6 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The Department's social services inspectorate has carried out a number of exercises to monitor the implementation of the Act. The findings of an inspection of the operation of all sections of the Act in force, and a more specific study of the progress of six authorities towards implementation of sections 5 and 6, are due to be published shortly.

Hoax Alarm Calls (Deaths)

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many ambulance men in the past 10 years have been killed; and how many have been injured whilst responding to hoax alarm telephone calls.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not held centrally.

NHS (Land and Buildings)

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the valuations of National Health Service land and buildings as at the latest available date.

Mr. Freeman: A valuation of the National Health Service estate was undertaken in 1987 and the figures are available in the Library. New valuations are now in hand in preparation for the introduction of capital charging in 1991.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will outline his statutory responsibilities and those of his Department in relation to food poisoning.

Mr. Freeman: Statutory responsibilities in relation to food poisoning lie in the Food Act 1984, the Public Health (Control of Diseases) Act 1984 and the National Health Service Act 1977.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what part is played by his Department in identifying the causes of trends and figures in the incidence of food poisoning in the United Kingdom;

(2) what responsibilities lie with his Department in regard to monitoring trends in figures in the incidence of cases of food poisoning.

Mr. Freeman: The Department works together with other health and agriculture departments, local authorities and the public health laboratory service to monitor and interpret trends in the incidence of food poisoning and to identify their causes as a basis for considering Government and other action required to protect the health of the public.

Creutzfeldt Jakob Disease

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of Creutzfeldt Jakob disease have been diagnosed in the United Kingdom during each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Freeman: When this illness was last studied in detail for England and Wales (1980-84 inclusive), the incidence of identified and confirmed Creutzfeldt Jakob disease was 0·49 per million. The purpose of the study to be conducted by Dr. R. G. Will, referred to in my reply to the hon. Member for Caerphilly (Mr. Davies) on 10 January at column 665, is to make a more accurate assessment of cases of Creutzfeldt Jakob disease than that available from death certificates alone. Since 1979, Creutzfeldt Jakob disease has been given on death certificates as the underlying cause of death in about 30 deaths a year in England and Wales.

AIDS

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to publish updated short-term predictions of HIV infection and AIDS in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The report of a working group, "Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome in England and Wales to end 1993: Projections Using data to end September 1989" has today been published by the public health laboratory service and a copy has been placed in the Library.

The report concludes that the predicted incidence of AIDS in homosexual men is lower than previously calculated, and that as a result of behavioural change, the probable number of this group infected with HIV is also lower than previously estimated. But the potential for widespread dissemination of HIV still remains, particularly amongst heterosexuals and injecting drug users. The range of future predictions for these groups is wide. This is because the predictions for the continued rate of spread of the epidemic depend on the extent to which individuals change their behaviour, and this is difficult to foresee.

We are at a critical stage in the HIV epidemic, and behavioural change amongst heterosexuals and injecting drug users will be crucial in keeping down the incidence of HIV infection. It is also essential that behavioural changes amongst homosexual men are sustained and reinforced in the future.

We must not allow ourselves to become complacent, or to relax our guard. This report reinforces the messages which we have been giving for some time:

> if the spread of HIV goes unchecked the potential outcome could be devastating..
> if people take sensible precautions, and avoid high risk activities, the virus has less opportunity for spreading..
> we must continue the work to increase awareness about the serious risks of heterosexual transmission..

The work being carried out by the Health Education Authority and by district health authorities and other local agencies to educate and inform people is therefore vital, so that these behavioural changes take place before it is too late.

We are grateful to Professor Day and members of the working group for their work in preparing revised predictions of HIV infection and AIDS in England and Wales which updates the predictions made by Sir David Cox, published in November 1988.

Ambulance Dispute

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost per ambulance worker of his Department's advertising campaign informing them of their pay offer.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 8 January 1990]: The cost of the Department's advertising campaign in the national daily press on 27 and 28 November 1989 was £241,441.

It is not sensible to estimate the cost per ambulance man or woman, particularly as the advertisements would have been seen by many other people.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Student Loans

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many representations he has received to date supporting the introduction of student loans;

(2) how many representations, including postcards, he has received to date opposing the introduction of student loans.

Dr. Mawhinney: Since the publication of the White Paper "Top-Up Loans for Students" (Cm. 520) in November 1988, a total of 472 representations expressing a variety of views have been received from various sources. Of these, 452 were postcards sent in pursuance of a campaign mounted by student unions.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement indicating the estimated cost of the introduction of student loans in Northern Ireland and outlining the proposed administrative arrangements for such a scheme.

Dr. Mawhinney: There is Estimates provision of some £5·5 million for loans in 1990-91. The Student Loans Company Ltd. will have responsibility for the administration of loans to all eligible students in the United Kingdom and provision will be made for each of the Education Departments to meet its respective proportion of the running costs.

Students' Incomes

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information is available to indicate (a) the average student rent in Northern Ireland and (b) the average housing benefit received by students in Northern Ireland during term time.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information requested in (a) is not available. The information requested in (b) is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information is available to indicate the average income levels in Northern Ireland received 12 months after graduation by (a) disabled graduates, (b) women graduates, (c) graduates over 26 years of age and (d) all graduates.

Mr. Cope: The information is not available for Northern Ireland.

Social Fund

Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will announce the budget available for payments from the discretionary part of the social fund in 1990-91.

Mr. Needham: The total sum will be £21·32 million. The budget for small care grants will be £7·32 million and budget for loans will be £14 million.

Firearms

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many fees have been paid by applicants and for what total sums in respect of (a) applications for firearm certificates, (b) renewal of firearm certificates and (c) variation of firearm certificates; and how much has been repaid in each case because the application was rejected, in each of the last three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 23 January 1990]: The Police Authority for Northern Ireland has informed me that the information is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The total net amount received for all firearms certificate fees and the total refunds are as follows:

Financial year	Firearms Certificates £	Refunds £
1986-87	605,129	22,975
1987-88	844,132	18,691
1988-89	612,727	20,346

PRIME MINISTER

Food Surpluses

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the proposed expenditure by the EEC in 1990 of £9,000,000,000 on the disposal of food surpluses;

(2) if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the sums being spent on the disposal of food surpluses.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so. The provision of £9 billion in the European Community's budget for the storage and withdrawal of agricultural products and for export refunds represents a reduction in real terms on the Community's 1989 budget. Surplus stocks are now a fraction of what they were at their peak and the proposed expenditure is well within the legally binding guideline which was one of the measures agreed at the February 1988 European Council as part of the process of CAP reform.

I shall certainly continue to take every opportunity to impress upon our Community partners the need for this process of reform to be maintained and for agriculture to be reformed worldwide in the context of the current multilateral trade negotiations.

Trade Imbalance

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Prime Minister if she will indicate in the Official Report the representations made to the European Commission by Her Majesty's Government on the need to equalise the adverse imbalance of trade between the United Kingdom and the empire of Japan; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Government keep in close contact with the European Commission about measures to improve the Community's balance of trade with Japan. These include measures to sustain the recent shift in the balance of the Japanese economy from exports to domestic demand; the encouragement of Japanese manufacturing investment in the Community; the removal of the remaining barriers to access to the Japanese market; the promotion of business awareness of the opportunities in the Japanese market; and improvement of our business men's skills in the Japanese language.

While the United Kingdom's visible trade deficit with Japan remains high, its rate of growth declined to just 1 per cent. over last year compared with 20 per cent. in 1988; in 1989 United Kingdom exports to Japan almost doubled their rate of growth to over 30 per cent. while the rate of growth of our imports from Japan was more than halved to 9 per cent.

East-West Relations

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment she has made of the peace dividend accruing to the United Kingdom from changes in East-West relations.

The Prime Minister: The changes taking place in Europe have been made possible in good part by the strength and cohesion of NATO, which will remain the basis for our security. The negotiations in Vienna on conventional forces in Europe should lead to some reductions in NATO's forces. It will be for the Alliance itself to decide how these will be allocated between its members.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Jonathan Greenwood and Sara Coren

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement about the conduct of the Crown's case against Jonathan Greenwood and Sara Coren at Southwark Crown court on 23 January.

The Attorney-General: The legal issues arising from the case are under consideration.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Romania

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance has been given by Her Majesty's Government to Romania (a) directly and (b) indirectly since the revolution; and if each item can be costed.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have donated a consignment of medical supplies on 24 December and several items of medical equipment since then. We are treating a number of seriously injured young victims of the December fighting for major surgery, at a cost which has yet to be determined. We are contributing about £5·8 million to the food aid and medical supplies packages sent or agreed so far by the EC. The British Council has committed £100,000 for new assistance projects in the cultural field. Further help is under consideration.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs announced on 22 January that the existing know-how fund for Poland and Hungary would be widened to cover other countries of eastern Europe once they are firmly committed to reform. I hope that Romania will qualify for assistance in that context.

Eastern Europe

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how he proposes to ensure that an appropriate part of European Community financial support to east European countries is allocated to the needs of disabled people.

Mr. Maude: EC structural aid to eastern Europe is intended to create market economies and generate wealth to the benefit of all the population. In addition the Community has, responding to requests and needs, provided humanitarian, medical and food aid in particular circumstances, distributed through national authorities.

John McCarthy

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what initiatives the Government are taking in order to secure the release of John McCarthy following reports that he is alive and well; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Member to the Prime Minister's answer of 30 January to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, Leith (Mr. Brown). We are following up the recent reports about Mr. McCarthy.

Lebanon

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government maintain relations with (a) the Syrian-backed Hrawi regime and (b) General Aoun's regime in Lebanon; and what information he has as to which regime controls the area in which the British embassy is situated.

Mr. Waldegrave: We maintain relations with President Hrawi and his Government, as the legitimate authority in Lebanon, and informal contacts with other political figures, including General Aoun. The British embassy is in the area controlled by General Aoun.

Syria

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has any plans to renew diplomatic relations with Syria.

Mr. Waldegrave: We could not consider restoring diplomatic relations without firm evidence that Syria has given up support for international terrorism.

Lebanese Embassy

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Syrian interests section of the Lebanese embassy in London is manned by Syrians or Lebanese citizens; and what proportion of the total staff of the Lebanese embassy are in this section.

Mr. Waldegrave: There are eight members of the Lebanese embassy in London with diplomatic status. Of these, three are Syrian nationals who form the Syrian interests section. There are three British nationals in the British interest section of the Australian embassy in Damascus.

Visa Applications

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if, when evaluating the visa application of a foreigner married to a British citizen, British immigration officials assess the integrity of the British spouse; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what questions British immigration officials ask visa applicants who are married to British citizens, when deciding on the primary purpose of the marriage; and if he will make a statement;

(3) whether the desire of a foreigner married to a British citizen to be reunited with his or her spouse and children constitutes sufficient grounds for the granting of a visa; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: In considering an application for entry clearance from a foreign spouse of a British citizen, the entry clearance officer must be satisfied that the relevant requirements of the immigration rules are met. Depending on whether a visit or settlement was intended, these requirements are set out in paragraphs 22 and 50 of the Immigration Rules (HC 388).

Entry clearance officers have discretion to ask whatever questions are necessary to establish whether an applicant qualifies for admission under the immigration rules. However, in pursuing any particular line of questioning, entry clearance officers are instructed to be at all times alert to the sensitivities of applicants (and sponsors) and to treat them all with courtesy, tact and respect.

Environmental Concerns

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what activities the Government are pursuing through the United Nations to address world scale environmental concerns.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are pursuing through the United Nations, and its organs, a number of activities to protect the global environment. These include matters that my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister raised when she addressed the United Nations General Assembly on 8 November 1989, not least preparations for the 1992 United Nations conference on environment and development and the work of the intergovernmental panel on climate change (established by the United Nations Environment Programme and the World Meteorological Organisation). In June we will host the second meeting of the parties to the Montreal protocol on substances that deplete the ozone layer which, with its parent convention, is administered by the United Nations Environment Programme.

Namibia

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his assessment of the current political situation in Namibia.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Constituent Assembly has agreed that independence day will be 21 March. Agreement on the constitution is expected shortly.

British Exhibition, Kiev

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in which papers the advertisement on 24 January for Russian speakers for the British exhibition at Kiev was placed; why these were chosen; why it was decided to make the deadline for applications 26 January; how many applications he received; and whether he will take late applications.

Mr. Maude: The FCO placed advertisements for Russian speakers for the British exhibition at Kiev in The Times Educational Supplement of 12 January and in The Independent of 18 January. The Independent repeated the advertisement on 24 January. The two newspapers were chosen for their advertising rates and national circulation.

The deadline for applications was set in order to provide sufficient time to select candidates and to give those chosen adequate notice before they are required for the exhibition. The FCO has to date received 211 applications and will consider late applications from suitably qualified candidates.

ENVIRONMENT

Housing (Research)

89. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to conduct research into the causes of the present numbers of those sleeping rough or in poor-quality temporary accommodation but who are not at present legally classified as homeless.

Mr. Chope: Suitable questions to give further insight into the numbers are to be included in the next (1991) census and decisions will then be made on any necessary further research.

Homelessness

90. Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has any plans to extend the priority need category of homeless to include those aged 18 years and under.

Mr. Chope: Our review of the homeless legislation concluded that the existing priority need categories were adequate and appropriate to cover the homeless in genuine need. Decisions are for local authorities; they must judge whether young people aged 18 or under are in priority need.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Enviroment if he will make a statement on progress in the allocation of £250 million for the homeless and the relief of homelessness.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 1 February 1990]: Of the £250 million additional resources announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 15 November, £148 million will be made available for schemes to relieve homelessness in London and the south-east in 1990-91 and £102 million in 1991-92. Housing associations were invited to submit bids for 1990-91 to the Housing Corporation by 22 January and local authorities to my Department by 31 January. The applications are now being assessed and decisions will be issued before the start of the next financial year. A total of £112 million will be allocated to local authority schemes and £36 million to housing associations.

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps the Government are taking to reduce the problem of homelessness, especially among young people and those with a record of mental illness; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: Following our review of the homelessness legislation, additional resources of £250 million are being made available in those areas with the greatest homelessness pressures, in particular to reduce the numbers in bed and breakfast. Local authorities have a duty to secure accommodation for those homeless whom they deem to be vulnerable as a result of mental illness or other special reason, including young people, and some of the additional resources will go to assist these groups. The problems young homeless people face are often complex and are addressed by a range of Government policies. Departments are now looking at how these work together to ensure appropriate assistance is available.

Community Charge

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will introduce regulations to prevent the use of information by a charging authority for purposes other than those associated with the management or collection of the community charge which has been disclosed to a charging authority by a community charges registration officer for the purposes associated with the community charge; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: No, because such regulations are unnecessary. A charging authority may make use of information provided by a community charges registration officer only in accordance with its powers under the Local Goverment Finance Act 1988, and is bound by the provisions of the Data Protection Act 1984.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the level of non-payment of the poll tax in the first year it is due.

Mr. Chope: In the light of the very high level of registration achieved by almost all local authorities, improved arrangements for paying by instalments, and more flexible enforcement powers, the level of payment of the community charge should match or exceed that for domestic rates.

Social Services, Humberside

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the cost to Humberside county of implementing sections 5 and 6 of the Disabled Persons Act; and what was the extent of the allocation for this in central funding for Humberside.

Mr. Chope: The provision we have made in the settlement for local authority personal social services (PSS) takes account of the additional costs of implementing sections 5 and 6 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986. The PSS element of each authority's standard spending assessment is its share of the PSS provision and is calculated in accordance with section 3 of the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), which was approved by the House of Commons on 18 January 1990.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the impact on the community charge on Humberside to (a) compensate for the cut in social services spending allocation for 1990-91 over 1989-90 while maintaining social services at the same level and (b) to meet the criticisms in the inspection of child care by social services.

Mr. Chope: Humberside county council's standard spending assessment (SSA) represents an appropriate level of spending for the council to provide a standard level of service consistent with the Government's view of the amount of expenditure which it would be appropriate for authorities generally to incur. The community charge in Humberside would be £278, before safety net adjustments, if the county and districts all spent at the level of their SSA.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was his Department's social services spending allocation for county Humberside for 1990-91; what was the grant-related expenditure allocation for 1989-90; and what are the reasons for the changes between the years.

Mr. Chope: The 1990-91 standard spending assessment (SSA) for social services for the county of Humberside is £60·234 million. The 1989-90 grant-related expenditure assessment (GREA) for social services in Humberside was £61·637 million.

There are several reasons for the difference in the two assessments. The GREA includes a small element for pre-1981-82 debt charges which is covered elsewhere in the SSA formula; the assessment formula has been substantially revised; and the information used in the assessment has been updated.

Housing Demand

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if any estimates have been made of the likely effects on the demand for houses and flats of the future decline in the population of marriageable age together with the effects of the continuing increase in both the number of single parents and the number of broken marriages; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: My Department has published estimates of the future number of households, most recently in "1985 Based Estimates of Numbers of Households in England". These estimates are derived from the official projections of the population, analysed by sex, marital status, and age. They therefore take account of the change in the population of marriageable age, and in divorce rates. They take account also of the proportion of never-married women who head lone-parent households. These demographic influences interact, so their effect on the number of households cannot be estimated individually. The number of households will be a strong influence on the future demand for separate dwellings, but there are other important influences as well, notably changes in income. No estimate has been made of total demand for separate dwellings. The Government have however accepted from the London and south-east regional planning conference a figure of 570,000 for the increase in the housing stock in the south-east region between 1991 and 2001.

Local Government Finance

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will state the reasons why, following the publication of table 67 by his Department which illustrated community charges implied by levels of local authority spending then current for 1987-88 and for 1988-89, his Department changed the basis of its estimates for 1989-90 to include only income from rates and Government grants.

Mr. Chope: The illustrative charges for 1989-90 were calculated after the Government had made it clear that income from rates and grants was the likely basis of the expenditure assumption needed for safety nets in 1990-91. The 1989-90 illustrative charges were therefore calculated on this basis, which also gave a consistent comparison between actual average rate bills in 1989-90 and illustrative charges. Figures calculated on the previous basis were placed in the Library on 19 July 1989.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has issued the guidance, referred to in his written answer to the hon. Member for Taunton, Official Report, column 27 of 13 November 1989, on the boundary between domestic and non-domestic property; and whether he will place such guidance in the Library.

Mr. Chope: I hope to be able to issue the guidance later this month; a copy will be placed in the Library.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimates he has made of the number of people who will be liable to pay standard community charge on unoccupied domestic property.

Mr. Chope: No estimates have been made of this particular category, but we intend to collect information about the standard charge in the regular statistical returns which authorities will be making under the new system.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) which local authorities have stated that they will provide relief from the standard community charge on unoccupied property for a period in excess of three months;

(2) which local authority councils have declared their intention to levy standard community charge at less than twice the personal community charge.

Mr. Chope: This information is not available centrally at present.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what amount and proportion of the education component of the standard spending assessment for each authority benefiting from an area cost adjustment factor greater than one derives from the operation of that factor: and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The information requested is shown in the table.

Table showing the amount and proportion of the 1990-91 education standard spending assessment deriving from the area cost adjustment factor for authorities with a factor greater than one

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what reply the Minister for Local Government and Inner Cities will be sending to the letter of 29 January on Manchester and the poll tax from the leader of Manchester city council; whether the Minister's claim that the city council seems intent on setting the highest poll tax it can get away with represents Government policy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I have not yet received any such letter. If authorities spend at the level of their standard spending assessments, the community charge everywhere before safety net adjustment and certain special grants would be about £278. Higher charges will be a consequence of authorities' spending decisions, and authorities will be accountable to their electorate for the level of community charge they introduce.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) further to his answer to the hon. Member for Bristol, North-West (Mr. Stern) of 17 January, Official Report, columns 252-53, if he will make it his policy to bring forward a community charge capping scheme between the February cycle of local authority meetings and the end of the financial year;

(2) if he will make it his policy to cap local authorities that propose a 1990-91 community charge which is more than 10 per cent. above the Government's target figures for charges.

Mr. Chope: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bristol, North-West (Mr. Stern) on 17 January.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice he has given local councils as they settle their community charges for the forthcoming financial year.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend has made it clear that if some of the horrendously high figures for the community charge being bandied about are in fact set next year, he will have no hesitation in capping the authorities concerned.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give his estimates of (a) grant towards local government spending to the Exchequer and (b) the total contributed or to be contributed by non-domestic rates for 1988-89, 1989-90, and 1990-91, in a manner consistent with the figures given in the reply of 15 November 1989, Official Report, column 242.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 23 January 1990]: The available information requested is as follows:

£ million

	1988-89	1989-90	1990-91
All government grants[1]	17,940	18,545	20,365
Net non-domestic rate yield (including LRT levy)[2]	8,800	9,600	[3]10,500

[1] Figures are not available on a comparable basis to those given in the reply of 15 November 1989, Official Report, column 242. Those figures were based on returns showing outturn on an accruals basis submitted by local authorities. The figures given above are the English component of those published in "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1990-91 to 1992-93" and include payments of Rate/Revenue Support Grant, current specific grants (both inside and outside AEF) and capital grants on a cash basis. The figures for 1989-90 and 1990-91 exclude grants in respect of polytechnics which were transferred from the local authority sector in April 1989.

[2] LRT levy was excluded from figures given in the reply of 15 November 1989. For 1988-89 and 1989-90 these amounts were estimated to be £75 million and £114 million respectively.

[3] The Distributable Amount for 1990-91, gross of the allowance for costs of collection and the City Offset. It is on a comparable basis with figures for earlier years, after taking into account the effects of transitional arrangements.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the percentage and absolute increase in community charge for every 1 per cent. increase in expenditure incurred over the levels that are covered by central Government grant; and what is the level of charge for (a) Northampton and (b) Northamptonshire at that level of grant; and if he will tabulate the information also for every district/county in England and Wales.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 29 January 1990]: Assumed 1990-91 community charges to the nearest pound for every charging authority in England were placed in the Library on 11 January. The assumed charge for Northampton is about £294 after the safety net. County councils will not set community charges. The basis of calculation of the assumed charge is set out in the Revenue Support Grant Transition Report (England).

I have today placed in the Library a table showing for each charging authority in England the increase in community charge, in pound per adult and percentage terms, for a one percentage point increase in spending from the 1989-90 figure, over and above the 4·64 per cent. increase allowed in calculating assumed charges. This shows separately the effect of increases by precepting authorities, including county councils, and by charging authorities.

Gipsies

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many sites for gipsies, and for what numbers, are currently provided in the London borough of Bromley.

Mr. Chope: I understand there is presently one authorised site, providing accommodation for 22 families.

Angell Town Estate

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will approve proposals for estate action housing expenditure for the Angell Town estate.

Mr. Chope: The Department wrote to Lambeth on 1 February 1990 inviting the council to develop further its proposals for a scheme on this estate to be supported by estate action expenditure in 1990-91.

Palace of Westminster

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the damage to the fabric of the Palace of Westminster as a result of the recent storm on 25 January and of its implications for the programme of cleaning and restoration.

Mr. Chope: An assessment of the damage to the fabric of the Palace of Westminster by the recent storm was started as soon as the winds abated. Initial investigations suggest that major damage has been limited to the loss of one pinnacle on the central tower. In falling it caused some damage to roof areas and a window. Work requiring immediate attention has been put in hand.

Until the full results of the investigations are received I am unable to say whether this will have any impact in the programme of cleaning and restoration, but all the indications are that the programme for the work to the Victoria Tower will be unaffected.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has considered the effect on the eyesight of persons working in the Palace of Westminster resulting from diminished light availability because of dirty stonework on the inner courtyards.

Mr. Chope: The level of lighting, whether natural or artificial, provided for those working within the Palace of Westminster is considered sufficient to meet the required standards.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has considered the effect on the health of persons working in the Palace of Westminster resulting from dirty stonework on the inner courtyards.

Mr. Chope: The minimisation of health risks to persons working in the Palace of Westminster is always of paramount concern. I am not aware, however, of any evidence that there have been any health problems caused by the condition of the stonework in the inner courtyards.

Hertfordshire County Council

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out a table showing for each year since 1984-85 the expenditure of Hertfordshire county council in (a) cash terms and (b) constant price terms.

Mr. Chope: The information is as follows:

Rate fund revenue account net current expenditure—Hertfordshire County Council

	Cash £ million	Real[1] (1984-85 prices) £ million
1984-85	326·6	326·6
1985-86	344·7	327·1
1986-87	378·2	347·2
1987-88	399·3	348·1
1988-89	476·1	387·0
1989-90[2]	498·8	378·9

[1] Using GDP Deflator.
[2] Polytechnics were transferred from the Local Authority Sector in April 1989.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has yet received the manpower watch return for Hertfordshire county council for the third quarter of 1989.

Mr. Chope: These returns are collected by the Local Authorities' Conditions of Service Advisory Board (LACSAB) on behalf of the joint staffing watch (previously the joint manpower watch). I understand that Hertfordshire county council has not yet provided a return for the third quarter of 1989.

Glis Glis

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 25 January, Official Report, column 781, if he will place in the Library details of the specific conditions applied to the licence for trapping glis glis and, when available, the written report on the licences required by him.

Mr. Trippier: I have placed in the Library a sample copy of one of the current licences to trap glis glis. I will write to the hon. Member with details of the returns from the local authorities when they are available.

Environmental Labelling

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the reply given to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Northfield (Mr. King) on 9 January, Official Report, column 589, (1) if he will estimate the cost of establishing and running the advisory group to study further an environmental labelling scheme and (2) (i) how many individuals will serve on the advisory body, (ii) how many civil servants will support the advisory body and (iii) will the members of the advisory body be (a) full or part-time and (b) salaried.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The answers are:

(1) no more than £10,000 in 1990-91 to cover travel and subsistence costs of the group's members;
(2) (i) the composition of the group is not yet finalised, but is expected to include some 12 members;
(2) (ii) support from officials is not expected to exceed the equivalent of half a full-time post;
(2) (iii) (a) part time; (b) unsalaried.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what will be the cost to business of complying with the Government's product eco-labelling scheme.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: It is not possible to give any estimates of cost since we are still in the early stages of discussing an eco-labelling initiative at the EC level. We are clear, however, that companies' participation in an eco-labelling scheme should be on a voluntary basis, and any charges made will have to be commercially acceptable if their participation is to be secured.

Nirex (Waste Disposal Site)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information his Department has on Nirex's plan to establish a new site for waste disposal in the north; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: In March last year the Government accepted Nirex's report on the development of a deep disposal facility for low and intermediate-level radioactive waste. A copy of the report is in the Library of the House. Nirex is currently awaiting the result of a planning application for the drilling of test boreholes at Dounreay. At Sellafield, the local planning authority has recently approved an application to drill a second investigatory borehole. Only when these site investigations are complete will Nirex be able to submit proposals for a substantive development.

Waste Management Conference

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department will be represented at the Waste Management 90 conference to be held in Tucson, Arizona, between 25 February and 1 March.

Mr. Trippier: We are not aware of this conference, but would be interested to see the details if the hon. Member would care to provide them.

Mortgage Rates

Mr. Clive Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the average gross mortgage rate of the building societies from March 1974 to May 1979; and what was the same rate from June 1979 to January 1990.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The estimated average gross mortgage interest rates of building societies for the periods March 1974 to May 1979 and June 1979 to October 1989 are 10·8 per cent. and 12·4 per cent., respectively.

Water Act 1989

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total value of land and assets privatised under the Water Act 1989; and what were the net proceeds of the sale.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Information on the assets of all the water holding companies was set out in the water share offers prospectus in November 1989. I will report the proceeds of the water share offers and associated costs to Parliament shortly.

Public Footpaths

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will bring forward proposals to increase significantly the severity of sanctions against developers who proceed with works which render public footpaths unusable without securing the necessary legal authority to stop up or divert the path.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Any failure of developers to observe the proper procedures in respect of public rights of way is to be deplored, but powers are already available to enable authorities to take appropriate action in such cases and we are therefore not convinced that further legislation is necessary.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what information he has as to the (a) quantities and (b) locations of low-level radioactive waste dumped in England outside of Nirex sites; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what is his policy on allowing the dumping of radioactive wastes on sites overlying major aquifers;

(3) what is his policy on permitting the dumping of radioactive waste in ordinary sites close to centres of population;

(4) what mechanism of public consultation is available before dumping of radioactive wastes can proceed on sites which have been given planning permission for domestic landfill.

Mr. Trippier: Any waste disposal site licensed by a waste disposal authority under the Control of Pollution Act 1974 may receive low-level radioactive waste where such a disposal method is authorised by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960. Such authorisations impose strict conditions and activity limits and are issued only after careful assessment is made of the environmental impact of proposed disposals, including any possible impact on water supplies, to ensure that doses to the public are below the maximum permissible limits as recommended by the International Committee on Radiological Protection. Consultation with local and other public authorities is required by the Act before authorisations are issued to non-nuclear premises where the disposal requires special precautions to be taken by any local or public authority.

The Department does not maintain a central record of the quantities of low-level radioactive waste disposed of through local disposal routes nor of specific disposal locations. However, a condition of authorisation requires waste producers to keep proper and detailed records relating to their disposals. These records as well as the premises or sites concerned are subject to scrutiny by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution inspectors and in cases where a disposal requires special precautions to be taken, both Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution and local waste disposal authorities are notified by the operator of the nature and destination of individual consignments of radioactive waste due for disposal.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what notification he has received as to the quantities of radioactive waste to be dumped at Arpley Meadows, Warrington.

Mr. Trippier: The quantities of low-level solid radioactive wastes proposed to be disposed of at Walton Arpley landfill site are as follows:—

i. less than 3·5 gigabecquerels per annum of radionuclides of a half-life not exceeding one year; and ii. less than 1·0 gigabequerels per annum of carbon 14 and tritium.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received over the disposal of low-level radioactive waste at Arpley Meadows, near Warrington.

Mr. Trippier: There have been four representations made to Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution of my Department on the proposals to authorise the disposal of low-level solid radioactive waste at Walton Arpley landfill site. No technical objections have been raised and my Department is fully satisfied that the proposals are sound.

Sewage Treatment

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many sewage treatment plants in England and Wales use the root-zone method to reduce river eutrophication.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The root-zone method of sewage treatment is claimed to be a cost-effective treatment of sewage for small communities. In the United Kingdom it is not primarly used to control the discharge of nutrients and is not noticeably better in this respect than conventional sewage treatment.

I understand that there are currently some 35 trial or test sites in England and Wales at which the process is being evaluated.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance is available for the National Rivers Authority and sewage undertakers on (a) controlling the level of phosphates entering rivers and lakes and (b) the maximum acceptable concentration of phosphates in rivers and lakes to prevent deleterious effects on waters of high wildlife interest.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The National Rivers Authority is responsible for the quality of rivers and lakes and for controlling discharges into these waters, and makes it own decisions on these matters. There are no national guidelines for rivers and lakes.

National Rivers Authority

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the proportion of the National Rivers Authority budget for 1990-91 which has been allocated for the purposes of promoting the conservation of flora and fauna which are dependent on the aquatic environment.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I am informed by the National Rivers Authority that its 1990-91 budget identifies activities estimated to cost £1·282 million which are aimed specifically at conservation of flora and fauna. Further costs incurred in the course of carrying out tasks whose primary aim is not conservation cannot at present be identified.

English Heritage

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will give figures to show section 3A grant payments by English Heritage for 1984-85 to 1990-91 in cash and real terms; and if he will provide similar figures excluding payments to ex-Greater London council properties;

(2) if he will give figures to show the expenditure by English Heritage on the maintenance and repair of historic buildings from 1984-85 to 1990-91 in real terms using 1984-85 as the base year;

(3) if he will give figures to show the expenditure by English Heritage on conservation area and town scheme grants, respectively, in real terms from 1984-85 to 1990-91 using 1984-85 as the base year.

Mr. Trippier: Detailed expenditure figures for section 3A grants, historic building grants generally, and conservation area and town scheme grants are matters for English Heritage. I have asked the chairman, Lord Montagu, to write to the hon. Member.

National Heritage

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the annual grant to the national heritage memorial fund from his Department in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and what is the budget figure for 1989-90 and the estimates to 1992-93.

Mr. Trippier: Grant-in-aid to the National Heritage Memorial Fund from the Department is as follows:

£ million

	1984-85	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89	1990-91
Annual grant-in-aid	1·5	1·5	1·5	1·5	1·5	1·5
Special allocations	25·0	10·5	—	20·0	—	—

The Office of Arts and Libraries provides an equal amount of annual grant-in-aid to the fund. The special allocation in 1984-85 was to enable the fund to assist in securing the future of three important heritage properties for the nation: Kedleston hall, Nostell priory and Weston park. The special allocations in 1985-86 and 1986-87 were to assist the fund in meeting increased demand on their resources in those years. The latest public expenditure White Paper provides for continuing annual grant-in-aid of £1·5 million in 1991-92 and 1992-93, with a matching provision from the Office of Arts and Libraries.

Uniform Business Rate

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on which of the developments being carried out under the Channel Tunnel Act 1987 the uniform business rate will be payable.

Mr. David Hunt: Once the works are completed, the occupiers of the Channel tunnel and the land, structures and buildings associated with it will become liable to non-domestic rating in the usual way under the Local Government Finance Act 1988.

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment on which of the developments proposed in the British Rail (No. 3) Bill, including the Borough Green loop, the uniform business rate will be payable.

Mr. David Hunt: All the works that British Rail proposes to occupy would form part of its rateable hereditament and contribute to the board's liability for rates.

Mr. Richard Shephard: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the net inflow or outflow of uniform business rate revenue for each local authority in England.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 30 January 1990]: I expect to receive shortly from local authorities their estimates of the likely amount of non-domestic rates which they will collect in 1990-91. Meanwhile I have placed in the Library the Government's own preliminary estimates of the amount which each charging authority in England will collect and the actual amount which each authority will receive from the national non-domestic rating pool. In addition, of course, authorities will receive revenue support grant so that (subject to the effect of the safety net) a standard level of service can broadly be provided everywhere in England for the same community charge. So authorities are compensated for any net outflow of business rate income to the extent necessary to enable them to provide this standard level of service.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received concerning the uniform business rate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend has received a great many representations about the uniform business rate and the non-domestic revaluation. The Government believe that there is general acceptance that the new system will remove the distortions caused by widely varying local poundages and outdated rateable values and will, once the transition is complete, make rates a much more predictable and stable element of business costs than has been the case in the past.

Thomas Harrison Bust

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will call for a report from the director of the Merseyside task force on its handling of the Thomas Harrison bust following its possession of the Lyceum club, Liverpool;

(2) on what basis his Department loaned the Thomas Harrison bust to the Post Office; and if he will make a statement;

(3) when his Department took out an insurance policy on the Thomas Harrison bust, formerly of the Lyceum club, Liverpool.

Mr. Trippier: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Government Buildings (Rates)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish his best estimates of the total amount of non-domestic rate to be paid on Government buildings in (a) 1989-90 and (b) 1990-91.

Mr. David Hunt: The amount of the contribution in aid of non-domestic rating paid in respect of Crown property in England is estimated as £572·3 million in 1989-90 and £631 million in 1990-91.

Marine Nature Reserves

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will list existing designated marine nature reserves and list the other areas under consideration for such designations.

Mr. Trippier: One statutory marine nature reserve at Lundy island has been designated so far. The Nature Conservancy Council has identified the following additional sites as being suitable for marine nature reserve status: Skomer Island and the Marloes Peninsula; Menai Straits; Loch Sween; St. Abbs Head, Bardsey Island and the Lleyn Peninsula; and the Isles of Scilly.

Archaeological Sites, London

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the activities of treasure hunters on archaeological sites in London.

Mr. Trippier: None. As elsewhere in the country, any person in London wishing to seek objects hidden beneath the surface of a scheduled archaeological site by means of a metal detector must first seek a licence for its use from English Heritage. The last such licence was issued in August 1988.

Environmental Protection (Training)

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department has figures for the number of people employed in training schemes leading to qualifications in environmental protection or environmental improvement techniques for each of the past five years.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Department does not hold figures on the number of people employed in the United Kingdom by a wide range of bodies, both public and private, on environmental protection and improvement activities.

Housing Statistics

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many dwellings were let by local authorities between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1989 (a) to new secure tenants and (b) to new secure tenants who were homeless households (1) in inner London, (2) in outer London, (3) in non-metropolitan areas of the south-east, (4) in non-metropolitan areas outside the south-east, (5) in metropolitan areas outside London and (6) in England as a whole;

(2) how many households and how many homeless households, respectively, took up nominations by local authorities between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1989 (1) in inner London, (2) in outer London, (3) in non-metropolitan areas of the south-east, (4) in non-metropolitan areas outside the south-east, (5) in metropolitan areas outside London and (6) in England as a whole;

(3) how many households local authorities accepted between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1989 (a) as homeless and (b) as homeless and in priority need (1) in inner London, (2) in outer London, (3) in non-metropolitan areas of the south-east, (4) in non-metropolitan areas outside the south-east, (5) in metropolitan areas outside London and (6) in England as a whole;

(4) how many households were registered on local authority housing waiting lists on 1 April 1989 (a) in inner London, (b) in outer London, (c) in non-metropolitan areas of the south-east, (d) in non-metropolitan areas outside the south-east, (e) in metropolitan areas outside London and (f) in England as a whole;

(5) how many local authority dwellings (a) were vacant and available for letting on 1 April 1988 and (b) became available for letting between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1989 (i) through new build, (ii) through acquisition or conversion and (iii) through other means (1) in inner London, (2) in outer London, (3) in non-metropolitan areas of the south-east, (4) in non-metropolitan areas outside the south-east, (5) in metropolitan areas outside London and (6) in England as a whole;

(6) how many dwellings were let by local authorities between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1989 (a) to new non-secure tenants and (b) to new non-secure tenants who were homeless households (1) in inner London, (2) in outer London, (3) in non-metropolitan areas of the south-east, (4) in non-metropolitan areas outside the south-east, (5) in metropolitan areas outside London and (6) in England as a whole;

(7) how many dwellings were let between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1989 (a) in total and (b) to homeless households (i) through the national mobility scheme; (ii) through the housing association liaison office and (iii) through other mobility schemes (1) in inner London, (2) in outer London, (3) in non-metropolitan areas of the south-east, (4) in non-metropolitan areas outside the south-east, (5) in metropolitan areas outside London and (6) in England as a whole;

(8) how many dwellings were let by local authorities between 1 April 1988 and 31 March 1989 to homeless households referred by other local authorities under the Housing Act 1985 part III, section 68 (a) in inner London, (b) in outer London, (c) in non-metropolitan areas of the south-east, (d) in non-metropolitan areas outside the south-east, (e) in metropolitan areas outside London and (f) in England as a whole.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 29 January 1990]: Following are estimates from local authorities' annual housing investment programme returns (HIP1) for April 1989:

Local authority lettings 1 April 1988 to 31 March 1989

	Inner London	Outer London	Non-metropolitan areas in South East	Non-metropolitan areas outside South East	Metropolitan areas outside London	England

Local Government Finance (Eastbourne)

Mr. Gow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what reply he has sent to the letter dated 14 December 1989 from the treasurer of Eastbourne borough council concerning the figure for the resident population of the borough for the purpose of calculating its standard spending assessment; and if he will make an amending report.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 1 February 1990]: This letter was acknowledged and treated as a representation from the council about the intended contents of the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England). My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State considered the council's point, along with those of other authorities which had made representations, before reaching his decisions. Those decisions were embodied in the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England) laid before the House on 11 January and approved on 18 January. A copy of that report has been sent to Eastbourne borough council.

My right hon. Friend decided not to adopt the suggestion put forward by the council but to use population estimates produced by the Registrar General for England and Wales as he initially proposed. We have no plans to change this or to make an amendment report at present.

Correspondence

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth will receive a reply to his letter dated 27 November 1989 referring to Rugby borough council.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 1 February 1990]: I have written to my hon. Friend today.

Mortgage Repossessions

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the numbers of mortgage repossessions taken by (a) building societies and (b) local authorities in each year since 1979.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 1 February 1990]: The information is as follows:—

(a) Mortgage repossessions by building societies: United Kingdom

Year	Number	As a percentage of loans at end of period
1979	2,530	0·048
1980	3,020	0·056
1981	4,240	0·077
1982	5,950	0·105
1983	7,320	0·123
1984	10,870	0·171
1985	16,770	0·250
1986	20,930	0·296
1987	22,930	0·319
1988	16,150	0·215
1989[1]	6,350	0·083

In addition some 100 to 150 additional properties reverted to local authority ownership as a result of vesting.

Children at Risk

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby of 30 January, if he will list the factors taken into account in the children at risk index; and how they have operated in the case of the figure given in his answer for Humberside.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 2 Februrary 1990]: The factors which are taken into account in calculating the children at risk index are as follows:

(i) the number of children aged under 18 years of age resident in each authority;
(ii) the proportion of children living in private households containing a lone parent;
(iii) the proportion of children dependent on a claimant receiving Supplementary Benefit or Income Support;
(iv) the proportion of children living in private housholds in rented accommodation.

The weight given to each of these indicators and full details of the children's social services standard spending assessment are given in the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby of 30 January on the Humberside and national average figures for children at risk, what factors have caused the SSA allocation for child care for Humberside to be lower than the preceding grant-related expenditure allocation.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 2 February 1990]: I refer the hon. Member to my separate answer to him on 30 January at column 171.

Archaeological Sites, London

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with the Metropolitan police about investigating thefts from scheduled archaeological sites in London.

Mr. Trippier: None. Neither my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State nor his advisers English Heritage have received any reports of thefts from scheduled archaeological sites in London. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State has announced the Government's intention to seek legislation to strengthen controls over scheduled sites by making it an offence to remove any finds whether or not discovered by a metal detector. At present objects may be removed from a scheduled site without consent, if found on the surface. The general laws of trespass and theft apply to archaeological sites that are not scheduled as they do elsewhere.

Sewage Sludge

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the maximum levels of (a) mercury and (b) lead allowed in sewage sludge to be dumped at sea.

Mr. Curry: Current United Kingdom licences for disposal of sewage sludge to sea set a maximum total annual input of 2·7 tonnes of mercury and 248 tonnes of lead.

The quantities of these metals entering the North sea in sewage sludge dumping is only about 1 per cent. of the total inputs of these metals to the North sea, most of which result from river discharges from continental countries, atmospheric inputs and disposals of dredged spoil.

London Regional Transport

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each London local authority (a) the amount reduced from their grant in 1990-91 to fund London Regional Transport and (b) the amount of the levy upon them in 1989-90; and on what basis he has calculated the reduced grant figure.

Mr. Chope: The grant for 1990-91 of London local authorities has not been reduced to fund London Regional Transport (LRT). The cost of funding LRT which until 1989-90 fell on London ratepayers through the LRT levy will, from April 1990, be borne by the Exchequer; this is reflected in the total amount of revenue support grant for 1990-91. The LRT levy was 9·06p in 1989-90; I estimate that it will yield about £188·6 million.

The Standard Spending Assessments (SSAs) for 1990-91 of London boroughs and the City of London have been reduced by the equivalent of about £24 per adult to reflect the fact that these authorities do not provide support for public transport. The basis of this calculation is set out in the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England) laid before the House on 11 January. The total reduction is £121·275 million.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Property Services Agency and Crown Suppliers Bill

83. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he has any conveniently available figures for the costs of running the Property Services Agency and Crown Suppliers Bill Committee stage after 9 pm.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: It is not possible to identify separately such costs.

Recycled Paper

84. Mr. Janner: To ask the Lord President of the Council what percentage of paper used for official duties in the House of Commons is recycleable.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: All the paper that is provided by Her Majesty's Stationery Office for official use in the House of Commons can be recycled. The Accommodation and Administration Sub-Committee is considering ways in which recycled material can be used more widely for House stationery and parliamentary publications.

Pedestrian Crossing

85. Mr. Michael: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will ask Westminster city council to provide a further pedestrian crossing to facilitate safe crossing from Old Palace Yard and other Members' offices to the Palace of Westminster near the House of Lords entrance.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The Accommodation and Administration Sub-Committee is at present considering a proposal from Westminster city council for the installation of various traffic and pedestrian management schemes in and around Parliament square designed to speed up traffic flow. I understand that the installation of a pedestrian crossing from Old Palace Yard would run counter to these proposals.

Lancashire

86. Mr. Jack: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many debates on Lancashire there have been in the last 12 months.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: In the 12 months to 31 January, four Adjournment debates related specifically to Lancashire.

Members' Staff (Employment Contracts)

87. Mr. Rooker: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many reminder notices have been sent by the Fees Office to hon. Members about the need for contracts of employment in respect of staff paid via the Fees Office.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Reminder notices were sent to all Members in March 1988. In November 1989 further reminder letters were sent to 333 Members in respect of 523 employees (secrataries and research assistants) in respect of whom statements of main conditions of employment, and so on, were still outstanding. Additionally, since March 1988, Members engaging new staff have, where necessary, been individually reminded of the requirement to provide such statements.

Westminster Hall

88. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will initiate a review of the uses of Westminster Hall.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: If the hon. Member has a specific proposal he should, in the first instance, address it to the Accommodation and Administration Sub-Committee.

Queen's Consent

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will list the Bills so far requiring the Queen's Consent this Session on (a) Second Reading and (b) Third Reading.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Of the Bills introduced in the Commons and printed so far this Session, the Reform of the House of Lords Bill will require the Queen's Consent on Second Reading: and the Agricultural Holdings (Amendment) Bill, the Enterprise and New Towns (Scotland) Bill, the Environmental Protection Bill, the Landlord and Tenant (Licensed Premises) Bill, the Property Services Agency and Crown Suppliers Bill, and the Social Security Bill will require the Queen's consent on Third Reading.

Members' Staff

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Lord President of the Council (1) how many research assistants are currently employed by hon. Members;

(2) how many secretaries are currently employed by hon. Members.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The total number of persons employed by hon. Members and paid directly from the Members' office costs allowance is currently 1,270. Since job titles ascribed to Members' employees vary considerably and do not conveniently fit into the categories specified, it is not possible to provide a meaningful breakdown.

Library (Beetles)

Mr. Grylls: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will investigate whether there is any evidence of the Australian spider beetle Ptinus Tectus or the bread beetle Stegobium Paniceum in the books in the Library; and what steps he is taking to avoid damage to the books by these beetles.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The House of Commons Library has a continuous cleaning and conservation programme for its books, which up to now has afforded no evidence of infestation by beetles. However, in the light of current concern, Library staff have already been asked to be alert for any signs of beetle activity. Appropriate control measures would be taken immediately if any such evidence came to light.

Secondhand books acquired by the Library will be examined for any signs of paper decay before they are added to stock, and similar provisions will be adopted for older books borrowed for Members from other libraries.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

St. Luke's School, West Norwood

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what consideration he gave to the need to alter and extend St. Luke's school, West Norwood, when considering the building programme approved for Lambeth for 1990-91.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. Friend took careful account of the proposal put forward by Lambeth for a building project at St. Luke's school, West Norwood. Although we increased the amount available for new voluntary aided building works in 1990-91 by 17 per cent. compared with 1989-90, project bids exceeded the resources available. Priority was given first to projects for additional school places in areas of population growth, then to building work which governors have a statutory duty to undertake as a result of proposals approved under section 13 of the Education Act 1980 and, thirdly, to projects for the improvement or replacement of inadequate buildings.

The project at St. Luke's fell in the third category and was one of a number of projects in that category which could not be accommodated in the 1990-91 programme.

Oxburgh Report

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what action he has taken to implement the Oxburgh report on earth sciences.

Mr. Jackson: Implementation of the report on the rationalisation of universities' earth sciences departments is a matter for the Universities Funding Council, in consultation with the institutions concerned.

Salary Arrears

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science who will be responsible for discharging the Inner London education authority's responsibilities after 31 March 1990 in respect of any salary arrears due to (a) teachers in schools and (b) teachers in colleges of further education.

Mrs. Rumbold: In general, liabilities in relation to salary arrears of teachers in ILEA-maintained schools or colleges of further education will become the responsibility of the new inner London education authorities from 1 April.

Haberdashers' Aske's CTC

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what further advice or undertakings he has given in respect of the payment of transitional and capital costs for the proposed Haberdashers' Aske's city technology college as a result of his meeting with representatives of the Haberdashers' Company this week.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer the hon. Member to the replies that I gave on 15 and 23 January 1990. Discussions with the Haberdashers' Company have followed the line adopted in these replies.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) when he anticipates receiving curriculum proposals for the Haberdashers' Aske's city technology college;

(2) when he anticipates receiving the results of a detailed feasibility study for the proposed Haberdashers' Aske's city technology college.

Mrs. Rumbold: In order to equip the Haberdashers' Aske's school to open as a city technology college (CTC) in September 1991, detailed studies will be required related to the adaptation of buildings and to the CTC's organisation and curriculum. Preliminary studies have been commissioned but are not yet complete.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he anticipates that a governing body for the proposed Haberdashers' Aske's city technology college will be formed.

Mrs. Rumbold: The timing of the formation of the governing body of the Haberdashers' Aske's city technology college is a matter for the Haberdashers' Aske's City Technology College Trust. My right hon. Friend expects that a governing body will be in existence for the opening of the college in September 1991.

Primary Schools

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what guidelines his Department gives local education authorities on the relationship between planning total primary school numbers and the rising five intakes in the autumn, spring and summer terms.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Department has issued no such guidance. It is up to local education authorities to decide when to admit children under five to schools, and to make plans for primary provision accordingly.

Voluntary-aided Status

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list those schools which have current applications for voluntary-aided status; and when he expects to make a decision on the applications.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The schools are listed in the table. My right hon. Friend will reach a decision on the proposals as quickly as is compatible with a full and careful consideration of all the issues involved. He has stated that it is his intention to come to a decision on statutory proposals within five months of publication wherever possible. Delays in some cases arise from factors outside the Department's control.

Local Management Schemes

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table to show such information as he has to hand from the schemes of local management of schools submitted for his approval by education authorities under the headings (a) the value of the general schools budget; (b) the value of the mandatory exceptions; (c) the value of the aggregate schools budget; (d) (b) as a percentage of (a); and (e) (c) as a percentage of (a).

Mrs. Rumbold [pursuant to her reply, 8 January 1990, c. 485]: The following information has been taken from the local management of schools scheme submissions made by local education authorities to my right hon. Friend. The table gives the percentage figures requested; it is not possible to provide comparative cash figures because the information has been supplied using a variety of price bases.

The full information requested by my hon. Friend, relating to 1990-91 budgets, will be available in the spring from statements published by all local education authorities with approved schemes under section 42 of the Education Reform Act.

ENERGY

Sizewell B

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a further statement on the timetable for commissioning and the future of Sizewell B power station in Suffolk.

Mr. Baldry: The Government attach the highest importance to the completion and operation of Sizewell B by Nuclear Electric. The commissioning of the station will be a matter for the company.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list all organisations which have advised or are now advising his Department on any aspect of the privatisation of electricity, giving in each case the dates of their involvement and, in each case, the aspect on which they advise.

Mr. Wakeham: The information is as follows:

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list all the organisations known by his Department to have advised or now to be advising any parts of the electricity supply industry on any aspects of privatisation, giving in each case the dates of their involvement and the aspect on which they have advised.

Mr. Wakeham: This is a matter for the industry. I have therefore asked the Electricity Council, in respect of the area boards, and the CEGB, in respect of National Power, PowerGen and the National Grid Company, to write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what co-ordination there is between the electricity industry and his Department on privatisation advertising.

Mr. Wakeham: Advertising by the industry to promote its goods and services is a matter for the industry itself. Currently there is no advertising for the forthcoming offers for sale. I have, jointly with the electricity supply industry, appointed Dewe Rogerson to develop and co-ordinate a marketing strategy and we shall consider the need for advertising in the light of this strategy.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the current estimate of the total fees which will be paid by his Department in the course of electricity privatisation.

Mr. Wakeham: Total costs of privatisation will be made available once flotation has been completed. Expenditure to the end of March 1989 amounted to £6·3 million and provision has been made for £30 million for the current year. Latest forecasts of requirements for 1990-91 will be published as part of the supply Estimates in March.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy why his officials have briefed the press that the value of the electricity supply industry for privatisation will be £7 billion; and how this valuation was arrived at.

Mr. Wakeham: The Government have not published estimates of the value of the electricity supply industry. It would be premature to do so, since the value will depend on many factors, including market conditions at the time of the sale.

Electricity Prices

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what discussions he, or his officials, have had with the electricity supply industry about electricity price increases this year.

Mr. Wakeham: Ministers and officials have had many discussions with the industry on a wide range of subjects.

Coal-fired Power Station, Bilsthorpe

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, further to his reply on 29 January, Official Report, column 13, what information he has received from British Coal on the cancellation of the proposal to build a coal-fired power station at Bilsthorpe; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: Decisions on the investment in the joint venture power station at Bilsthorpe are a matter for the partners involved. I am not aware of any decision to cancel the project.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Eastern Europe (Aid)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) whether he will provide updated public expenditure estimates for the Overseas Development Administration and for the component of overseas aid, in the light of Government commitment for economic assistance to eastern Europe, which were not fully included in table 2.1 of Cm 1002, "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1990-91 to 1992-93";

(2) whether the estimated total expenditure for the Overseas Development Administration will be increased in the light of recent commitments for economic assistance to eastern Europe; from which reserves any aid to eastern Europe will be paid for; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: Table 2.1 of Cm. 1002 lists the provision of £5 million in respect of the original commitment of the Polish know-how fund of £25 million over five years. The expenditure implications of the specific new commitments to eastern Europe since the survey will be reflected in next year's public expenditure White Paper. For 1990-91 we expect to seek main Estimates provision for assistance to eastern Europe of £15 million to cover expenditure under the know-how fund. Supplementary Estimate provision for 1990-91 and later years may be sought when the public expenditure implications of other commitments, such as that for the Polish agricultural project, are clearer.

DEFENCE

Low-flying Exercises

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the minimum length of time within which aircrew can acquire the appropriate training and requisite skills necessary for participation in low-flying exercises; and whether the appropriate training and requisite skills specified for these exercises differ from those required for exercises which do not involve low flying.

Mr. Neubert: No specific length of time is set for aircrew to acquire the appropriate training and requisite skills necessary for participation in low-flying exercises. As aircrew progress through training, the exercises that are undertaken will depend on the experience level of the individual aircrew concerned and the stage of training that they have reached. Low-flying training is designed to ensure that the aircrew concerned acquire the skills needed to meet the particular demands of the low-level environment.

Nuclear Submarines

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he is planning to recall any of the Polaris submarines for safety checks of their nuclear reactors.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No submarines are being recalled from operational tasks. Following the recent discovery of a technical defect in one of our nuclear-powered submarines, all such vessels are, however, being inspected as a precautionary measure when they come alongside.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he is planning to retire Britain's two Valiant class submarines.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: These vessels will be retired at the end of their useful operational life.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the integrity of Royal Navy nuclear-powered submarines' reactor-cooling circuits.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not our practice to comment on specific features of the Royal Navy's nuclear-powered submarines. These vessels are, however, designed and operated in accordance with rigorous safety standards.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment has been made of the risk to Royal Navy submarine personnel from radiation leaks.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Government attach very high priority to the safety of the crews of Royal Navy nuclear-powered submarines, which operate in accordance with rigorous safety standards. All Royal Navy nuclear-powered submarines and personnel, where appropriate, are subject to stringent monitoring procedures.

Colin Wallace

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the total number of documents relating to Colin Wallace which have been discovered; what were the dates when each was found; and when Ministers were notified on each occasion;

(2) what month early in 1989 the documents relating to Colin Wallace were discovered, by whom, where and when this information was given to Ministers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the information which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence set out in a letter dated 2 February 1990 to the hon. Member for Brent, East (Mr. Livingstone), a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if, in the light of the additional information which has now become available on the issues raised by Colin Wallace, he will reassess the answers provided by his Department's Ministers to the hon. Member for Southend, East on the complaints by Captain Fred Holroyd.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Papers recently found on Mr. Wallace do not affect answers given on the complaints made by Mr. Holroyd on his own behalf.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the nature of the file provided on behalf of Colin Wallace to his Department and to the Prime Minister's office late in 1984; and what was the nature of the inquiry then initiated.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The file contained a selection of background information concerning Mr. Wallace's allegations. These papers were considered by officials and a reply was sent to Mr. Holroyd from the Prime Minister's office.

HOME DEPARTMENT

AIDS

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress of his AIDS education programme among (a) prison officers and (b) prisoners.

Mr. Waddington: A resource package, "AIDS Inside", designed for prison officers has been in use since August 1987. The package is used in the initial training of new entrant prison officers and in the development training programmes of individual establishments. The target for governors in the present training year (ending 31 March 1990) is to deliver the package to all operational staff who have not received such training in earlier years. Refresher training will begin in 1991-92.

The latest phase of the prisoner education programme began in March 1989 with the introduction of the resource package, "AIDS Inside and Out". Governors have been set a stringent target for 1989-90 of delivering the package (or, failing that, showing the 20-minute video which is the core element of the package) to all willing prisoners who are in custody for four weeks or longer. They have been asked to say how they have progressed in meeting that target in their next annual report.

Crime (London)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total number of crimes in London in (a) 1979 and (b) 1989.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested for 1979 is published in table 32 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales 1979", Cmnd 8098. The information for the whole of 1989 is not yet available but figures for the 12 months to the end of September 1989 are published in table 5 of Home Office Statistical Bulletin 43/89. Copies of these publications are available in the Library.

Archaeological Sites (Thefts)

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) arrests and (b) convictions there have been in the past year for the offence of theft from scheduled archaeological sites.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is not available.

Sentenced Prisoners

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of all sentenced prisoners who (i) emanated from an ethnic minority and (ii) are white were sentenced by (a) a Crown court and (b) a magistrates court during 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 January 1990]: The information is given in the table:

Persons received under sentence into Prison Service establishments in England and Wales: by ethnic origin and court sentencing 1988

Court sentencing	White	West Indian Guyanese African	Indian Pakistani Bangladeshi	Chinese Arab Mixed origin	Other not recorded (including refusals)	All receptions under sentence
Crown Court	52	71	68	63	69	54
Magistrates' courts	48	29	32	37	31	46
Total	100	100	100	100	100	100

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the percentage of sentenced prisoners in England and Wales who emanate from an ethnic minority for the latest available date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 January 1990]: The latest readily available information is given in the table:

Population under sentence in prison service establishments in England and Wales on 30 June 1989: by ethnic origin

Ethnic origin	Percentage
White	83
West Indian, Guyanese, African	10
Indian, Pakistani, Bangladeshi	3
Chinese, Arab, Mixed origin	2
Other, not recorded (including refusals)	2
All sentenced persons in prison service establishment	100

Badgers

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions were instigated, and how many were successful, in the most recent year for which figures are available, in connection with badger baiting; what was the maximum penalty levied; if he plans to introduce any further controls; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 2 February 1990]: In 1988, the last year for which information is available, there were 74 prosecutions under the Badgers Act 1973. There were convictions in 41 cases and the largest fine was for £700. It is not possible to say how many of these cases involved badger baiting.

Badger baiting may lead to an offence also under the Protection of Animals Act 1911, although no separate records are kept of such cases.

I am considering sympathetically a proposal by the hon. Member for Mansfield (Mr. Meale) and my hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Mr. Mitchell) to provide that a person convicted under the Badgers Act 1973 may be disqualified from keeping a dog. Otherwise there are no plans for further legislation relating to badger baiting.

Security Vetting

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps are taken to ensure that job vetting by private, non-Government employers involving the security services complies with the European Convention on Human Rights in providing an effective remedy to those adversely affected; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: The Security Service Act 1989 ensures that United Kingdom law relating to the Security Service is fully consistent with the European Convention on Human Rights.

Prison Population

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the prison population in England and Wales for the latest available date; and how many of those prisoners had been sentenced by: (a) a crown court and (b) a magistrates' court; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor [holding answer 25 January 1990]: On 26 January 1990 there were 46,630 prisoners in prison service establishments in England and Wales.

Details of sentencing courts are published annually in prison statistics England and Wales (table 1.15 of the latest volume, for 1988 (Cm. 825)), copies of which are in the Library. The latest available information is for June 1989 and is given in the table.

Population under sentence in Prison Service establishments on 30 June 1989: by court sentencing

Court Sentencing	Number[1]
Crown Court	33,100
Magistrates' court	3,400
Other courts	100
Not recorded	1,500
Total sentenced population	38,000

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Company Accounts

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many companies still have not filed accounts with the Registrar of Companies in respect of their accounting years ended in (a) 1985, (b) 1986 and (c) 1987; and how many of those companies are engaged in the provision of financial services to the public.

Mr. Redwood: The number of currently live companies which have not yet filed accounts for each of the years in question is shown in the table.

1985: 13,710
1986: 26,223 (includes 1985)
1987: 57,350 (includes 1985, 1986)

It is not possible to identify how many of these companies are engaged in the provision of financial services to the public.

Company Law

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list European Community company law directives that have been enacted, considered and planned over the last decade with approximate dates of imposition.

Mr. Redwood: The following European Community company law directives have been adopted since 1980:

Directive	Implementation date
Directive revising the amounts expressed in ECU in the Fourth Company Law Directive	1984
Sixth Company Law Directive on the division of public liability companies	1 January 1986
Seventh Company Law Directive on consolidated accounts	1 January 1988
Eight Company Law Directive on the qualification of auditors	1 January 1988
Eleventh Company Law Directive on branch accounts	1 January 1992
Twelfth Company Law Directive on single member private limited companies	1 January 1990
Directive co-ordinating regulations on insider dealing	1 June 1992
Directive on the disclosure of information on major holdings in listed companies	1 January 1991
Directive on the accounts of banks	31 December 1990
Directive on the accounts of bank branches	1 January 1991

The following proposed directives have been considered since 1980, but have not yet been adopted, and no implementation dates have yet been set:

Proposed Fifth Company Law Directive on the structure and management of PLC's.
Proposed Tenth Company Law Directive on cross-border mergers of PLC's.
Proposed Thirteenth Company Law Directive on takeovers.
Proposal to amend the Fourth and Seventh Company Law Directives with respect to small and medium sized enterprises (SMEs) and to accounts in ECU.
Proposal to extend the Fourth and Seventh Company Law Directives to certain partnerships and unlimited companies.
Proposed Directive on employee involvement complementing the Proposed Regulation on the European Company Statute.

Media Ownership

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) when he expects the Office of Fair Trading to conclude its inquiry into media ownership;

(2) when he expects the Sadler inquiry to publish its findings.

(3) whether he will list the people appointed to assist Mr. Sadler on his inquiry into aspects of the media;

(4) whether the Sadler inquiry has commenced taking evidence; and if it will be taking evidence in public.

Mr. Redwood: I announced to the House on 14 December at column 750 that Mr. John Sadler CBE was to undertake an inquiry into standards of cross-media promotion and that the Director General of Fair Trading, who was conducting an inquiry into the competition aspects of these issues, had decided not to pursue it.

Mr. Sadler's inquiry is expected to last about a year. He will be assisted by officials of my Department.

Mr. Sadler is writing to a number of organisations likely to have an interest in his inquiry. He expects to issue shortly a press notice inviting other interested parties to send him their views. He is asking for written evidence by mid-March and expects to take oral evidence later in the year. The inquiry will not be taking evidence in public.

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the share of accountancy business taken by the seven biggest firms in (a) 1970, (b) 1980 and (c) 1989 in Britain, West Germany and France.

Mr. Redwood: The information requested is not available.

Telephones

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what consideration he has given to encouraging the introduction to the United Kingdom of the option for telephone subscribers to install equipment which will identify the number from which an incoming call is being made.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 1 February 1990]: The provision of calling line identification facilities is primarily a matter for the network operators; but I know that the Director General of Telecommunications, Sir Bryan Carsberg, is keeping the position under close review.

Japan (Trade)

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what obstacles remain to fair trade between the United Kingdom and the Empire of Japan; if he will list them and the action he intends to take to eliminate them; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 30 January 1990]: The Government have three main trade policy objectives with Japan. The first is to persuade the Japanese authorities to implement structural reforms to sustain the shift in the balance of their economy from export-led to domestic demand-led growth. At the OECD ministerial meeting and the G7 summit last year, it was agreed that structural reform would play an important part in efforts to reduce current account imbalances. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, during her visit to Japan last year, emphasised the need to eliminate structural rigidities in key areas of the Japanese economy such as agricultural support and protection, land use and taxation and the distribution system.

Secondly, we must secure the removal of barriers to access to the Japanese market for United Kingdom exporters. Few such barriers remain. Where they do, the Government campaign vigorously for their removal through the appropriate channels: bilaterally, through the European Community, and through the multilateral GATT system.

The principal areas in which further progress is needed are:

Leather and leather goods. Under the present tariff quota system, Community exports within a small quota attract duty of 20 to 27 per cent. and goods in excess of quota a duty of 60 per cent. Negotiations are in progress at Community level to secure improvements in access when the present EC-Japan agreement expires in 1991.

Food products, particularly sugar confectionery, biscuits and jam, which still attract high tariffs (between 20 and 35 per cent.). GATT Ministers have agreed that such tariff peaks should be dealt with in the Uruguay round.

Standards and testing requirements in sectors such as pharmaceuticals, and medical equipment sectors. Regular EC-Japan sectoral talks provide the main forum for negotiations to eliminate non-tariff barriers of this sort.

Financial services. British firms are looking for greater opportuities to participate in Japan's financial markets, particularly in the insurance and investment sectors.

The Government's approach has achieved significant results. Last April, for example, the Japanese Government removed discriminatory taxation on imported whisky; exports of Scotch to Japan in the first 11 months of 1989 show an increase of 75 per cent. in value compared with the same period in 1988.

Thirdly, we must ensure that the British business community is fully aware of the greatly increased opportunities in Japan, and of the strategic importance of the Japanese market. My Department's Opportunity Japan campaign was launched in 1988 to address this need. A target was set of doubling British exports to Japan in three years. The determined efforts of British exporters mean that we are well on the way to doing so: last year United Kingdom exports of goods to Japan increased by £525 million to £2·3 billion, an increase of 30 per cent. over 1988.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry who will represent his Department at the Council of Ministers meetings; and what the agenda will be on (a) industry: 13 March and 28 May, (b) internal market: 22 February, 3 and 14 April and 20 June, (c) research: 26 February and 29 June, (d) telecommunications: 28 April and (e) tourism: 7 and 8 April.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 30 January 1990]: At the moment it is intended that my Department should be represented at the Council of Ministers meetings as follows:

Industry—Mr. Hogg
Internal Market—Mr. Redwood
Research—Mr. Hogg
Telecommunications—Mr. Forth
Tourism—Mr. Forth

Representation plans are provisional at present. Even the dates are subject to change. In particular, if the Tourism Council agenda is mainly for the Department of Employment, the United Kingdom will probably be represented by Lord Strathclyde.

Agendas for Councils are not announced till about two weeks beforehand. The table shows the provisional agendas that are available from the work programme circulated by the Irish Presidency. At this early stage of the Presidency, these are no more than a rough guide to which issues are likely to be taken when.

THE ARTS

Disabled People

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister for the Arts how he intends to improve access to arts venues for disabled people; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: My aim is for the arts to be accessible to everyone. In December 1988 I gave £150,000 to the Carnegie Trust's Adapt Fund for the improvement of facilities for disabled people in arts venues. I acknowledge the important role which my hon. Friend is playing as chairman of this fund.

Both the Museums and Galleries Commission and the Arts Council employ a disability officer. The Arts Council recently published an arts and disability action plan to produce practical measures to increase disabled people's involvement in the arts, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

CIVIL SERVICE

Agencies

Mr. Watts: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service whether he can report any further developments in the agency system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: Work continues to progress well in preparing activities for agency status and in identifying further candidates. The Treasury minute (Cm. 964), replying to the PAC's 38th report and published on 31 January, confirmed the Government's view that the pace at which Departments launch agencies would speed up, with a total of at least 20 agencies launched by the summer, and with more to come.

Management Skills

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what training is given in management skills within the Civil Service.

Mr. Luce: Civil servants are trained in the full range of management skills they need to exercise in their work, including the management of people, finance and other resources. In 1988-89, some 82,600 civil servants undertook management training. Of this, 81 per cent. was provided directly by Departments, 7 per cent. was undertaken at the Civil Service college, and the remainder was provided externally.

Outside Posts

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what rules govern the acceptance by any senior civil servant of a post outside the Civil Service (a) during and (b) subsequent to his Civil Service career.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 2 February 1990]: The rules governing acceptance by senior civil servants of outside appointments during and after their Civil Service careers are set out in chapters 5 and 11, respectively, of the personnel management handbook, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

EMPLOYMENT

State-supported Training

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many persons were involved in state-supported training at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Eggar: The table shows the numbers of people who were on state-supported training schemes, funded through the Training Agency, at the end of November 1989:

Programme	Numbers in training (November 1989)
Employment Training (ET)	212,000
Youth Training Scheme (YTS)	127,900
Community Industry (CI)	6,000
Business Growth Training (BGT)	(1)

(1) The following figures are available for BGT for the month of November 1989;

Programme		Numbers in training (November 1989)
Option 1	1,226	kits issued
Option 2	28,974	filled training places
Option 3	133	contracts signed
Option 4	23	contracts signed
Option 5	17	contracts signed

Earnings

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, further to his letter of 11 January to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby replying further to his holding answer of 19 December, Official Report, 20 December, column 235, whether he will publish in the Official Report a table providing the same information for 1972-79 together with his best estimate of the numbers employed in 1979 in (i) each of the specified categories, (ii) manufacturing in the public sector and (iii) the private sector other than manufacturing; and if he will add an estimate of the increase in average earnings each year of manuals and non-manuals in the private sector less manufacturing based on the weighted average employment figures in the respective sectors.

Mr. Nicholls: Estimates of the increases in earnings for each year are provided in the table. Estimates of the numbers in employment for the categories requested are not available except for non-manual male employees in manufacturing, of which there were 1,377,000 employees in October 1979. The calculation requested in the final part of the question would not be meaningful for the reasons stated in my letter to the hon. Member.

[1] Average gross weekly and hourly earnings, not affected by absence, for those aged 21 and over.
[2] Not available

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if the Government will publish guidelines showing increases in productivity to assist employers faced with pay claims to discount settlements in other industries which take into account increases in productivity; and if he will publish a table showing the percentage increase in median earnings of (a) full-time adult male manual workers in the motor vehicle industry and (b) the whole economy less manufacturing since 1972 and 1979, together with increases in output per head.

Mr. Nicholls: Productivity is clearly a vital influence on costs and competitiveness but it is for employers to regulate their own internal affairs. Only they can judge the level of pay settlements appropriate to all the relevant circumstances; and it is they who must bear the consequences of their decisions for competitiveness, investment and jobs.

The increase to April 1989 in the median level of gross weekly earnings of full-time adult manual male employees in the manufacture of motor vehicles and parts (SIC 35) was 511 per cent. from April 1972 and 148 per cent. from April 1979. Information on the median level of earnings for all full-time adult employees in the whole economy less manufacturing is not available.

The increase in output per head for SIC 35 between the second quarter of 1979 and the third quarter of 1989 was 49 per cent. Data on output per head for SIC 35 prior to 1978 are not available. The increase in output per head for the whole economy less manufacturing between 1972 and the third quarter of 1989 cannot be provided without incurring disproportionate cost. The increase between the second quarter of 1979 and the third quarter of 1989 was 12 per cent.

Factory Inspectors

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many factory inspectors were appointed in the past 10 years with the minimum qualifications of (a) higher national diploma, (b) polytechnic degree and (c) university degree.

Mr. Nicholls: The 276 factory inspectors recruited in the past 10 years were qualified to at least the levels specified, as follows:

a) higher national diploma—2
b) polytechnic degree—89
c) university degree—185

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the Health and Safety Executive factory inspectorate division budget for the year 1989-90.

Mr. Nicholls: The gross budget for 1989-90 allocated to the factories and agriculture inspectorate division was £37·6 million. The Health and Safety Commission's planned use of resources in 1989-90 was described in its "Plan of Work for 1989-90 and beyond", published on 3 May 1989.

Self-employment

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the total number of self-employed people in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Nicholls: In September 1989, the latest date for which estimates are available, the number of self-employed people in the United Kingdom was 3,141,000.

Economic League

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to meet the Economic League to discuss the lists it gives to employers concerning prospective employees.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. and learned Friend has no such plans.

Careers Service

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what criteria he uses to judge the success of the careers service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The standards expected of the local education authority-delivered careers service in England are set out in the "Guidance for Local Education Authorities in England and Wales" issued jointly in 1988 by my predecessor and the Secretary of State for Wales. Annual objectives and numerical targets are a condition for receipt of direct grant under the careers service strengthening scheme.

The careers service inspectorate monitors annual performance against objectives and targets and carries out a full inspection of each service at about five-yearly intervals. Reports from the inspectorate provide the information on which I judge the effectiveness of individual services.

My right hon. Friend the Member for Sutton Coldfield (Sir N. Fowler) announced last year that reports on inspections started after September 1989 will be published. Copies of previous reports, including a recent report on the excellent service in Bolton, are available in the Library.

Footwear and Textiles

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many jobs have been lost in (a) the footwear industry and (b) the textile industry since October 1989, by month; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: There are no figures for job losses or job gains. Latest estimates of the number of employees in employment relate to November 1989. These show falls of 300 (0·6 per cent.) and 200 (0·1 per cent.) respectively for the footwear and textile industries since October 1989.

Women Workers

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how his Department intends to encourage employers to address the needs of women returning to work.

Mr. Nicholls: My Department will continue the action that it has taken over many months to encourage employers to make recruitment and retention policies attractive to women. It is doing this primarily through:

(1) alerting employers to the need to recruit women at all occupational levels to help make up for the decline in the numbers of young people. The Training Agency/NEDO report "Defusing the Demographic Time Bomb" has been widely publicised.
(2) encouraging employers to consider introducing—career breaks—part-time work at all levels—flexible working hours—childcare.
(3) its example as an employer
(4) helping women get appropriate training thus enhancing their value to employers.
(5) supporting and publishing research into the female labour market, for example, on employers' recruitment and retention strategies.

Environmental Protection

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if his Department has any figures for the number of people employed in the United Kingdom on environmental protection and environmental improvement activities for each of the past five years.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is not available, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many men were in employment in each standard planning region in the United Kingdom; and how many women were in full and part-time employment in June 1979 at the latest date for which information is available.

Mr. Nicholls: Table 1 shows the male civilian work force in employment for each region in September 1989. Table 2 shows the total female civilian work force in employment in June 1979 and September 1989.

Liquidation (Costs)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what contribution his Department makes to the administration costs of settling redundancy claims, holiday pay, pension schemes, etc., when his Department pays the redundancy liabilities of the workers of a liquidated company; and how these costs rate against the claims of unsecured trade creditors in settling the liquidation.

Mr. Nicholls: My Department makes various statutory redundancy and insolvency payments to employees through the employer's representative, usually the receiver or liquidator dealing with the insolvency, who acts as the Department's agent. The Department pays a fee for this work. The general administration costs of the insolvency are recovered by the employer's representative from the proceeds of the insolvency in priority to claims by creditors. Statutory claims by employees are settled as soon as the employer's representative has processed them, normally within a few weeks of the closure of the company.

Under-sevens Project

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment by which date the "Working with Under Sevens and their Families" project is required to complete its work.

Mr. Nicholls: By 31 July 1990.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much time will be available for consultation with the professionals and others involved in the implementation of the recommendations of the "Working with Under Sevens and their Families" project.

Mr. Nicholls: Consultation with the professionals and others who will be involved in the implementation of project outputs is an integral part of the project and therefore ongoing.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the remit of the "Working with Under Sevens and their Families" project in which the Training Agency has had an input.

Mr. Nicholls: The purpose of this project is to develop nationally recognised standards of competence and associated assessment systems as the basis for national awards for care staff working with the under-sevens and their families.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether funding will be made available to implement the recommendations of the "Working with Under Sevens and their Families" project.

Mr. Nicholls: Government funding is available for all projects within the standards programme, to contribute to the cost of promoting the uptake of the standards and qualifications which emerge from them.

YTS Trainees

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, if he will make a statement on the use of YTS trainees on the MV Marine.

Mr. Nicholls: No. There were no YTS trainees on the MV Marine.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Taxation

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Billericay (Mrs. Gorman) on 18 January, Official Report, column 341, if he will estimate the net revenue forgone by the Exchequer in (a) 1988-89 and (b) 1989-90 as a result of the reductions in personal income tax for higher rate payers to 40 pence in the pound introduced in the Finance Act 1988, in the light of the Government's receipts since then.

Mr. Lilley: My reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Billericay on 18 January (Official Report, column 341) referred to the estimate of the direct costs of abolishing the income tax rates above 40 per cent. given in the 1988 Financial Statement and Budget Report.

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the percentage of total general Government taxes, and social security contributions derived from (a) direct taxation and (b) indirect taxation in each country of the EEC for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Lilley: Statistics on the composition of tax revenue in EC member countries are published by the OECD in "Revenue Statistics of OECD Member Countries 1965-88".

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the level of tax revenues incurred from (a) individuals, (b) corporate bodies and (c) public organisations in (i) 1979 and (ii) 1989.

Mr. Lilley: Taxes on income and capital gains, local authority rates and national insurance contributions can be allocated as follows:

	1979-80 £ billion	1988-89 £ billion
Persons	30·8	75·8
Companies	18·4	46·3

It is not possible to distinguish taxes paid by public corporations from those paid by companies as a whole. Nor is it possible to allocate other taxes (for example, VAT) to persons or companies.

Inflation and Interest Rates

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were (a) the rates of inflation and (b) the levels of interest rates in each country of the EEC, Japan, and the United States of America, for the most recent dates available.

Mr. Ryder: Following is the information requested:

Inflation and short term interest rates in the EC, US and Japan.

	12 month inflation rates excluding estimates of home-owners' costs[1]	Short-term nominal interest rates[2]
United Kingdom[3]	6·1	15·1
United States of America	4·7	8·3
Japan	2·9	7·0
Germany	3·1	8·1
France	3·6	11·1
Italy	6·5	6·2
Belgium	3·6	8·8
Denmark	4·8	12·0
Greece	14·0	21·0
Ireland	4·2	12·1
Luxembourg	3·8	10·5
Netherlands	0·9	8·8
Portugal	11·7	12·5
Spain	7·0	15·5

[1] Inflation figures are for November 1989, except for United Kingdom, Germany, France, Italy, Denmark and Belgium (December) and Ireland (Q4).

[2] Interest rates refer to close 31 January, except Spain, Greece and Denmark (1 February), Ireland (January) and Portugal (October).

[3] United Kingdom figure is for RPI excluding mortgage interest payments; figures for other countries exclude estimates of owner occupiers' housing costs as appropriate.

Publicity

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total publicity and advertising expenditure, including for privatisation, by all Government Departments and public bodies in (a) 1979 and (b) 1989.

Mr. Ryder: Information on publicity, including advertising, is not held centrally and is a matter for individual Departments.

Banks (Third World Debt)

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the revised Bank of England guidelines to banks on their provisions for Third world debt.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 2 February 1990]: The revised matrix guidelines are a supervisory tool to assist banks in fixing provisioning levels against exposure to countries experiencing debt-servicing and repayment difficulties. Responsibility for formulating the matrix rests with the Bank of England.

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer to what extent the Inland Revenue will take account of Third world debt provision by banks in allowing them tax relief.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 2 February 1990]: Provisions by banks against Third-world debts are allowable for tax only to the extent that such debts are shown to be irrecoverable.

Civil Service (Closed Shop)

Sir Norman Fowler: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what closed shop arrangements exist in the Civil Service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Major [holding answer 2 February 1990]: There are no closed shop arrangements in the Civil Service.

Civil servants are free to choose whether or not they wish to join or remain a member of a trade union.

European Community Budget

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list in a separate tabulation for each of the last three years, including the estimate for 1989, the receipts and contributions to the EEC budget under each of the major headings value added tax, agricultural levies CE7, fourth resource, agricultural receipts, social fund receipts etc., setting out the net contribution/receipt, followed by the notional shape of the cost of central Community institutions allocated on a population basis leading to an amended net contribution/receipt as calculated by addition/subtraction of this notional value.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 31 January 1990]: Full information about the net contributions or receipts of each of the member states is not available. It is, therefore, not possible to show the notional impact on net positions of allocating the cost of central Community institutions in line with population shares.

WALES

Rural Schools (Closures)

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of rural schools closed in Dyfed, Powys, Clwyd and Gwynedd since 1979.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Separate figures relating only to schools in rural areas are not held. The following table shows the net change in the number of primary and secondary schools other than maintained special schools in the areas requested.

	Dyfed	Powys	Clwyd	Gwynedd

Local Government Finance

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the number of extra staff employed by Welsh district authorities to administer and collect the poll tax in each named district.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of local authority expenditure in 1990-91 he estimates will be met by community charge payers.

Mr. Peter Walker: If local authorities budget in line with the settlement that I have announced for 1990-91, after allowing for community charge benefit and transitional relief, community charge payers should expect to contribute 14 per cent. of local authorities' expenditure for that year.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will give the average business rate to be paid by (i) commercial and (ii) industrial premises in each Welsh district in 1990-91;

(2) if he will set out the average rateable value for (a) commercial and (b) industrial premises in each Welsh district following revaluation together with the average figure for each category prior to revaluation and the percentage increase as a result of the 1989 revaluation.

Mr. Walker: The information requested is shown in the following table:

A large increase in the average rate bill for industrial properties in South Pembrokeshire is due to the large upward revaluation of the Milford Haven oil refinery complex.

The average rateable values requested are not representative of the majority of premises. Inevitably they are weighted towards the upper end by the existence of a few companies with very large properties—viz British Steel at Port Talbot. A more appropriate measure would have been the median rateable values. That information is not available.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the figures and percentages for the income of each Welsh district for the latest year for which figures are available broken down into the following categories: central Government grant, domestic rate, business rate, mixed hereditament rate, income from fees and charges.

Mr. Peter Walker: The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will give the general rate for each Welsh district in 1989-90 broken down into its component parts of county precept and community and district council levies;

(2) what was the (a) domestic rate, (b) hereditament rate and (c) business rate for each Welsh district in 1989-90;

(3) what was the average rate paid by (i) commercial and (ii) industrial premises in each Welsh district in 1989-90.

Mr. Peter Walker: The information requested is published in table 9.3 of Welsh Local Government Financial Statistics No. 13, 1989.

Health Promotion Authority

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what allocation of resources is to be made to the Health Promotion Authority for Wales for the financial year 1990-91.

Mr. Grist: Subject to parliamentary approval, £2·257 million will be made available for allocation to the HPAW in 1990-91. The allocation will be conditional upon satisfactory completion of annual performance review. It represents a further and substantial additional commitment of resources to HPAW over the £2·057 million allocated in 1989-90.

School Buildings

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he intends to commission a survey comparable to the "Survey of School Buildings 1986" by the Department of Education and Science.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No. I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 19 December 1989, when I said that in the context of my efficiency initiative local authorities had prepared reports on energy and property management and had further action in hand. The property review recommends the setting up of appropriate records in regard to age and condition of buildings including schools.

Contaminated Land

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to update and supplement the register of land contaminated by industrial and landfill activities in Wales.

Mr. Grist: The survey to locate contaminated sites in Wales was conducted for the Welsh Office and the Welsh Development Agency in 1982-83 and updated in 1987-88. Further updates will be considered as appropriate.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether the computer facilities at his Department enable local authorities in Wales to receive information on the contaminated land sites in their area.

Mr. Grist: Yes. The information is available to local authorities and other inquirers on request.

Health Workers' Wages

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will indicate the figure and the proportion of the total budget for each health authority in Wales spent on (a) wages of consultants, (b) wages of junior hospital doctors, (c) wages of nursing staff, (d) wages of managers and administrator and (e) wages of cleaners and ancillary staff.

Mr. Grist: The information which the hon. Gentleman has asked for is not available centrally in the form requested, since budgets are determined locally by each authority from the resources which my right hon. Friend allocates to them and from the proceeds which they realise from cost improvement and income generation schemes. However, the information requested, expressed as a proportion of total expenditure, can be obtained from the authorities' most recent annual accounts as follows:

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will indicate the figure and the proportion of the total wages budget for each health authority in Wales spent on (a) wages of consultants, (b) wages of junior hospital doctors, (c) wages of nursing staff, (d) wages of managers and administrators and (e) wages of cleaners and ancillary staff.

Mr. Ian Grist: The information which the hon. Gentleman has asked for is not available centrally in the form requested since budgets are determined locally by each authority from the resources which my right hon. Friend allocates to them and from the proceeds which they realise from cost improvement and income generation schemes. However, the information requested, expressed as a proportion of total expenditure, can be obtained from the authorities' most recent annual accounts as follows:

Water Supply

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the water supply problems which arose or were imminent in Wales during 1989; and what steps he intends to take to ensure that such problems do not arise in future.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him on 25 October 1989, c. 451-52.

Arts Funding

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the impact upon arts funding in Wales by (a) local authorities tax and (b) business sponsorships consequent upon the implementations of the uniform business rate.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I do not expect the community charge or the uniform business rate to have any effect on the funding of the arts in Wales.

Opencast Mine, Bannel Bridge

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will visit Bannel bridge, Clwyd;
(2) if he will visit Bucrley, Clwyd;
(3) if he will visit Megs Lane, Clwyd;
(4) if he will visit Spon Green, Clwyd.

Mr. Peter Walker: Not in the immediate future.

Health Service (Income Generation)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a list of full-time Health Service employees who are directors of, or who work for, companies operating in areas related to their work in the National Health Service where there are opportunities for income generation.

Mr. Grist: This information is not available.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if Mid Glamorgan health authority has sought his advice about the conflict of interest which has arisen from the involvement of two full-time Health Service employees as majority shareholders and company secretary and chairman of Healthcare Diagnostics Ltd. based at the innovation centre on the Mid Glamorgan science park, Bridgend.

Mr. Grist: No. This is primarily a matter for the health authority to satisfy itself that there is no conflict of interest arising when any of its employees become involved in activities which could affect their terms of employment with the NHS.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what guidelines he has issued in addition to DHSS Circular PM(79) 11 (November 1979), with its attached standard contract, for dealing with potential conflicts of interest when full-time National Health Service employees are involved as directors, shareholders, workers, or all three, in private companies operating in areas related to their work in the National Health Service where there are opportunities for income generation;

(2) whether he will issue guidelines to prevent full-time National Health Service employees from being involved in any capacity in a private company operating in the same field as that in which they are employed in the National Health Service where there are opportunities for income generation.

Mr. Grist: The Department is currently considering the possibility of issuing advice on general principles of good conduct within the NHS which will include aspects such as the declaration of interests in cases where staff may have a private pecuniary interest in a firm contracting to provide a service.

Ynys-y Fro Reservoir

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will investigate the growth of blue-green algae at Ynys-y fro reservoir, Newport, in the summer of 1989.

Mr. Grist: This is a matter for the National Rivers Authority, which is conducting investigations into the cause of algal blooms last year.

HEALTH

Milk Tokens

91. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he next intends to review the working of the welfare milk token scheme.

Mr. Freeman: Operational matters such as the workings of the welfare milk token scheme are kept under constant review to ensure that they are as efficient and effective as possible.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what further representations he has received concerning the working of the welfare milk token scheme.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden) on 23 January at column 682 and to the record of the debate on the regulations introducing the change on 29 January at columns 113-32.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about alleged underfunding of (a) North East Thames regional health authority and (b) Waltham Forest district authority; and what response he has made.

Mr. Freeman: We have received a number of representations about financial allocations to North East Thames regional health authority, and Waltham Forest district health authority, including one from the hon. Member, to which I replied on 31 January 1990.

Environmental Medicine Foundation

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth of 22 January, Official Report, column 555, if an application has been received for funds from his Department from the Environmental Medicine Foundation.

Mr. Freeman: No application has been received in the Department of Health.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the criteria used by his Department for making funds available to organisations such as the Environmental Medicine Foundation.

Mr. Freeman: The Medical Research Council (MRC) is the main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research in the United Kingdom. The Department of Health funds health and personal social services research which meets departmental objectives in public health. The criteria employed are the relevance and scientific promise of the work proposed. The then Minister for Health, the late Lord Trafford, wrote to the chairman of the foundation last year, advising it of the role of the MRC in funding medical research, and of the availability of facilities in the United Kingdom for analysing low concentrations of chemicals in human tissue.

Disabled Persons

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidance his Department gave to local authorities concerning money allocated for the implementation of sections 5 and 6 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what money has been, and will be, made available to local authorities for the implementation of sections 5 and 6 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986 in the years 1988-89, 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92;

(3) whether the money made available to local authorities for the implementation of sections 5 and 6 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986 was ring-fenced; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: We agreed with the local authority associations in 1987 that the additional costs of implementation of sections 5 and 6 of the Act were in the region of £5 million in 1988-89 and £19 million in 1989-90, rising to around £24 million in a full year. These amounts have been taken into consideration in determining the level of central Government support to local authorities for the appropriate year. They have not been ring-fenced or separately identified, as is the case with the vast majority of our support for local authorities. Our guidance to local authorities on implementation of sections 5 and 6 included a reminder that the resource implications had been agreed and taken into account in public expenditure discussions.

Doctors and Nurses

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will identify the number of doctors and nurses employed in each regional health authority (a) now and (b) in June 1979.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The number of doctors and nurses employed in each regional health authority now and in 1979 are given in the table. Validated figures are available only in September each year.

AIDS

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when his Department received an application for a grant for 1990-91 from AIDS care education and training; and when this will be approved.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will approve the AIDS care education and training application for a grant under section 64 for the current financial year.

Mr. Freeman: ACET sent its application for section 64 funding for 1990-91 to the Department on 11 January 1990. A decision will be given as soon as consideration of the application is completed.

Durham Health Authority

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the total spending allocated to Durham district health authority for each year since 1979, and then adjusted for inflation.

Mr. Freeman: Allocations to district health authorities are a matter for the regional health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of Northern regional health authority.

Drug Promotion

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has any plans to halt the increase in drug promotion by companies.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Expenditure on promotion by pharmaceutical companies supplying the NHS with drugs within the terms of the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme is limited by that scheme. For the companies in aggregate it is limited to 9 per cent. of sales revenue.

Junior Doctors (Working Hours)

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will announce the outcome of recent studies on junior doctors' hours of work.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: In 1985 the Department commissioned Dr. Robin Dowie of the British Postgraduate Medical Federation to undertake research into patterns of hospital medical staffing. She has completed an interim report on junior doctors' hours of work, which is published today. A copy will be placed in the Library.

The report covers the period before we launched two initiatives on junior doctors' hours of work. It cannot, therefore, be expected to reflect progress made during the last couple of years or so.

In our first initiative, launched in June 1988, we asked health authorities to take further action to reduce the onerous rotas worked by some junior doctors. Good progress has been made on this.

Reports from regions show that about 27 per cent. of all junior doctors were on rotas worse than one in three in 1988. By September 1990, around one in eight junior doctors will undertake duties which are onerous.

In the second initiative, which began in July 1989, we announced the establishment of nine pilot studies across six regional health authorities aimed at reducing average hours of duty to our long-term aim of 72 per week.

Another important feature of our drive to reduce the working hours of junior doctors is the appointment of 100 extra hospital consultants, as announced in the White Paper "Working for Patients". I announced details of the allocation of the first 35 of these posts in October last year, and hope to be in a position to announce the allocation of the remaining 65 by the end of this month.

I will be meeting representatives of the British Medical Association on Wednesday this week to discuss what further action is now appropriate. We are determined to see further progress in reducing the onerous rotas worked by some junior doctors.

With the rapid pace of scientific and medical advances it is even more important than ever for junior doctors not to be tired when carrying out their duties. Progress depends largely on the commitment and co-operation of the medical profession. This week's talks with the British Medical Association will be a good beginning.

Foetuses

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will place a copy of the research carried out for the Department on the law and practice in other countries on in vitro fertilisation, embryo research, abortion and the use of foetal tissue in research and treatment in the Library.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I have today arranged for a copy of this research report to be placed in the Library. It was commissioned by the Department of Health in recognition of the need for up-to-date, accurate information on these subjects. In particular, the introduction of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Bill has focused attention on the approach taken in other countries to the questions raised by the Bill. The study was undertaken by Dr. Jennifer Gunning, until recently secretary of the Interim Licensing Authority.

The report is a survey of the legislation and current practice in a number of countries. It does not attempt to analyse the merits of any particular approach and no conclusions are drawn. It will be of value to hon. Members here in the debates on the subject.

Regional Health Authorities (Expenditure)

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much each regional health authority (a) budgeted and (b) spent on (i) genito-urinary medicine and (ii) AIDS in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Freeman: This information is not held centrally and I cannot add to the reply that I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Salisbury on 12 January 1990 at columns 776-77.

Toxoplasmosis

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many pregnant women were tested for toxoplasmosis in 1989.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally.

Great Ormond Street Hospital

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the final cost of the work to make safe the cardiac block at Great Ormond Street Hospital for Sick Children;

(2) who bore the cost of the work to make safe the cardiac block at Great Ormond Street Hospital for Sick Children.

Mr. Freeman: The total works cost of the remedial works was £21·1 million. The cost of this work was borne centrally by the Department (70 per cent.) and by the University Grants Committee (30 per cent.). Litigation receipts of £8 million resulting from settlements in this case have been paid into the Consolidated Fund.

Correspondence

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to reply to the letter he has received from the hon. Member for Uxbridge dated 16 January concerning the case of Mr. W. A. Taylor.

Mr. Freeman: I have now written to my hon. Friend.

Residential Care (Bolton)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many elderly people were in residential care in the Bolton area in (a) local authority and (b) privately run homes in 1979 and 1989.

Mr. Freeman: Information for 1979 and 1988 is given in the table; information is not yet available for 31 March 1989.

Number of residents aged 65 and over in homes for the elderly and younger physically handicapped, Bolton

As at 31 March	Local authority homes	Registered private homes
1979	681	19
1988[1]	588	[2]500

[1] All 1988 figures are provisional.

[2] Includes 9 residents whose age was not known accommodated in homes primarily catering for elderly people.

Kuru and Creutzfeldt-Jakob Diseases

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the incidence in the United Kingdom in each of the last 10 years of reported cases of Kuru and Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease, respectively; and whether there is any explanation for changes in their incidence.

Mr. Freeman: Kuru does not occur in the United Kingdom; on Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease, I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Hodge Hill (Mr. Davis) on 2 February.

NHS Employees (Outside Interests)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a list of full-time National Health Service employees who are directors of, or who work for, companies operating in areas relating to their work in the National Health Service where there are opportunities for income generation.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidelines he has issued in addition to DHSS circular PM (79) 11 [November 1979], with its attached standard contract, to deal with the potential conflicts of interest where full-time National Health Service employees are involved as directors, shareholders, workers, or all three, in private companies operating in areas related to their work in the National Health Service where there are opportunities for income generation;

(2) whether he will issue guidelines to prevent full-time National Health Service employees being involved in any capacity in a private company operating in the same field as that in which they are employed in the National Health Service where there are opportunities for income generation.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Health authorities as employers are responsible for ensuring that their employees' private interests do not conflict with those of the authority. It is for them to decide how this is achieved. The model contract of employment which the Department has issued for health authority general managers includes a stipulation that the employee must declare to the authority any financial interest or relationship which may affect the authority's policies or decisions. We are considering whether further guidance is needed in this field.

Free Milk

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will list those local education authorities which have made an application under the Welfare Food Act 1988 for the provision of free milk for under-fives in local education authority nursery units and classes.

Mr. Freeman: The following 24 local education authorities have been approved (under the Welfare Food Regulations 1988) to participate in the scheme to receive reimbursement of costs for the supply of milk to children under five in nursery schools and classes:

Avon County Council
London Borough of Bexley
London Borough of Brent
Derbyshire County Council
Dudley Metropolitan Borough Council
Durham County Council
London Borough of Hounslow
Inner London Education Authority
Kirklees Metropolitan Council
Leicestershire County Council
Liverpool City Council
Manchester City Council
City of Newcastle upon Tyne
North Tyneside Council
North Yorkshire County Council
Oldham Metropolitan Borough Council
Rotherham Metropolitan Borough Council
St. Helens Metropolitan Borough Council
Sandwell Metropolitan Borough Council
Sheffield City Council
Solihull Metropolitan Borough Council
Staffordshire County Council
Wakefield Metropolitan District Council
Metropolitan Borough of Wirral

In addition, the following six local education authorities have indicated they will be applying for approval to participate in the scheme:

Birmingham City Council
Cambridgeshire County Council
Hereford and Worcester County Council
Oxfordshire County Council
Metropolitan District of Sefton
London Borough of Sutton

Family Practitioner Committees (Expenditure)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give, for the last year for which figures are available, the total for England and Wales and a breakdown for each family practitioner committee of (a) the number of general practice premises and (b) the amount directly reimbursed to unrestricted principals in general practice for the cost of providing premises under the rent and rates scheme.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 29 January 1990]: Information on the number of general practice premises is not collected centrally. Expenditure by family practitioner committees in England in 1988-89 on direct reimbursements to general medical practitioners under the rent and rates scheme is set out in the table. Information in relation to family practitioner services in Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Notes:

1. Payments under the rent and rates scheme comprise direct reimbursements for rent, rates, notional rent, cost rents and local authority economic rents applicable to surgery premises.

2. Expenditure figures based on FPC annual accounts prepared on an income and expenditure basis.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about the impact upon those engaged in milk distribution from the discounting of welfare milk tokens; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman [pursuant to his reply, 23 January 1990, column 682]: I regret that the reply contained an error.

The second sentence in the second paragraph should read:

"Milk Tokens will continue to be issued in respect of pregnant women and children under five in families receiving income support and to handicapped children aged five to 16 who, because of their handicap, are not registered at a school."

Residential Care

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to increase financial provision for residential care to cover fully the cost of such care.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 29 January 1990]: I have been asked to reply.

No. It has never been the policy of the Government to undertake to meet all fees, however high, charged by independent residential care homes.

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about the actual costs of residential care and the sums provided to cover such care.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 29 January 1990]: I have been asked to reply.

We receive a considerable number of representations from a variety of interested organisations and individuals.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Meat and Bone Meal

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total amount of meat and bone meal exported from the United Kingdom by the United Kingdom rendering industry for each of the last two years for which figures are available.

Mr. Curry: Exports of flours, meals and pellets, of meat or meat offal, greaves, for the last two years that figures are available are as follows:

	Tonnes
1987	12,299
1988	13,228

Note: Latest available data for 1989.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what European quality standards apply to the production of meat and bone meal.

Mr. Maclean: Standards for meat and bone meal are laid down in EC directives which are enacted in the United Kingdom by the Feedingstuffs Regulations 1988. These require that the product should be substantially free of hair, bristle, feathers, horn, hoof, skin and blood and of the contents of stomach and viscera; and technically free of organic solvents.

Agriculture Industry

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a table showing (a) the amount borrowed and (b) the consequent liability for interest of the agricultural industry in each year since 1978.

Mr. Curry: The figures are as follows:

	Total liabilities[1] in £ million at year end	Interest paid net of interest received[2] in £ million
1978	3,400	184
1979	4,150	318
1980	4,650	464
1981	5,400	468
1982	6,300	501

1987	8,550	637
1988	9,250	690
1989	not yet available	949 (forecast)

[1] Total liabilities include trade credit, most of which will not incur interest.

[2] Interest paid excludes interest paid on loans taken out for land purchase.

Bovine Somatotropin

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the study by the European Community Commission into the economic and social implications of the use of bovine somatotropin.

Mr. Maclean: The report (doc 8975/89) the Commission presented in October identified a number of issues which could arise were BST to be licensed and which it considered to need more study. The Commission has work in hand and a further report is expected this autumn.

Food Surpluses

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will raise at the next meeting of the Agriculture Council the sums being spent on the disposal of food surpluses.

Mr. Curry: My right hon. Friend is well aware of the considerable success the United Kingdom Government have had in bringing about reform of the common agricultural policy (CAP), in particular through the measures agreed in February 1988. These reforms are beginning to bear fruit. Surplus stocks are a fraction of what they have been; expenditure is well below the financial guideline. In negotiations in the Council of Ministers of the Commission's price proposals, we will be seeking to ensure that this progress towards a more rational and sustainable CAP is maintained.

Turkeys

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to protect the traditional farm fresh turkey sold unEviscerated.

Mr. Maclean: We have ensured that the EC Commission is in no doubt about the importance we attach to our right to permit farmers to market unEviscerated poultry. We shall oppose any proposal which might seek to prohibit this.

Pollution (Farms)

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what forms of assistance are available to farmers seeking to deal with on-farm pollution problems.

Mr. Curry: My Department offers a free initial visit to farmers by an ADAS expert and grants to meet 50 per cent. of the cost of new investment to handle, store and treat farm waste.

Basking Sharks

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total catch in United Kingdom waters of basking sharks in 1989.

Mr. Curry: There is no requirement on United Kingdom fishermen to report catches of basking sharks but these are thought to be minimal. Norway may take basking sharks in United Kingdom waters as part of the annual EC-Norway fisheries arrangements, but catches in 1987, 1988 and the first part of 1989 were nil.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has any proposals to control catches of basking sharks by issuing licences.

Mr. Curry: No. The data available indicate that there has been no decline in the stock in Community waters since 1978.

National Fruit Collection

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will play a co-ordinating role in relation to the responsibilities for science in relation to the decision to move the national fruit collection from Brogdale to Wye college.

Mr. Maclean: The arrangements for moving the national fruit collection to Wye college and for its subsequent maintenance there will be covered by a contract between the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the college. This will include any Ministry-funded scientific work in the collection. A small advisory group of independent scientists will oversee compliance with the contract. We see no need for further co-ordination.

Live Cattle Imports

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all those countries currently enforcing bans or partial bans on live cattle imports from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: Member states of the European Community, Australia, Austria, Finland, Israel, New Zealand, Sweden and the United States of America.

Non-governmental Organisations

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the meeting between non-governmental organisations represented by Tony Juniper, Peter Knights, Dave Currey, Peter Wilkinson, Karen Bradbury, Colin Booty and David Williams and officials of his Department on 30 January.

Mr. Maclean: Officials from my Department and the Department of the Environment had a useful exchange of views with these representatives on the trade in wild-caught birds and possible measures to reduce mortality among imported birds.

Lead-contaminated Feed

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to lift restrictions on the movement and sale of cattle affected by lead-contaminated feed; and what progress has been made in meeting compensation claims.

Mr. Maclean: I announced further measures on 1 February which will ease livestock restrictions. We shall continue our comprehensive research programme with a view to lifting all restrictions as quickly as possible, consistent with the need to ensure that the food chain remains fully protected.

There is no provision for statutory Government compensation in the event of incidents of this kind. The National Farmers Union is, however, advising its members on the subject of compensation.

Scrapie

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will prohibit the sale of meat for human consumption from sheep that are suspected of having scrapie.

Mr. Curry: No, because scrapie has been present in this country for at least two centuries without any evidence to suggest that it has been, or can be, a risk to humans. Nor has research over 20 years identified any such risk.

Sheep

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his Department's procedure to ensure that the Economic Community sheepmeat premium is paid annually in respect of eligible sheep.

Mr. Curry: The annual ewe premium provided for by the EC sheepmeat regime is paid annually to eligible claimants.

Food Irradiation

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any further representations concerning the irradiation of food.

Mr. Maclean: I receive letters about food irradiation as about other topical matters.

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a further statement on the Government's policy towards the irradiation of food.

Mr. Maclean: The Government are taking steps to permit the use of food irradiation as one additional measure in the comprehensive range of policies aimed at protecting public health through enhancing the safety of food. On obtaining the necessary powers, the Government would propose to introduce a licensing system with official monitoring by qualified inspectors. Comprehensive labelling provisions are also proposed that would leave consumers free to decide for themselves whether they wish to choose foods whose safety is protected by this process.

Milk

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has of the cost of the distribution of (a) welfare milk and (b) milk supplied to customers in general; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Milk prices were de-controlled at the beginning of 1985 and my Department no longer collects this type of information.

Animal Feedstuffs

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what United Kingdom regulations govern the declaration by manufacturers and wholesalers of ingredients on the labels of compound animal feedstuffs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: At present manufacturers of feedingstuffs must give detailed nutritional information such as protein, oil and fibre content and guarantee the safety of the finished feed. Manufacturers may also voluntarily declare the ingredients used. However, an amendment to the relevant EC directive was agreed at the Agriculture Council on 22 January, which will make it obligatory for ingredients to be shown in descending order of importance or in categories of similar ingredients.

Salmonella

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the risk of a pasteurised egg containing salmonella enteriditis.

Mr. Curry: It is not possible to pasteurise an egg.

Pasteurisation is applied in egg-processing plants to broken-out bulk liquid egg. Only a moderate heat treatment can be applied during the process, otherwise the functional properties of the liquid egg are destroyed. The risk of contamination remaining at the end of the process depends on the degree of contamination of the raw product prior to pasteurisation. This is why processing plants cannot accept raw product which is likely to be heavily contaminated.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Michael: To ask the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will outline his statutory responsibilities and those of his Department in relation to food poisoning.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 2 February 1990]: My statutory responsibilities in relation to food poisoning are set out in the Food Act 1984, the Animal Health Act 1981 and the Food and Environmental Protection Act 1985.

SCOTLAND

Toll-free Bridges

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the toll-free bridges built from public funds in the Highlands and Islands since 1965.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Since 1965, approximately 125 significant road bridges have been built from public funds in the Highlands and Islands. If the hon. Member would care to identify the type of bridge which interests him I should be pleased to provide him with a list.

Skye Toll Bridge

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the prospective designers and operators of a Skye toll bridge have so far been required to consult any environmental bodies before submitting plans and costs.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Skye bridge working group has already consulted the Royal Fine Art Commission for Scotland (RFACS) and is in touch also with the Countryside Commission for Scotland, the Nature Conservancy Council and the National Trust for Scotland. The views of these bodies will be conveyed to the three tenderers once they have been selected. The tenderers will be required to provide an environmental impact statement for each of their designs and, as usual, to give RFACS an opportunity to comment on their detailed designs before their tenders are formally submitted to the Scottish Development Department.

Communications Infrastructure

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the policy of his Department on the provision of future fixed link improvements in communications infrastructure being provided (a) from public funds and (b) by the private sector.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I assume the hon. Member's interest is in major roads and road bridges. We are committed to further improving the trunk road network in Scotland, and plan to increase public expenditure on new construction during 1990-91 by some 25 per cent. over the current year. As indicated in "New Roads by New Means", the financing of roads is no longer a matter solely for Government, however, and there will from time to time be ad hoc opportunities for privately financed schemes. The Scottish Development Department is willing to discuss with the private sector any such schemes which are brought forward.

Labour Clubs (Dundee)

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Tayside on progress on the criminal investigations arising out of alleged irregularities in the running of the Labour clubs in Ardler, Menzieshill and Whitfield, Dundee, commenced in November 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The investigation of crime is the responsibility of my noble Friend, the Lord Advocate.

The procurator fiscal at Dundee has reported regularly to Crown counsel on the progress of investigations by him and Tayside police.

Given that inquiries are not yet concluded it would not be appropriate for further details to be given at this time.

Doctors and Nurses

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will identify the number of doctors and nurses employed in Scotland (a) now and (b) in June 1979.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The information requested is shown in the table:

	1979	1989
Doctors	9,839	[1]10,833
Nurses	66,339	[2]75,213

[1] As at 30 September 1988.
[2] Provisional, as at 30 September 1989.

Sheep Farming

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask he Secretary of State for Scotland how many sheep farmers in each of the Scottish regions have 1,000 ewes or over; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is set out in the table:

Local Government Finance

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of the community charge table for each district council and regional council for 1989 and what it would have been if it had been uprated in line with inflation for the 1990-91 year.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is set out in the table. The 1989-90 charges have been uprated by the January RPI figure (7·7 per cent.).

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of local authority expenditure in 1990-91 he estimates will be met by community charge payers.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Until details of local authorities' budgets are available it is not possible to estimate what proportion of their expenditure in 1990-91 is to be met by community charge payers. The proportion indicated in budget returns for the current year is 21 per cent.

Private Rented Accommodation

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has made an estimate of the increase in central Government subsidy to housing benefit caused by private landlords who have failed to reduce their rents following the replacement of rates by the poll tax.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There has been no such increase.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will cause a study to be carried out on the number and proportion of private landlords who have not reduced rents following the abolition of rates; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Effective remedies are available to regulated tenants and assured tenants who believe their landlords are continuing to include an element for domestic rates in their rental charge. A study on the lines suggested would serve no useful purpose.

Hill Farms, East Kilbride

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the number of designated hill farms within the constituency of East Kilbride.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The number of agricultural holdings classified as less favoured within the constituency of East Kilbride is estimated to be 247. The figure is, however, approximate since parish boundaries (on which records of holdings are based) do not necessarily coincide exactly with constituency boundaries.

Lothian Health Board

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the name of the accountants instructed by the chief executive of the Scottish Health Service to examine the accounting methods of Lothian health board referred to in his reply to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, Central on 31 January.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: KPMG Peat Marwick McLintock.

Grant-aided Colleges

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many extra students there will be at the grant-aided Scottish colleges in each of the next five years;

(2) pursuant to his answer of 18 December 1989, whether he will now say how many students are and will be enrolled at each of the Scottish grant-aided colleges in the years 1989-90, 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Mr. Lang: As I stated in my written answer of 18 December 1989, Official Report, columns 50-51, projected student numbers will be set out in the Scottish commentary on public expenditure to 1992-93, which will be published shortly.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the three-year running cost settlements that have been provided for each of the Scottish grant-aided colleges; and how much extra money has been provided through fee income and for extra student numbers.

Mr. Lang: I shall announce allocations of grant-in-aid for 1990-91 shortly and provide colleges with provisional grant allocation figures for the following two years in due course. The colleges' tuition fee income will depend on the numbers of students enrolled and the levels of fee they charge.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were (a) the academic staff numbers and (b) the student numbers in each of the Scottish grant-aided colleges in each of the last five years.

Mr. Lang: The figures are given in the table:

	Academic staff[1,2]					Students[1]

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the total budgets for each of the Scottish grant-aided colleges in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Lang: The gross current expenditure in each of the colleges is set out in the table:

[1] Represents spending over 9 month period due to change in financial year.
[2] Figures include grant allocated under the switch to technology programme.
[3] Napier Polytechnic of Edinburgh and Glasgow College of Technology became central institutions on 1 September 1985.
[4] Leith Nautical College transferred to the local authority sector.
[5] College dissolved on 15 September 1981.
[6] Merged to form St. Andrew's College of Education on 15 September 1981.
[7] Includes funding for Jordanhill College School until 31 March 1987.
[8] Merged to form Northern College of Education on 1 April 1987.
[9] Merged with Moray House College of Education on 1 April 1987.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether it is his planned intention to raise the staff-student ratio beyond 11·5:1 in Scottish grant-aided colleges in future years.

Mr. Lang: I expect the overall student:staff ratio in the grant-aided colleges to reach 11·5:1 in session 1989-90. For the future I envisage that staff and student numbers will be a matter for the colleges themselves in keeping with their responsibility for achieving the best use of the resources available to them.

Self-governing Schools

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much he has budgeted for ballots, the preparation of formal proposals for self-governing status, and transitional and special purpose grants for schools which may become self-governing in 1990-91.

Mr. Lang: The provision to be made for this expenditure will be published in the Supply Estimates for 1990-91 to be laid before the House in the next few weeks.

Technology Academies

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how the £3·8 million budgeted for technology academies in 1988-89 was spent;

(2) whether any money was budgeted and spent on technology academies prior to 1987-88.

Mr. Lang: No provision for expenditure on technology academies was made in either 1987-88 or 1988-89. There is provision of £4·25 million for this purpose in the Estimates for the current financial year.

Education Expenditure

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) pursuant to his answer of 14 December 1989, Official Report, column 808, whether he will now say by how much his education budget will increase in cash and percentage terms in the years 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93, excluding the costs of student maintenance;

(2) pursuant to his answer of 14 December 1989, Official Report, column 808, whether he will now say how much money will be spent on student grants in Scotland in 1989-90, 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93;

(3) pursuant to his answer of 14 December 1989, Official Report, column 808, whether he will now say how much money will be spent on student loans in Scotland in 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93;

(4) pursuant to his answer of 18 December 1989, Official Report, column 53, if he can now say what his spending plans are for the postgraduate student allowance scheme for the years until 1992-93.

Mr. Lang: As stated in the answers I gave the hon. Member on 14 December 1989 at column 808 and 19 December at column 149, my detailed expenditure plans will be set out in the Scottish commentary on public expenditure to 1992-93 which will be published shortly.

Water Supply (Disconnections)

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the latest figures for the number of people who were disconnected from their water supplies in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not held centrally. A water authority (regional or islands council) would disconnect a domestic household's supply only for operational reasons. These would include repairing leaks, making connections and lining pipes.

Charing Cross Clinic

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will act to ensure that Greater Glasgow health board does not proceed with its plans to close Charing Cross clinic which provides a comprehensive range of alcohol and drug recovery services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The level and pattern of services to be provided for people with alcohol and drug problems is primarily a matter for health boards to determine in consultation with local authorities and the voluntary sector and in the light of their assessment of local needs and circumstances.

I understand that Greater Glasgow health board has issued a consultative document proposing the closure of Charing Cross clinic and relocation of the services provided there. The board will be considering the responses it receives to the consultation document. Thereafter, if the board wishes to proceed with the closure of the clinic, the approval of my right hon. and learned Friend will be required.

Steel Foundry, Bathgate

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the actions of the Scottish Office in relation to the North British steel foundry in Bathgate.

Mr. Lang: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman.

Roads, Ayrshire

Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland why the Government's expenditure plans, Cm 1015, include no reference to the £100 million road programme for the upgrading of Ayshire roads which he announced in July 1989.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I have taken the opportunity to give the hon. Member a full reply to this question in the letter I sent to him on Friday 2 February.

Nuclear Electricity

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to ensure that Scottish Power and Hydro-Electric enter into contracts with Scottish Nuclear Ltd. for the sale of nuclear electricity in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: Negotiations about the terms and conditions of the nuclear energy agreement are taking place.

Waiting Lists (Inverclyde)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is (a) the total waiting list, (b) the longest time any patient had to wait and (c) the numbers waiting by number of months' wait for the ear, nose and throat department at the Inverclyde royal hospital over the last four years for which figures are available.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 25 January 1990]: The information available is set out in the tables:

(a) In-patient waiting list at 31 March.

Year	Numbers on Waiting List
1986	358
1987	462
1988	[1]253
1989	[1]245

(b) Waiting time for those discharged during the year.

Year	Longest Waiting time (Months)	Mean Waiting Time (Months)[2]
1985	46·5	3·4
1986	36·8	2·8
1987	54·4	3·4
1988	55·5	3·4

(c) Number of people on the waiting list by time spent on the waiting list at 31 March[3]

	1988 Number	1989 Number
under 3 months	104	141
3 and under 6 months	50	33
6 and under 9 months	38	16
9 and under 12 months	25	26

	1988 Number	1989 Number
12 months and over	36	29
Total	253	245

[1] The altered statistical system on which these figures are collected is explained in ISD Statistical Bulletin 1/88.

[2] The figures in this column relate to admissions while those at Vol. 149 No. 6137 of the official report were confined to operations.

[3] The altered statistical system on which these figures are collected is explained in ISD Statistical Bulletin 1/88. The information is not available for earlier years.

Lothian Health Board

Mr. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what is the projected shortfall in the finances of Lothian health board for the current financial year; and if he will take any steps to supplement the board's finances in order to ensure the continuing provision of patient care;

(2) what are the terms of reference of the review that Mr. Don Cruickshank is to conduct into the financial crisis of Lothian health board; when he expects that review to be completed; and if he will publish Mr. Cruickshank's report.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 26 January 1990]: Lothian health board has indicated that its expenditure in 1989-90 will exceed its revenue allocation by some £9 million. However, the interests of patient care remain paramount and there is no question of crisis closures, or reductions in patient services as a result of the current financial difficulties.

An independent review initiated by the chief executive, NHS in Scotland has examined the board's financial management of its affairs.

Dangerous Animals

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has any plans for legislation concerning the control of dangerous animals, whether kept as domestic pets, or for guarding of premises.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 2 February 1990]: My right hon. and learned Friend has no such plans at present. There is already a considerable body of relevant legislation, including the Guard Dogs Act 1975, the Dangerous Wild Animals Act 1976 and certain provisions relating to dangerous and annoying creatures in the Civic Government (Scotland) Act 1982, which is currently under review. Most recently the Dangerous Dogs Act 1989 significantly enhanced the powers of the courts to deal with dog owners who fail to exercise proper control over their animals. These provisions, together with the judicious use of byelaws as advocated in our consultation paper, "Action on Dogs", offer considerable scope for more effective control of dangerous animals.

Trials (Delays)

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he has any plans to reform the organisation of Scottish courts to ensure that cases are no longer abandoned because of delays in convening a trial.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 2 February 1990]: No. The information available centrally indicates that less than 0·5 per cent. of all cases reported to procurators fiscal are not proceeded with due to court delays, predominately minor cases in the district courts.

Scottish Wildcats

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will bring forward legislation to ensure that Scottish wildcats are protected from extinction.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 2 February 1990]: The Scottish wildcat (Felis silvestris) was added to schedule 5 to the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 under the Variation of Schedules Order 1988. It is an offence intentionally to kill, injure or take any wild animal included in the schedule. Following an increase in recent years, the numbers of wildcats have stabilised.

Procurator Fiscal

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the number of cases requiring the services of the procurator fiscal coming before (a) the sheriff and district courts at Rothesay for the 12 months prior to 30 September 1988 and (b) the sheriff courts at Dunoon and Rothesay and the district courts at Dunoon, Rothesay and Inveraray for (i) the year ended 31 December 1988 and (ii) the year ended 31 December 1989.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 2 February 1990]: The figures are as follows:

	12 months prior to 30 September 1988	1988	1989
Rothesay Sheriff Court Cases	390	313	298
Rothesay District Court Cases	45	42	68
Dunoon Sheriff Court Cases		867	625
Dunoon District Court Cases		41	120
Inveraray District Court Cases		35	61

TRANSPORT

Highway Authorities

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list in the Official Report those highway authorities to which supplementary credit approval has been allocated for 1990-91, together with the size of the approvals and the purpose for which they are intended.

Mr. Atkins: The information requested is given in the table:

"IDA" means road schemes qualifying for grant under Section 13 of the Industrial Development Act 1982.

Bus Lanes

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to review the present regulation on bus lanes in London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: Decisions on bus lanes in London are primarily for London boroughs. Departmental advice published in circular 2/87 "Traffic Management Guidance in London", is that buses be given priority where benefits to passengers exceed the costs to other traffic. We are reviewing currently requirements for the signing of bus lanes and technical advice on implementation of bus priority measures more generally.

Buses

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many bus operators and how many miles of bus route there were in 1989; and what the figure was in 1985.

Mr. Portillo: These data are not available. However, local bus mileage outside London increased by 18 per cent. between 1985-86 and 1988-89, with 84 per cent. of the 1988-89 mileage being operated on a commercial basis.

London Transport (Sexual Attacks)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many sexual attacks have occurred on London Transport vehicles in each of the past three years; what action he is taking to stop these attacks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: The number of reported "sexual offences" on London Underground trains and stations in 1987, 1988 and 1989 were 334, 451 and 632 respectively. Figures for crimes on trains are not recorded separately. The category "sexual offences" covers a range of incidents from indecent exposure to rape. The British Transport police are now targeting this type of crime and detection rates have increased by 94 per cent. since 1988. In addition, a programme of passenger security measures is being introduced on the Underground, financed by £15 million Government grant. Crime against passengers on London buses is dealt with by the Metropolitan police and London Regional Transport does not maintain a central statistical record of such incidents. There has been no serious crime reported on the Docklands light railway since it opened in 1987.

London Underground (Escalators)

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many London Transport escalators have been out of service during the past two months.

Mr. Portillo: This is a matter for London Regional Transport. I am asking the chairman to write to my hon. Friend.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had about the co-ordination of entry clearance for individuals and luggage with the transport arrangements for travellers on the proposed Channel tunnel.

Mr. Portillo: For travellers on Eurotunnel shuttle trains, the concession agreement specifies juxtaposed frontier controls. All the formalities of both countries will be carried out at the terminal of departure.

For BR/SNCF trains going beyond London, the Channel Tunnel Act specifies on-train controls provided that satisfactory arrangements are made to provide facilities for the control authorities.

Discussions between the frontier control authorities, Eurotunnel and British Rail about the detailed arrangements appropriate to the Channel tunnel in these two cases are continuing.

For international trains to London, discussions between BR and the control authorities are under way and an announcement is expected shortly.

M1 (De-acceleration Lanes)

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if de-acceleration lanes will be provided on the M1 south bound at its junction with the M25.

Mr. Atkins: The layout of this junction will be examined by Hertfordshire county council under its design commission from the Department for the proposed widening of the M1 from junction 6a (M25) to junction 10 (Luton airport). This is one of the many new schemes announced in the White Paper, "Roads for Prosperity", published in May 1989.

Speed Limits

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to introduce legislation that will make it easier to introduce lower speed limits.

Mr. Atkins: Lower speed limits in suitable residential areas could have a significant effect in reducing road casualties, particularly among children. I am discussing with the local authority associations and the police guidelines for the establishment of 20mph zones and hope shortly to issue a consultative document. Action by local authorities on these lines will not require legislation.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his Department's policy with regard to the extension of existing 30mph speed limits commensurate with urban developments.

Mr. Atkins: Most urban developments have street lighting, where a 30mph limit automatically applies. It is open to local highway authorities to introduce a 30mph limit on their other roads if, in their view, that would enhance road safety.

Noise Insulation

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will amend existing noise insulation regulations to enable eligibility for insulation to be based on a noise criteria level alone.

Mr. Atkins: No. The cost of insulating all properties receiving a noise level at or above 68 dB(A)L10 18 hour would be prohibitive. It was estimated in 1983 that it would cost about £2 billion.

British Transport Police

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list (a) the national staffing levels for British Transport police and (b) the staffing levels for British Transport police for the West Yorkshire passenger transport authority area, for each year since 1979.

Mr. Portillo: The figures for national staffing levels for British Transport police officers and civilian staff are as follows:

Year	Police officers	Civilian staff	Total
1979	1,899	182	2,081
1980	1,948	186	2,134
1981	2,138	194	2,332
1982	2,128	196	2,324
1983	2,052	194	2,246
1984	1,961	186	2,147
1985	1,817	184	2,001
1986	1,834	186	2,020
1987	1,846	183	2,029
1988	1,830	194	2,024
1989	1,856	247	2,103

Note: The change in the total between 1983 and 1985 reflected the termination of policing arrangements between Associated British Ports and the BTP.

Data for officers engaged solely on policing the West Yorkshire passenger authority area are not available, but figures for officers stationed at Leeds and Bradford, involving an area which approximates to that of the PTA, are as follows:

Year	Police officers	Civilian staff	Total
1979	53	2	55
1980	51	2	53
1981	54	2	56
1982	50	2	52
1983	52	2	54
1984	51	2	53
1985	53	2	55
1986	56	2	58
1987	53	2	55
1988	52	2	54
1989	55	2	57

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take action to ensure that heavy goods vehicle licensing authorities must take into account deficiencies in the public highway system giving access to a proposed operating centre when determining applications for new licences.

Mr. Atkins: Responsibility for traffic and safety matters on the public highway rests with the appropriate highway authority. It would be wrong to confuse this with the functions of a licensing authority for goods vehicle operator licences.

Traffic, Wakefield

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action will be taken to reduce traffic congestion on roads within Wakefield metropolitan district during the proposed widening of the A1 in West Yorkshire.

Mr. Atkins: To minimise traffic delays on the A1 it is intended that two lanes of traffic in each direction will be maintained for most of the construction period associated with the widening works. In this way it is anticipated that conditions on other roads, including those in Wakefield metropolitan district, will be substantially unchanged.

M1-M62 Link

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what stage his proposal to build a new link between the M1 and M62 to the west of Leeds has now reached.

Mr. Atkins: Civil engineering consultants were commissioned on 1 February 1990 to investigate possible route alignments for this proposed new link road.

Road Deaths, Dorset

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the figures on road deaths in rural Dorset; and what assessment he has made of the extent to which there is a relationship between fatal road accidents and inadequate roads.

Mr. Atkins: Over the past five years, an average of 35 people have been killed each year on non built-up roads in Dorset. On average, 12 of these were on minor roads, the remainder on major roads.

The Department is very aware of the need for safe roads, and in January 1988 introduced a new skidding resistance standard for trunk roads. By providing the highest levels of skidding resistance where they are most needed, it is expected that 1,800 road casualties, including 75 fatalities, will be saved each year on trunk roads.

Local authorities have followed the Department's lead by incorporating the standard within their own code of good practice for highway maintenance.

Motor Insurers Bureau

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many complaints he has received about the operation of the Motor Insurers Bureau for each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will give his reasons for his decision to allow the Motor Insurers Bureau to be regulated by a voluntary agreement;

(3) if he will make a statement about the operation of the Motor Insurers Bureau;

(4) if he will review the voluntary agreement operated between his Department and the Motor Insurers Bureau; and if he will make a statement;

(5) what representations he has received about the operation of the Motor Insurers Bureau.

Mr. Atkins: The Motor Insurers Bureau provides a central fund to compensate accident victims of uninsured and untraced drivers. It carries out its obligations under the terms of its agreements with the Secretary of State. The agreements have been revised from time to time since the bureau was formed in 1946.

These arrangements have worked satisfactorily. Last year the bureau received some 15,000 applications under the agreements and paid some £28 million in compensation. The Department receives some 30 inquiries or representations a year about specific cases or the bureau's operations generally. Most of these originated from one firm of solicitors.

I have no plans to review the agreements.

Hunt Trespass

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many actions for trespass were initiated by British Transport police in 1989; and how many were against members of hunts;

(2) how many incidents of hunt trespass on British Rail property were reported to British Transport police in 1989; and what action was taken.

Mr. Portillo: This Department has no figures readily available. These are detailed matters for British Rail and the British Transport police.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he plans to take following the death of Mr. Joseph Cunningham, Master of the Cleveland Foxhounds, who was killed by a train on 25 January when trespassing on British Rail property; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: I naturally regret Mr. Cunningham's death. This will be subject to investigation at a coroner's inquest, and I will take note of any recommendations the coroner might have.

Ferry Road, Cardiff

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will authorise a public inquiry into the public safety, health, nuisance and amenity considerations pertaining to the proposed excavation of the controlled household refuse tip established at Ferry road, Cardiff, and its proposed transportation by rail.

Mr. Portillo: No. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 19 January. Environmental considerations are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether any of the owners of the land along the line of British Rail's preferred Channel tunnel rail link route are among the third parties to which he referred in his reply to the right hon. Member for Tonbridge and Malling of 16 January, Official Report, column 152.

Mr. Portillo: I had in mind the negotiations which will need to take place with Eurotunnel, SNCF and SNCB before the joint venture can be established.

Dock Workers

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has had any recent representations from any of the former dock labour scheme ports about reintroducing a workers' registration scheme; and if he will make a statement about employment at former scheme ports.

Mr. McLoughlin: We have had no such representations. There have been many changes in employment practices in former dock labour scheme ports, as overmanning, restrictive practices and rigid demarcations have been eliminated and numbers employed generally reduced, making the ports more efficient. Some shippers are now using their own employees to load and unload ships. Some former stevedoring firms have closed down, but some new ones have been started up.

Car Parking Signs

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what regulations govern the maximum size of public signs denoting car parking within cities, towns and villages; and if he will give details of the relevant dimensions.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 2 February 1990]: Car parking signs which are off the highway are subject to permission by local planning authorities under the Control of Advertisement Regulations. There is no legal limitation as to their size.

Car parking signs which are located within the highway are covered by the Road Traffic Regulations Act 1984 and the Traffic Signs Regulations and General Directions 1981. The traffic speed on a road will determine the height of the letters used on the sign. Practical considerations and the amount of information to be included will determine its overall size.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Community Care Grants

14. Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the level of spending on community care grants by the social fund in Leeds, West.

Mr. Scott: Information on local office social fund allocations and expenditure, including those for Leeds, West, is in the Library.

Pensioners (Income)

15. Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by how much pensioners' incomes from savings changed over the period (a) 1974 to 1979 and (b) 1979 to date.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given earlier today to my hon. Friends the Members for Uxbridge (Mr. Shersby) and for Gedling (Mr. Mitchell).

19. Mr. Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by how much pensioners' incomes from occupational pensions have risen since 1979.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: A measure of this Government's success is that between 1979 and 1986 pensioners received a 56 per cent. increase in income from their occupational pensions.

45. Sir Anthony Meyer: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average income of a retired couple with savings just sufficient to disqualify them from all means-tested benefit including housing benefit.

Mr. Scott: A wide range of factors are involved in calculating income-related benefits and I regret it is not possible to give a precise answer to the question. If my hon. Friend has a particular case in mind and cares to write to me I will respond.

50. Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by how much pensioners' incomes from occupational pensions have risen since 1979.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The latest available information shows that pensioners' average total net incomes increased by 23 per cent. in real terms between 1979 and 1986. This compares very favourably with the previous Government's record when, between 1974 and 1979, previous average total net incomes rose by only 3 per cent. Increases in income from occupational pensions have contributed considerably to this improvement. Pensioners had experienced a 56 per cent. increase in real terms in the level of their occupational pension during this Government's first seven years of office.

68. Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by how much pensioners' incomes from savings changed over the period (a) 1974 to 1979 and (b) 1979 to date.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The latest available information shows that pensioners' average total net incomes increased by 23 per cent. in real terms between 1979 and 1986. This compares very favourably with the previous Government's record when, between 1974 and 1979, previous average total net incomes rose by only 3 per cent. Increases in incomes from savings have contributed considerably to this improvement. In 1986 a total of 70 per cent. of pensioners had income from savings. These pensioners had seen the value of their savings income increase in real terms by 64 per cent. during this Government's first seven years of office, whereas under the previous Labour Government between 1974 and 1979 savings fell by 16 per cent.

Mr. Jack: To ask the the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the value of income support and housing benefit paid to pensioners whose sole income in 1989 was the state pension.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that the information requested for 1989 is not yet available. However, estimated expenditure in 1988-89 was £700 million for income support and £1,290 million for housing benefit. The housing benefit estimate includes retirement pensioners who were also receiving income support.

Homelessness

21. Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, if he has any plans to amend the benefit regulations covering homeless 16 and 17-year-olds

Mr. Scott: Our overall policy for young people remains correct and in the best interests of young people. As a result of the administrative improvements announced last November all young people are now interviewed about their claims and automatic consideration is given to the severe hardship provisions in every case where there is no entitlement under normal rules. In addition we are in the process of consulting voluntary groups about new instructions for our staff and the design of a leaflet for 16 and 17-year-olds.

Disability Benefits

22. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will make it his policy in any future review of disability benefits to consult disability organisations.

Mr. Scott: We are always willing to take account of comments made by organisations of and for disabled people in considering changes to benefits. Our proposals for major changes in the balance and structure of disability benefits have been made in the light of the views and comments of many organisations. And we shall continue to take into account the views of interested organisations in the course of our detailed work on the proposals, in particular the new disability allowance and the disabled employment credit.

47. Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a further statement on his proposals for disability benefits.

Mr. Scott: We have recently announced major proposals to improve social security help for people with disabilities. Our strategy is to improve the balance and structure of benefits for disabled people who are unable to work, in particular to do more for those disabled from birth or early in life, and to improve the help given to those disabled people who can and want to work. The changes we propose to make include a new disability allowance for people of working age and below to extend help with the extra costs of being disabled; a new disability employment credit to make it easier for disabled people to take up jobs; and an increase of up to £10 a week in severe disablement allowance. Our proposals will give extra help to some 850,000 people and their net effect will be to add, by 1993-94, some £300 million to the £8·3 billion that is currently spent on benefits for long-term sick and disabled people and their carers.

Disability Allowance

23. Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people he anticipates will benefit from the introduction of the disability allowance.

37. Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people he anticipates will benefit from the introduction of the disability allowance.

62. Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people he anticipates will benefit from the introduction of the disability allowance.

67. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people he anticipates will benefit from the introduction of the disability allowance.

Mr. Scott: We estimate that about 150,000 people will receive the new lower rate of the mobility component of the disability allowance and 140,000 people the new lower rate of the care component. We shall also be working to ensure that everyone who receives the disability allowance benefits from improved arrangements for the administration of the benefit.

Social Fund

24. Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he last reviewed the working of the social fund loan scheme.

38. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he last reviewed the working of the social fund loan scheme.

Mr. Scott: As I said earlier today in reply to the hon. Member for Moray (Mrs. Ewing), we continuously monitor the working of the social fund. Interest-free loans have proved to be an effective way of targeting the available money so as to help the greatest number of people. Indeed, the flexible way in which the social fund operates has enabled us to reallocate some of the money recovered from loans to help those offices coming under pressure.

Long-term Disablement

25. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by what proportion spending on benefits for long-term sick and disabled people has increased over the last decade; and how he anticipates recent announcements will affect such expenditure over the next three years.

Mr. Scott: The improvements in benefits for disabled people announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security on 10 January will result in increases in expenditure of an extra £88 million net in 1990-91; £141 million net in 1991-92; and £214 million net in 1992-93. This was on top of a real increase in spending on people who are long-term sick or disabled of nearly 100 per cent. over the last decade.

32. Sir Bernard Braine: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a further statement on the measures he is introducing to help long-term sick and disabled people who are disabled from birth or early in life.

55. Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a further statement on the measures he is introducing to help long-term sick and disabled people who are disabled from birth or early in life.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures he is introducing to help long-term sick and disabled people who are disabled from birth or early in life.

Mr. Scott: I refer my right hon. Friend and my hon. Friends to my answer earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Daventry (Mr. Boswell).

49. Mr. Gow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by what proportion spending on benefits for long-term sick and disabled people has increased over the last decade; and how he anticipates recent announcements will affect such expenditure over the next three years.

Mr. Scott: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Richmond, Yorks (Mr. Hague).

Pensions

26. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received concerning restoration of the link between earnings and retirement pensions; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have received a total of 1,941 representations between 11 January 1989 and 9 January 1990 on pensioners' incomes, the majority of which concerned the link with earnings. We have no plans to restore the link; the Government do not accept that uprating retirement pension in line with earnings is the key factor in improving pensioners' incomes. Between 1979 and 1986 pensioners' average total net income increased by 23 per cent. in real terms.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received on the future of small self-administered pension schemes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Hereford (Mr. Shepherd) on 20 December 1989 at column 304.

Young People (Accommodation)

27. Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what benefits are available for young people aged under 18 years who leave home to help them find accommodation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: Discretionary social fund crisis loans are available to young homeless people for rent in advance and essential items of furniture where this is the only means of avoiding a serious risk to the health and safety of the applicant. In addition young people likely to receive income support on leaving institutional, residential or local authority care are one of the priority groups for community care grants and may be eligible for start-up grants to help them to establish themselves in the community.

Income Support

28. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will launch an inquiry into the reasons why eligible claimants are not receiving income support.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have no plans to do so. If my hon. Friend has a particular case in mind perhaps he could write to me giving full details.

Social Fund

29. Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement about the refusal of loans to claimants without sufficient income by social fund officers.

Mr. Scott: The percentage of people whose applications for a social fund loan have been refused because of inability to repay is very low—1·2 per cent. of the decisions in the year 1989-90 to date. We do not consider that it would be helpful to allow people in these circumstances to put themselves further into debt. Money advice is offered in these cases.

41. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how the additional social fund allocations to individual local offices for 1989-90 were calculated.

Mr. Scott: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle) on 31 January 1990 at columns 194-95.

46. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of social fund expenditure for 1990-91 by (a) grants and (b) loans for London offices and the amount spent in the last full year for which single payments were applied.

Mr. Scott: Allocations to individual local offices are being considered and will be announced in due course. Details of single payment expenditure for 1987-88 are available in the Library.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the cash limit for social fund loans and grants from his Department's offices in Scotland for 1989-90 and the amount expended by 1 January in the current year.

Mr. Scott: Information about the national and regional social fund budget allocations for loans and grants and monthly levels of expenditure by region and local office is available in the Library.

Housing Benefit

30. Mr. Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many representations he received in 1989 about the operation of the current rules on housing benefit; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We receive correspondence on a range of issues, including housing benefit, both from hon. Members and their constituents. I regret that information is not available in the form requested.

Child Benefit

31. Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received on the level of child benefit; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have received a number of representations from hon. Members, organisations and individuals expressing a variety of views.

Disabled People

33. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received concerning the costs faced by people with disabilities other than care and mobility attendance costs.

Mr. Scott: We have received copies of the studies on the extra costs of disability carried out by the Disablement Income Group (DIG), the Royal National Institute for the Blind and the Spastics Society. The findings, based on a small number of case studies, suggested that extra costs incurred as a result of disability were higher than the averages found by the surveys of disability carried out by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys. In addition, we have received a number of letters from organisations representing visually impaired people concerning the level of extra costs incurred as a result of seeing disabilities.

34. Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures he is introducing to make it easier for disabled people to take up employment.

44. Mr. Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures he is introducing to make it easier for disabled people to take up employment.

72. Mr. Donald Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures he is introducing to make it easier for disabled people to take up employment.

74. Dame Jill Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures he is introducing to make it easier for disabled people to take up employment.

Mr. Scott: In October, we announced two measures to improve incentives to rehabilitation in employment: an increase of £6·50 in the therapeutic earnings limit in invalidity benefit and severe disablement allowance, and the extension of invalidity benefit and severe disablement allowance to people who undertake an employment rehabilitation course. In addition to these measures we plan to introduce, from April 1992, a disability employment credit which will help disabled people take up and return to employment by providing assistance with low earnings similar to that given to families through family credit. We estimate that about 50,000 people might be entitled to this new benefit.

Single Parent Families

35. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest figure he has for the number of single parent families in Britain in receipt of social security benefits.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Virtually all lone parent families receive child benefit, but many also receive other benefits. The table sets out the most recent information for the main income-related benefits and for one parent benefit.

Numbers receiving Social Security Benefits

	Number	Date
Income support[1]	722,000	May 1988
Family credit	120,000	September 1989
Housing benefit	650,000	May 1988
One parent benefit	696,000	January 1990

[1] Income Support: Figure does not include prisoners' partners.

Notes:

1. Number of lone parent families: OPCS estimates that in 1986 there were 1,010,000 lone parent families in Great Britain.
2. Claimants can be entitled to more than one benefit.

Retirement Age

36. Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he is taking to secure a common state retirement age for men and women.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Government are fully committed to the principle of equal treatment. We are currently considering the issue of equalising state pension ages. This is a complex issue requiring careful study. We will not make precipitate decisions.

Shelter

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has received any representations from Shelter; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have had no recent representations though we are aware of the Shelter report, "Hard Times", published last November.

Severe Weather Payments

40. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement about the current arrangements for severe weather payments.

Mr. Scott: Social fund cold weather payments are made for any seven-day period when the average temperature is 0 deg. Celsius or below.

In order to obtain information on temperature, each of the Department's local offices is linked to one of 62 national climatological message (NCM) stations around the country. The NCM stations used are broadly representative of the climate conditions in the main centres of population and are able to provide the necessary data speedily. These arrangements work well. In the two months to 31 December 1989, cold weather payments totalling £73,500 were made.

Community Charge

42. Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the amount in the proposed level of income support from April 1990 to take account of 20 per cent. of the average community charge.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Income support levels were adjusted in April last year to include help towards the average minimum contribution to the community charge that recipients would be expected to pay. The amounts included were £1·15 a week for single people aged 18 to 24, £1·30 a week for single people aged 25 or over and £2·30 a week for couples. These amounts now form part of the overall benefit levels which will be uprated from April this year.

Departmental Service

43. Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of recent improvements in the speed of service provided by his Department; and to what he attributes such improvements.

75. Mr. Richard Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of recent improvements in the speed of service provided by his Department; and to what he attributes such improvements.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Since the Government reforms were introduced in 1988, the social security system has become simpler for claimants to understand and easier for staff to operate. As a result there have been very real all-round improvements in standards of service to the public. In 1989-90 the average time taken to clear income support claims and the average time income support callers spend in our offices have both improved by 24 per cent. compared with average processing and waiting times before the reforms.

Funerals

48. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he has any plans to review the present arrangements concerning payment of grant towards the work of interment where the deceased person leaves a sum insufficient to meet these costs.

Mr. Scott: No.

Occupational Pensions

51. Mr. Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures are being introduced to increase the protection for members of occupational pension schemes.

52. Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures are being introduced to increase the protection for members of occupational pension schemes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: To improve benefit security for members of occupational pension schemes, we have brought forward four legislative proposals. First, we are strengthening the protection for early leavers that we introduced in 1985, by requiring schemes to revalue all future early leavers' preserved pension rights. Pension rights which go beyond the guaranteed minimum pension will be revalued in line with prices, up to a maximum of 5 per cent. a year. Secondly, where a pension scheme winds up, the same revaluation requirement is also to apply to future pensions and to pensions in payment. Thirdly, again on wind-up, any deficiency in a scheme's assets to meet scheme liabilities, including these new liabilities, is to become a debt on the employer. Fourthly, we are introducing a new ceiling on self-investment which will allow pension schemes to hold no more than 5 per cent. of their assets in the employer's business. This will not apply to small self-administered pension schemes where directors control the investment of their own pension savings.

To improve the range of help and advice available to individual pension scheme members, we are introducing a pensions ombudsman and improved tracing services—based on a register of pension schemes—to help individuals discover which company is responsible for pension rights acquired in previous employment. There will also be amendments to the disclosure regulations to improve information available to scheme members.

Computers

53. Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress has been made in the implementation of his Department's computerisation programme.

59. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress has been made in the implementation of his Department's computerisation programme.

61. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress has been made in the implementation of his Department's computerisation programme.

69. Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress has been made in the implementation of his Department's computerisation programme.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Department of Social Security's highly complex £1·7 billion strategy for the computerisation of the social security benefit payment system is proceeding as planned. The pilot exercise in 23 local offices has been completed and the systems are being introduced nationally office by office.

National Insurance

54. Mrs. Rosie Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to meet the shortfall projected for the national insurance fund in 1990; and whether the Government have any plans to consider the payment of national insurance as a financial contribution separate from general taxation.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The latest report by the Government Actuary shows the estimated balance in the national insurance fund at the end of the current financial year to be well above his minimum recommended level. His estimates also show the balance remaining at a satisfactory level during 1990-91 even though expenditure is expected to exceed income. The balance is declining but the Social Security Bill currently before Parliament contains measures which will help to maintain a prudent working balance in the fund in future years.

Although class 1 and class 4 national insurance contributions are generally collected by Inland Revenue together with PAYE income tax, they are paid into the national insurance fund and are not accounted for separately.

Married Women (Pensions)

56. Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will consider a payment of additional pension to married women who when working paid insurance contributions but do not receive any additional pension; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have no plans to change existing arrangements. Married women in employment who pay full rate national insurance contributions on earnings over the lower earnings limit (currently £43 a week) do contribute to the state earnings-related pension scheme and earn additional pension. Married women who have contracted out of the state earnings-related pension scheme contribute either to an occupational pension scheme or an appropriate personal pension. Those married women who continue to pay reduced rate national insurance contributions do not contribute to the state earnings-related pension scheme.

Private Nursing Homes

57. Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what research his Department has carried out into the extent to which it is possible to provide nursing care for the elderly in private homes within the amounts allowed in income support.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: As part of the Department's annual review of income support limits for people in independent residential care homes and nursing homes, many interested individuals and organisations submit evidence on costs and charges in such homes which we take into consideration along with other information available from the Department's own sources. The Department has commissioned a number of studies into this area, the best known of which was by Ernst and Whinney, published in 1986 and revised in 1987.

Elderly People

58. Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the Government's record of support for elderly people; and what is the comparable position in other European Community countries.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that it is not possible to provide comparisons between European Community countries because of widely differing pension arrangements. For example, earnings-related pensions in other member states are normally based on an individual's own earnings, which means that low earners receive low pensions. In the United Kingdom an individual who contributes to the state earnings-related pension scheme has his or her entitlement revalued in line with average earnings. The United Kingdom is unique among European Community countries in paying a pension to a woman based on her husband's contributions and a dependency addition for a wife under 60 years of age. In France and West Germany, percentage deductions are made from pensions as contributions to state health care; whereas in the United Kingdom no such deductions are made. I am pleased to provide the following comments on the Government's record of support for elderly people.

The Government have always attached the highest priority to the interests and needs of elderly people, and will continue to do so. We would particularly point to the improving economic circumstances of pensioners brought about by the wide range of successful Government policies aimed at creating a stable economic environment.

This success led to an increase in average pensioners' total net income of 23 per cent. in real terms between 1979 and 1986. The increases during the same period of the value of income from savings of 64 per cent. and occupational pensions of 56 per cent. are particularly encouraging. This demonstrates the vital importance to elderly people of the economic policies that the Government have pursued, and will continue to pursue. We think it fair to say that the elderly are not an homogeneous group with wholly common interests and circumstances and our policies recognise this. For example, we are conscious that not all pensioners have benefited from sources of incomes other than their state pension. In recognition of that the package of measures introduced last October directed an extra £200 million towards 2·6 million individuals in greatest need—the less well-off, elderly and disabled pensioners on income support and housing benefit. However, many people wish to continue in work beyond pension age and the abolition of the retirement pension earnings rule, also last October, allows them the freedom to choose to do so and receive their pension.

In addition, many pensioners may benefit from the changes to personal taxation to be made from this coming April

These are, we believe, all good examples of the sound policies which have enabled pensioners to share in the increased wealth of the nation.

Finally, the depth of our commitment may be measured by the levels of spending on the provision of benefits and services for the elderly; spending on social security benefit rose by 24 per cent. in real terms between 1979 and 1989-90; spending on health services for the elderly rose by 29 per cent. between 1978 and 1987 and spending on social services for the elderly rose by 21 per cent. between the same dates. This Government are committed to continuing to look after the interests of elderly people.

Maintenance

60. Dame Peggy Fenner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to bring forward proposals resulting from his review of the maintenance system.

65. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to bring forward proposals to impose tighter controls on the payment of maintenance by divorced and separated fathers.

70. Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to bring forward proposals resulting from his review of the maintenance system.

73. Mr. Stanbrook: To ask the Secretary of of State for Social Security when he expects to bring forward proposals resulting from his review of the maintenance system.

Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to bring forward proposals resulting from his review of the maintenance system.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Government are very concerned about the number of lone parent families on benefit who receive little or no maintenance. This situation is certainly not unique to the United Kingdom and we are examining systems operating abroad to see if there are any lessons for us there. In addition, the survey which we are setting in hand with my noble and learned Friends the Lord Chancellor and Lord Advocate and my right hon. and learned Friends the Home Secretary and the Secretary of State for Scotland will provide full and up-to-date information about the effectiveness of the current maintenance system. This will then give us a sound and firm base for setting the way forward.

Approximately 12,000 cases will be examined in a sample of courts and DSS local offices to gather data on the amounts of maintenance which courts order absent parents to pay, what is actually paid and when, details of the absent and custodial parents' means, and the cost of the current system in terms of court costs, DSS staff costs and benefit spending. Information taken from individual cases will be treated in full confidence in the normal way as for any research. The survey, which will first be piloted, will be completed in the summer. We certainly intend to act as quickly as possible to improve maintenance arrangements. What we do and when will depend on the results of the survey, and if radical reforms are indicated we would want to consult widely.

In the meantime, as we announced last week, we are taking action to improve the maintenance collected under the existing system. In 1988-89 the DSS recovered £155 million from absent parents. In 1989-90 the target is £180 million and we look set to achieve it. From next year, we expect to increase that figure to over £200 million by changing our procedures. We intend to strengthen the basis on which local offices assess absent parents' ability to pay maintenance. At present we do not expect the maintenance paid to reduce an absent parent's income below, in broad terms, income support level plus full housing costs plus 25 per cent. of net earnings. We are reducing that 25 per cent. margin to 15 per cent. Where a reasonable agreement cannot be reached the final decision on the amount payable will rest, as it does now, with the courts.

Family Credit

63. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the outcome of his Department's advertising campaign to increase the uptake of family credit.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The first stage of the campaign in spring 1989 was a considerable success. Over the nine weeks during which TV adverts were shown over a quarter of a million family credit claims were received, about twice as many as in the nine weeks beforehand. Independent research carried out before and after the advertising showed a marked increase in awareness of family credit, with prompted awareness increased to 87 per cent., and in comprehension which demonstrated that the advertising had been successful in correcting misconceptions concerning some aspects of eligibility.

By the end of September 1989 the caseload had risen to around 320,000 compared with about 280,000 before the advertising began.

Further TV and press advertising began in November 1989 and the weekly level of claims since then is averaging more than 40 per cent. above the level at the same time in the previous year. Further research is taking place on awareness and comprehension levels but the results are not yet available. The effect on the caseload will not be known until all the claims received since the further advertising began have been dealt with.

Since April 1989, when the publicity first began, well over 800,000 claims have been received and about 520,000 of these have been new claims rather than existing recipients renewing their award. Nearly half a million awards have been made altogether and, currently, approaching 65 per cent. of all claims are successful.

Estimates of the effect on the percentage take-up level cannot be made until information becomes available from the 1989 family expenditure survey about the total eligible population in that year.

Young People (Income Support)

64. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he has any plans to provide income support to those aged 16 to 17 years who are unable to gain employment or a vacancy on YTS through no fault of their own.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: There is no need for a young person aged 16 to 17 to be without money. Young people have the positive options of remaining in education, getting a job or joining the YTS. If they are unable to obtain employment then the offer of a YTS place is guaranteed. There are sufficient YTS places throughout the country for all who want one.

Income support is available to vulnerable groups, such as lone parents and the disabled. There is also the discretionary provision which enables income support to be paid in cases of severe hardship.

We continue to monitor the situation. The legislative changes introduced in July 1989 and the administrative improvements announced in November demonstrate our willingness to respond when a need arises, as did my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's undertaking to the Social Services Committee on 31 January to look at the way the system works for young women who are pregnant.

Fuel Charges

66. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what discussions or representations he has had with pensioners' organisations regarding the level of fuel charges; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I am not aware of any recent discussions or representations on this subject.

Departmental Expenditure

71. Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest estimate of total expenditure by his Department for 1989-90.

Mr. Scott: As announced in the Autumn Statement, total DSS expenditure in 1989-90 is estimated to be £52·6 billion. Further details are given in chapter 14 of the public expenditure White Paper (Cm. 1014) published on 30 January 1990.

Residential Care

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the procedures adopted by his Department to ensure that the element in the allowance for people in residential and nursing care which is earmarked for pocket money is controlled by the claimant.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle) on 30 January at column 123.

Vibration White Finger

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will initiate a general review of benefit claims for the industrial disease vibration white finger to identify those where disablement benefit has been wrongly refused; and if he will ensure each claim is met in full.

Mr. Scott: No. Decisions on claims and how much is payable are made by independent adjudication officers. Claimants have a right to appeal against, or to a review of, those decisions.

Correspondence

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth will receive a definitive response to his letter of 3 October 1989 referring to Mrs. D. I. Allen, following the receipt of an interim reply dated 26 October 1989.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: My noble Friend Lord Henley replied to my hon. Friend's letter today.

Benefits

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people received social security benefits in each year from 1979 to the latest date available; and what was the percentage increase from 1979 in each case.

Mr. Scott: I regret that information in the form requested is not available and an estimate could be provided only at disproportionate cost, as information on numbers receiving benefit is collected separately for each benefit, and claimants may receive more than one benefit at any one time. An estimate of the numbers of claimants receiving each of the main benefits for the years 1978-79 to 1988-89, and the percentage increase since 1979, are shown in the table.

[1] Source: Public Expenditure White Papers 1984-1990.

[2] Beneficiaries may be receiving more than one benefit at any one time.

[3] Includes housing benefit supplement recipients (some 440,000 in 1987-88) who are also included in the figures for housing benefit recipients.

[4] Numbers of children in families receiving child benefit, including those also receiving one parent benefit.

[5] Figures up to 1981-82 relate only to the rebate and allowance scheme for those not receiving supplementary benefit. Thereafter the figures reflect the partial introduction of the housing benefit scheme from November 1982 and full start in November 1983.

[6] There is a significant overlap: most households getting help with rent also receive a rate rebate.

[7] * denotes the first year of a new benefit. Percentage increases in subsequent years are increases since the first year.

Homes for the Elderly

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will meet representatives of the Royal United Kingdom Beneficient Association to discuss Government grants for nursing and rest homes for the elderly.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: As I indicated to my hon. Friend on 24 January at columns 1024-32, on behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, I am happy to meet him and representatives of RUKBA in the near future about social security issues for elderly people in homes.

Disability Employment Credit

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give details of the research on which his Department bases its estimate that 50,000 people might be entitled to the proposed disability employment credit, and that the gross cost of the new benefit would be some £80 million.

Mr. Scott: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Moray (Mrs. Ewing) on 26 January at column 908.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the guidelines which will be issued to medical staff assessing the capacity for work of claimants under the proposed disability employment credit system.

Mr. Scott: We propose that entitlement to a disability employment credit will be subject to periodic medical evidence of partial capacity for work. We are considering the precise way in which the scheme will operate.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if his proposals for a disability employment credit will benefit people who are able to work only two or three days a week.

Mr. Scott: Our proposals for a disability employment credit envisage that the benefit will be available to disabled people who are able to work only part time or who may not be able to work at full capacity. We are considering the precise way in which the scheme will operate.

Family Incomes

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Peckham (Ms. Harman) of 15 December 1989, Official Report, columns 855-56, if he will publish the equivalent scales used for calculation of the equivalent incomes with (a) a married couple and (b) a single person as the reference point.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 1 February 1990]: The information is held in the tables. These equivalence scales are the same as those used in "Households Below Average Income".

(i) Taking married couples as the reference point

	Equivalence value
(1) If head of the household is married
Number of additional adults in the household
0	1.00
1	1·42
2	1.78
More than 2 where number of adults = n	1·78 + (0·361
(2) If head of the household is single
Number of additional adults in the household
0	0.61
1	1·07
2	1.49
More than 2 where number of adults = n	1·49 + (0·361
(3) Total number of children in household
Age of child
<2	0·09
2-4	0·18
5-7	0·21
8-10	0·23
11-12	0·25
13-15	0·27
>15	0·36

(The value is multiplied by the number of children in the age band.)

[1] The total values, when added together, give the total equivalence scale for each family. This will always be the total of (1) or (2) plus (3). For example, a married couple with two children aged 9 and 11 would have an equivalence scale of (1.00 + 0·23 + 0·25) = 1·48.

(ii) Taking single person as the reference point

	Equivalence value
(1) If head of the household is single
Number of additional adults in the household
0	1·00
1	1·75
2	2·44
more than 2 where number of adults = n	2·44 + (0·591
(2) If head of the household is married
Number of additional adults in household
0	1·64
1	2·33
2	2·92
more than 2 where number of adults = n	2·92 + (0·591
(3) Total number of children in household
Age of child
< 2	0·15
2-4	0·30
5-7	0·34
8-10	0·38
11-12	0·41
13-15	0·44
> 15	0·59

The value is multiplied by the number of children in the age band.

[1] The total values, when added together, give the total equivalence scale for each family. This will always be the total of (1) or (2) plus (3). For example, a married couple with two children aged 9 and 11 would have an equivalence scale of (1·64 + 0·38 + 0·41) = 2·43.

CIVIL SERVICE

Parking

Mr. Jack: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what guidance he issues to Government Departments on the provision of sufficient on-site car parking places for civil servants.

Mr. Luce: The provision of on-site car parking places for civil servants is a matter for individual Departments. Central guidance is not issued by my Department.

Trade Unions

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what recent representations he has received from the Civil Service trade unions on their wider obligations to the Crown in Parliament.

Mr. Luce: In the course of discussions about the revision of the Civil Service pay and conditions of service code to take account of the Official Secrets Act 1989, the unions expressed reservations about the implications of a passage in the revision which follows the note by the former head of the home Civil Service on the duties and responsibilities of civil servants in relation to Ministers (the Armstrong memorandum) in describing the constitutional position of civil servants in relation to Ministers. This is one of a number of issues to be discussed at a meeting which has been arranged between the Civil Service unions and the head of the home Civil Service.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

COCOM

124. Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's response to the recent Western European Union report on COCOM Doc. 1207.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer my hon. Friend to the written answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 15 December to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Dr. Thomas).

Lebanon

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 29 November 1989, to the hon. Member for St. Helens, North, Official Report, columns 328-29, if he will state what he regards as (a) substantive and (b) non-substantive concessions to the hostage holders in the Lebanon, in the development of policy to seek the release of the British hostages; and what non-substantive concessions he is (i) prepared to make or (ii) has already made.

Mr. Waldegrave: Our policy of no substantive concessions precludes the payment of ransoms. It does not, of course, preclude contacts with those Governments, organisations or individuals who may be able to help secure the release of the British hostages. It would not be helpful to elaborate further.

Extradition

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will now obtain and place in the Library copies of all communications between the then high commissioner in Malaysia, Mr. D. H. Gilmore CMG, and the then governor of Hong Kong, the late Sir Edward Youde, which occurred between 30 November 1985 and 1 June 1987, on the subject of the request, from the then governor of Hong Kong, to his Department for the extradition of Lorrain Osman and Dato Hashim Shamsuddin;

(2) if he will now place in the Library all communications between the then high commissioner in Malaysia, Mr. D. H. Gilmore CMG and his Department which occurred between 30 November 1985 and 1 June 1987, on the subject of the request, from the then governor of Hong Kong, the late Sir Edward Youde, to his Department for the extradition of Lorrain Osman and Dato Hashim Shamsuddin;

(3) if he will now place in the Library all communications between the then governor of Hong Kong, the late Sir Edward Youde, and his Department which occurred between 30 November 1985 and 1 June 1987, on the subject of the request from the then governor of Hong Kong to his Department for the extradition of Lorrain Osman and Dato Hashim Shamsuddin.

Mr. Waldegrave: This matter remains sub judice. I have nothing to add to the answer given to the hon. Gentleman by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 1 December at column 456.

Immigration

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) when a decision is going to be taken on the application made by Mr. Liaqat Hussain, who was born in 1965, Ref: IMM/98735, to the post in Islamabad to join his wife in the United Kingdom; and when Mr. Hussain was interviewed at the post;

(2) if he has arranged for the post in Islamabad to issue a passport to Mr. Abdul Waheed, whose date of birth is 5 February 1964, Ref: IMM/87378; TH/4335/89; when instructions were issued to the post to issue entry clearance to Mr. Waheed; and when Mr. Waheed is going to be issued with a visa to enter the United Kingdom.

Mr. Waldegrave: In accordance with the guidelines on the handling of representations by Members of Parliament in immigration cases, issued to Members on 14 December 1988, I have referred the questions to the correspondence unit of the migration and visa department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The hon. Member will receive replies from the unit as soon as possible.

Human Rights

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he intends to take to ensure that the issue of human rights violations by China is raised at the forthcoming United Nations human rights commission.

Mr. Waldegrave: With our European Community partners, we have already raised our concerns about human rights violations in China at the current session of the commission on human rights. On 2 February, the presidency statement at the commission called upon the Chinese authorities to guarantee full respect of the human rights of their citizens throughout China including Tibet.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Government will ratify the second optional protocol to the international covenant on civil and political rights.

Mr. Waldegrave: Successive British Governments have taken the view that the decision whether or not to abolish or to reintroduce the death penalty should be left to individual Members of Parliament voting according to their own judgment. Accordingly, we will not take on an international obligation on the abolition of the death penalty.

Nuclear Non-proliferation

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has had any recent meeting with the director of the programme for promoting nuclear non-proliferation; and whether he plans any future meetings with this organisation.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 2 February 1990]: No. However officials of this Department have had meetings with this organisation.

Kashmir

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he is taking to honour the United Nations resolution of 1947 guaranteeing a plebiscite on self-determination for the people of Kashmir.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 2 February 1990]: None. Britain voted in favour of the various UN resolutions on Kashmir. Much has happened since, including the 1972 Simla agreement on bilateral relations between India and Pakistan. We believe that the status of Kashmir can be settled only by agreement between the two sides.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what involvement he has with Commonwealth nations in trying to resolve the demands for self-determination for the people of Kashmir.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 2 February 1990]: We have received representations both from India and from Pakistan on the issue of Kashmir. We believe the status of Kashmir can be settled only by agreement between those two Commonwealth nations.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of India regarding the growing violence in Kashmir.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 2 February 1990]: In our recent contacts with both the Indian and Pakistan Governments we have noted that the situation in Kashmir is obviously of great concern to both, and expressed the hope that they would be able to reach a peaceful settlement of the issues involved.

THE ARTS

Art Education Institutes

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Minister for the Arts how many art education institutes he has visited in the last three years; if he will list them; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: In the last three years, I have visited the Portsmouth college of art and design and the Bournemouth and Poole college of art and design. I have been impressed by the work I have seen there and at other art education institutes which I have visited previously. Such institutes are the responsibility of the Secretary of State for Education and Science.

British Library

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Minister for the Arts, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Caithness and Sutherland of 25 January, Official Report, column 797, what consideration he gave to the letter dated 10 July 1989 from the director of the oriental collections and the India Office library and records, in reaching his decision to support the conclusions of the British Library Board.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 5 February 1990]: I noted the contents of the letter from the director responsible for the British Library's oriental collections and India Office library and records. Decisions on the best use of the British Library's resources and the location of its collections are, however, for the British Library Board to make. I am confident that in making these decisions the board takes account of the advice of the library's managers.

National Heritage

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister for the Arts what has been the annual grant to the national heritage memorial fund from his office in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and what is the budget figure for 1989-90 and the estimates to 1992-93.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 5 February 1990]: The grants which my office has provided, or plans to provide, to the national heritage memorial fund are as follows:

	£ million
1984-85	4·0
1985-86	1·5
1986-87	1·5
1987-88	1·5
1988-89	1·5
1989-90	1·5
1990-91	1·5
1991-92	1·5
1992-93	1·5

The Department of the Environment provides an equal amount of grant in aid to the fund.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Payroll Tax

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consideration he has given to the implementation of a payroll tax similar to that in the United States of America.

Mr. Lilley: The hon. Member would not expect me to comment on tax proposals in the run-up to the Budget.

Age Allowance

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are his estimates of the net changes in income to the Exchequer which will follow the introduction of the new rules whereby the age allowance and income limit applies to each person rather than as an allowance to a couple.

Mr. Lilley: When independent taxation is introduced in 1990-91, the cost of giving separate age-related allowances and aged income limits to individuals, rather than giving one such allowance to appropriate married couples, is estimated to be about £25 million in a full year. Aged couples will also gain about £340 million from disaggregating the wife's category B pension and wife's investment income. These estimates are based on a projection of the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes and are provisional.

Beer

Mr. Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost advantage per 50 cl can over beer brewed in the United Kingdom of beer brewed in (a) France, (b) the Netherlands and (c) West Germany provided by their present excise duty and value added tax rates.

Mr. Ryder: Rates of excise duties and VAT on a 50 cl can of beer in France, the Netherlands, West Germany and the United Kingdom, according to the latest information available, are set out in the table:

Country	Excise duty (pence per 50 cl can)	VAT rate
		Percentage
France	¼ p	18·6
Netherlands	6 p	18·5
West Germany	3 p	14
United Kingdom	17 p	15

Rates of exchange as at 31 January 1990.
Source: EC Excise Duty Tables.

Mr. Lawrence: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether consideration is being given to the harmonisation of beer excise duties with other European Community countries before 1992.

Mr. Ryder: In January 1990, the Commission put forward revised excise duty rate proposals for alcoholic products. To date, there has been no discussion of these revised proposals. The United Kingdom view remains that centrally determined approximation of excise duty rates is neither necessary nor appropriate to achieve the single market. As changes to excise duties law require unanimous agreement, the United Kingdom's position is safeguarded.

Share Ownership

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement on the numbers of new shareholders since 1979; and whether he intends to promote measures to further encourage the growth of individual share ownership.

Mr. Lilley: The joint Treasury and stock exchange survey carried out in January and February 1989 estimated that approximately 9 million people own shares directly, 20 per cent. of the adult population—a threefold increase since 1979.

Privatisation

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what he estimates privatisation revenue will be in 1989-90.

Mr. Lilley: The latest estimate of net privatisation proceeds in 1989-90 is £4¼ billion.

New Coins

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has any plans to introduce new 1p and 2p coins.

Mr. Ryder: Increases in the world price of base and non-ferrous metals have meant that the cost of producing United Kingdom 1p and 2p coins in bronze now exceeds their face value. The Master of the Mint is therefore considering proposals to replace the present bronze coins with coins made of copper-plated steel. The plated coins would have the same weight and diameter as the existing bronze coins but would be very slightly thicker. The new coins would circulate with the existing bronze coins.

The Royal Mint has begun preliminary discussions with representatives of the vending industry, who are the only people likely to be affected by the difference in specification. The Mint will now contact representatives of the blind and disabled and other interested parties, mainly to reassure them that there would be no noticeable change in the size or feel of the coins.

No final decision has been made about when the coins would be introduced. It would not be before 1991 at the earliest. If and when a date is set, it will be announced in the usual way.

Debt

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the level of (a) individual, (b) corporate and (c) public debt in (i) 1979 and (ii) 1989; and what he estimates is the proportion of this debt which accrued to the Treasury in the form of revenues.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 5 February 1990]: The table gives the net financial wealth of the personal and company sectors, and net public sector debt:

£ billion

	end-1979	end-1988
Personal sector	170·6	578·9
Company sector	−87·7	−357·3
Public sector	−102·1	−158·5

Notes:—Positive numbers indicate net wealth, negative numbers indicate net debt.
For public sector, figures refer to end of March 1980 and end of March 1989.

It is not clear what relationship between sectoral debt and Government revenues the hon. Member has in mind in the second part of the question.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Strangeways Prison

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what purpose is served by the chimney integral to Strangeways prison, Manchester; and whether he will consider its demolition.

Mr. Mellor: The chimney at Strangeways prison, Manchester is a ventilation shaft forming an integral part of the plenum system which provides heating and ventilation to the cell blocks. It has been working satisfactorily for over 100 years and seems likely to continue to do so for some time to come. There are no plans to demolish it and I would see no point in considering such an action unless its condition should deteriorate to such a degree that it becomes a safety hazard.

Horse Race Totalisator Board

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce the transfer of the Horse Race Totalisator Board to the private sector.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Advice from Lloyds merchant bank on the feasibility of privatising the Tote remains under consideration and the Government's conclusions will be made known in due course.

Hoax Alarm Calls

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many firemen in the past 10 years have been killed; and how many have been injured whilst responding to hoax alarm telephone calls.

Mr. John Patten: Between 1980 and 1989 fire brigades in England and Wales reported that 12 firefighters had been killed in the course of duty as a result of road traffic accidents. It is not possible to determine from the information available whether or not any of the firefighters were killed while responding to hoax alarm calls. Comparable information on the number of firefighters injured is not available.

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many members of the general public in the past 10 years have been killed; and how many have been injured by vehicles of the emergency services whilst responding to hoax alarm telephone calls.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: This information is not held centrally.

Guildford Pub Bombings

Sir David Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Surrey as to the measures being taken to apprehend the persons guilty of the Guildford pub bombings.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Hayes and Harlington (Mr. Dicks) on 4 December 1989 at column 75.

Drugs

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to publish the agenda for the international conference to be held this year in London concerning drugs.

Mr. Mellor: I am placing in the Library a paper giving details including the outline programme of the world ministerial summit to reduce the demand for drugs and to combat the cocaine threat.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who has been invited to the international conference on drugs to be held in London this year.

Mr. Mellor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Waveney (Mr. Porter) on 25 January 1990 at column 870.

Shotguns

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many shotguns and semi-automatic shotguns that would become section 1 firearms from 1 February have been proofed by either the London or Birmingham proof houses, following their conversion under the terms of the Firearms Act 1988, to remain as shotguns.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the masters of the proof houses that approximately 33,000 adapted smooth[illegible] guns have been certified by the proof houses so as to enable the guns to be retained on a shotgun certificate; 21,000 of these were dealt with in Birmingham and the remainder in London.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a table in the Official Report to show how many applications have been made to each chief constable of police for shotguns which have now under the terms of the Firearms Act 1988 become section 1 firearms to be held on firearms certificates; and how many such applications have been (a) granted, (b) refused and (c) withdrawn by the applicant.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to ensure that all chief officers of police have notified all shotgun certificate holders individually prior to 1 February 1990 of the changes in the law under the Firearms Act 1988 with regard to semi-automatic and pump-action shotguns that they have converted and reproofed or the owner makes an application for the shotgun to be held on a firearms certificate.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: In January Home Office officials invited the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) to remind certificate holders about the end of 31 January 1990 of the seven- month transitional period in which to comply with the new controls. I understand that ACPO has advised chief officers accordingly. But it is for certificate holders to ensure their compliance with the law.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) further to his answer of 31 January to the hon. Member for Londonderry, East, if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Gwent as to the date on which the shotgun, the property of Mr. G. W. Phillips, was taken by PC 853 Fairie; on what date it was entered by PC Fairie into police station records; and on what date it was transferred to Newport police headquarters and by whom;

(2) further to his reply to the hon. Member for Londonderry, East, on 31 January, if he will call for and place in the Library a report from the chief constable of Gwent covering the report compiled by PC 853 Fairie into the shotgun renewal application of Mr. G. W. Phillips;

(3) if, further to his answer of 31 January to the hon. Member for Londonderry, East, he will call for a report from the chief constable of Gwent as to which police officer laid evidence before the office manager, firearms administration, that the shotgun, the property of Mr. G. W. Phillips, was given into the possession of Mr. P. Stokes;

(4) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Gwent as to who was requested by Mr. G. W. Phillips to hand the shotgun belonging to Mr. Phillips to Mr. P. Stokes;

(5) if he will call for a report from the chief constable of Gwent as to which police officers, by rank, countersigned the report of PC 853 Fairie into the renewal application by Mr. G. W. Phillips for his shotgun certificate; and on which dates in each case.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No. The local administration of the firearms licensing system is a matter for the chief officer of police concerned.

Mrs. Jan Begum

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish that part of the letter written by an official of his Department to the hon. Member for Bradford, West on 25 August 1988, concerning the application of Mrs. Jan Begum, Ref: H197247/4, for British citizenship, that relates to the timing of the decision on her application; and when he intends to let Mrs. Begum know whether she has been granted British citizenship.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: It is not the normal practice to publish correspondence with individual applicants. However, I can confirm that the letter of 25 August 1988 recorded progress, and our expectation that it would not take long to reach a decision. The facts of the case were not entirely straightforward, and action was delayed for a time while the fee was awaited. Some further delay was caused because action on the case was overlooked, and I am sorry that that happened. But the application was approved in August 1989 and the applicant was invited to take the oath of allegiance. As soon as she has done so, the certificate can be issued.

London Underground (Smoking)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the amount of each fine levied for smoking on the Tube since smoking was banned after the King's Cross fire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 26 January 1990]: This information is not collected centrally but statistics available from the British Transport police, L division are given in the table:

Persons[1] fined for smoking on the Underground following the King's Cross fire on 18 November 1987 by the amount of fine imposed

PRIME MINISTER

United States of America

Q10. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Prime Minister when she next expects to pay an official visit to the United States of America.

The Prime Minister: I plan to attend the economic summit in Houston from 9 to 11 July.

Interest Rates

Q77. Mr. Harry Ewing: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment she has made of the effects of the Government's policies on the level of interest rates.

The Prime Minister: The Government's policy objective is to bring inflation down. The level of interest rates is set to achieve this.

European Community (Expansion)

Q101. Dr. Godman: To ask the Prime Minister if Her Majesty's Government have recently participated in discussions with other European Community states concerning the extension of membership of the European Community to include Scandinavian, central and east European nations; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: There have been no recent substantive discussions among member states on this matter. The Community will need to look comprehensively at the implications of further accessions in due course. We agree with the general view within the Community that —until at least 1993—the emphasis must be on consolidation, not enlargement, and completion of the single market.

Finchley

Q134. Mr. Ashton: To ask the Prime Minister if she will pay an official visit to Finchley.

The Prime Minister: As the Member for Finchley I hold regular constituency surgeries and deal with the many representations that are made.

Literacy

Q.224 Mr. Boswell: To ask the Prime Minister what recent representations she has received relating to standards of literacy.

The Prime Minister: The Government regularly receive correspondence about the standards of written and spoken English. It is important continually to seek to raise the standards of literacy.

English is a core subject in the national curriculum. Attainment targets and performances of study for five and seven-year-old children were introduced in September 1989. The requirements for older children will be introduced in stages between now and September 1992. Assessment at regular intervals will mean that children with literacy problems will be identified at an early stage and can be given the necessary help.

The Government have given priority to the literacy needs of adults. They have provided grants of £3 million this year to the adult literacy and basic skills unit. In addition, local education authorities are being assisted through education support grants to provide open learning centres, and the training of tutors of adult literacy and basic skills has been designated a national priority area under the LEA training grants scheme.

Human Rights

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Prime Minister to which Commonwealth countries the United Kingdom Government have made representations of concern about the abuse of human rights since 1979.

The Prime Minister: Where Commonwealth countries' practice on human rights has given cause for concern, we have made representations as necessary. These representations are sometimes more productive if undertaken without publicity. It would not, therefore, be helpful to list the countries concerned.

Conveyancing

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list the reforms which her Government have introduced in the conveyancing of homes since 1979; and which other areas are currently under consideration for such further reforms.

The Prime Minister: The following measures designed to improve the conveyancing process have been introduced by the Government since 1979:

(1) the Administration of Justice Act 1985 which established licensed conveyancers; (2) the Building Societies Act 1986 which provided for the conveyancing of property by financial institutions.

The Courts and Legal Services Bill currently being considered in another place includes provision for authorised conveyancing practitioners. The conveyancing standing committee at the Law Commission has published guides as to improvements in conveyancing practice on the following matters:

(1) Pre-Contract Deposits; (2) Preliminary Inquiries; (3) House selling the Scottish way for England and Wales; (4) Local Authority Enquiries; (5) Conveyancing Claims; (6) Avoiding Completion Delays; (7) the operation of the Caveat Emptor rule.

The Government have asked the Director General of Fair Trading to review estate agency practices. They have also asked that draft legislation should be prepared at the Law Commission to give effect to a commonhold scheme.

Downing Street

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister how many injuries have occurred in Downing street due to (a) road traffic accidents, (b) pedestrians tripping over uneven paving slabs and (c) other causes for each of the past 10 years; what compensation the victims received; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: As far as I am aware there have been no road traffic accidents in Downing street. The responsibility for compensating individuals in the event of tripping over uneven paving slabs rests with Westminster city council.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister how often the front of 10 Downing street is (a) painted and (b) cleaned; whether the work is contracted out; what is the cost to public funds; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: There is no set frequency for the external painting of No. 10 Downing street. The windows were last painted in 1984 and the front door in 1988. The brickwork of the Downing street elevation is stained black and was last restained in 1962.

External decorating work is undertaken by contractors. The cost of repainting the external woodwork of Nos. 10, 11, and 12 Downing street was £16,000 in 1984.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister whether the postmen who deliver mail to 10 Downing street have to (a) hold a pass and (b) be accompanied by a police officer; and how many postal deliveries 10 Downing street receives each day; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No. 10 receives the normal number of postal deliveries. As regards the other parts of the hon. Member's question it is not the practice to comment on security matters of this kind.

Petitions

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister what is her policy with regard to the disposal of items such as flowers, clothing and footwear handed in to her at 10 Downing street on the occasion of a right hon. or hon. Member presenting a petition on behalf of constituents.

The Prime Minister: Such goods are normally dealt with in accordance with the request, if any, which accompanies the petition.

Chancellor Kohl

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Prime Minister when she next expects to meet the Chancellor of West Germany; and what matters she will discuss.

The Prime Minister: I expect to meet Chancellor Kohl before long. As is usual, there will be a wide range of issues to discuss including developments in eastern Europe, East-West relations, and European Community matters.

Engagements

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 6 February.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 6 February.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 6 February.

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 6 February.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 6 February.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 6 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I shall attend a reception to commemorate the 150th anniversary of New Zealand's founding treaty.

WALES

Rent Arrears

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish rent arrears for each of the district councils and boroughs of Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Rent arrears information in respect of 1988-89 for each local authority district in Wales is given in the table. The figures indicate both current and former tenants' arrears and are taken from returns supplied by local authorities to the Department.

Local Authority	Rent Arrears 1988-89 (£)

Torfaen Borough Council	403,696
Vale of Glamorgan Borough Council	131,200
Wrexham Maelor Borough Council	485,049
Ynys Mon Borough Council	144,170

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assistance he plans for the housing authorities of Wales concerning rent arrears.

Mr. Grist: Rent arrears is a housing management issue and I look to councils to resolve it. I stand ready to consider any realistic proposals that the Council of Welsh Districts (CWD) cares to put to me to promulgate good practice.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the spending levels for 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91 for (a) the average of all Welsh county councils and (b) South Glamorgan council in cash and percentage terms.

Mr. Grist: Information for 1988-89 and 1989-90 is given in the table. Figures are not yet available for 1990-91.

	1988-89 revised estimate	1989-90 budget	Percentage increase
	£000	£000
Average of Welsh County Councils	180,163	193,506	7·4

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the spending levels for 1988-89, 1989-90 and 1990-91 for (a) the average of all Welsh district councils and (b) Cardiff council in cash and percentage levels.

Mr. Grist: Information for 1988-89 and 1989-90 is given in the table. Figures are not yet available for 1990-91.

	1988-89 revised estimate	1989-90 budget	Percentage increase
	£000	£000
Average of Welsh District Councils	7,297	8,147	11·6
Cardiff City Council	25,473	30,501	19·7

Sheep

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many sheep farmers in each of the Welsh counties have 1,000 ewes or over; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I refer the hon. Gentleman to table 3.11 in "Welsh Agricultural Statistics No. 11, 1989", a copy of which is in the Library.

Rural Affairs Unit

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will set up a rural affairs unit in his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Effective arrangements already exist within the Department to ensure the co-ordination and implementation of the various policies which affect rural areas of Wales. A close relationship is also maintained with other agencies and organisations having responsibilities and an interest in rural affairs.

Mid-Wales

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives he proposes to enhance economic activity in mid-Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The Development Board for Rural Wales has the principal responsibility for the economic regeneration of mid-Wales. Its recently announced "Strategy for the 1990s" sets out its future intentions for the area. Apart from the Development Board for Rural Wales, other sources of economic and industrial assistance are available to mid-Wales through the Wales tourist board, the Welsh Development Agency and central Government.

Upland Farmers

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives he proposes to take concerning the difficulties encountered by upland farmers in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: We have just announced an 11 per cent. increase in the hill livestock compensatory allowance for hardy breed sheep in the severely disadvantaged area, bringing the rate up to £7·50. For the future, we shall seek to ensure that upland farmers in Wales are able to compete effectively and on equal terms with the rest of Europe.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet the farmers' unions in Wales to discuss the needs of the upland farmers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State regularly meets representatives from the Welsh farming unions to discuss a wide range of issues affecting agriculture in Wales.

Rented Property

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives he proposes concerning the need for homes to rent in rural Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: We are encouraging local authorities to make the best use of their housing stock through good housing management practice. Authorities are also encouraged to work together with housing associations to provide homes for rent in rural Wales. Furthermore the rural initiative launched by Housing for Wales last year has brought forward a number of pilot projects involving the provision of rented homes. Two research projects have been commissioned by Housing for Wales to establish the overall level of housing need in rural areas which will assist the accurate targeting of its resources. In addition, Housing for Wales has been asked to maintain significant investment in rural housing at around £25 million in the context of its overall programme.

Cardiff-Wales Airport

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what policy initiative he proposes to enhance the status of Cardiff-Wales airport.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Wherever possible, the Government encourage growth at regional airports, and they are already leading the way in liberalising European air fares and services. However, future development of Cardiff-Wales Airport Ltd. will depend on the expansion of services which is primarily a matter for the commercial judgment of the airlines.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet local government leaders and management of Cardiff-Wales airport to discuss future development; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has already arranged to meet the airport director in early March for discussions on the prospects for new services at Cardiff-Wales airport.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will visit Cardiff-Wales airport.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend has no current plans to do so.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many official visits he has made to Cardiff-Wales airport.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: None. However my right hon. Friend is a frequent user.

Welsh Water plc

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to ensure that Welsh Water plc meets its obligations to improve the quality and dependability of supply of water.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Wales have recently established a drinking water inspectorate, details of which were given by the Minister for Housing and Planning in answer to a question from the hon. Member for Berkshire, East (Mr. MacKay) on 21 December 1989. The Director General of Water Services also has duties under the Water Act 1989 to ensure that the functions of a water undertaker are properly carried out.

Patients (Referrals)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how the cost of treatment for a patient referred to a treatment centre by a general practitioner will be met; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether he will make a statement as to why general practitioners will not be allowed to refer patients directly to treatment centres of the practitioner's choice.

Mr. Grist: Treatment centres are intended to help directly people who have been waiting too long for treatment for key disabling conditions. They will therefore offer those patients who have already been waiting over four months for the relevant operations the choice of earlier treatment at the centres. Treatment for all patients at the centres will be funded centrally. GPs will continue to be able to refer new patients direct to hospitals of their choice, which will continue to treat the majority of patients.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement as to which authority is to be responsible for the after care of a patient following treatment at a centre outside the patient's health authority.

Mr. Grist: The consultant team at the centre will be responsible for post-operative care and follow-up, including any complications arising from the surgical procedure. However, with the agreement of the referring consultant, consideration may be given to conducting follow-up nearer the patient's home. The place of treatment for late surgical complications after completion of in-patient treatment should be decided by the patient and GP after consultation with the operating surgeon.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to set up a special fund to help meet the travel expenses of patients referred to treatment centres outside their own health authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The cost of travel where medically indicated to and from the orthopaedic treatment centre at the Prince of Wales hospital, Rhydlafar, will be shared between the referring authorities and the centre itself; £20,000 a year of central funds are being set aside for this purpose. The arrangements for the other centres are currently under discussion. Patients on low incomes can obtain help with their travelling expenses to and from the centres from the Department of Social Security as with any other hospital service.

Health Care

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he intends to ensure a comprehensive range of health care services within each health authority in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The provisions of the National Health Service and Community Care Bill place a clear duty on district health authorities to secure an adequate range, quality and depth of services for their local populations. As now, some services will need to be provided to patients outside their district health authority of residence. In determining arrangements for the treatment of their residents, health authorities will wish to reconcile the need for service, quality of access to service, and value for money in the mode of provision.

Polluted Beaches

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will provide a list of the 10 most polluted beaches in Wales and give details of the most recent measurements of pollution on each of them.

Mr. Grist: This information is not available. However, the results of the 1989 survey of bathing water quality in England and Wales announced by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment and Countryside on 25 January showed that 83 per cent. of the 48 Welsh waters listed under the terms of the EC bathing water directive complied with its bacteriological standards. Details have been placed in the Library of the House.

Polluted Rivers

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will provide a list of the 20 most polluted rivers in Wales and give details of the most recent measurements of pollution in each of them.

Mr. Grist: This information is not available. However, the 1985 river water quality survey showed that 93 per cent. of all river lengths surveyed in Wales were in either class 1 or 2.

Firearms Range, Cardiff

Mr William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will indicate the date on which the safety certificate for the indoor firearms range at the national sports centre, Cardiff was first granted; and for which classes and calibres of firearms and muzzle energies it presently holds such a safety certificate.

Mr. Grist: The information provided by the Sports Council for Wales is as follows:

Original certificate issued 18 July 1972 for the following:
·22 calibre rifle
210 feet per pound muzzle energy

·22 calibre pistol
100 feet per pound muzzle energy

On 14 May 1984 upgraded to:
·380 calibre pistol

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Bangladesh

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list, by cost and project, the aid which is currently given to Bangladesh in the form of (a) grant aid and (b) repayable loans.

Mrs. Chalker: Under British bilateral aid to Bangladesh all assistance is provided in grant form.

Capital aid projects funded under the programme at present are:

	Allocation (rounded)
	£ million
Dhaka Power Phase II A	11·5
Dhaka Power Phase III	58·9
Second Gas Development Project	22·9
Bridging and Institutional Development	11·8
Tea Rehabilitation	20·0
Second Deep Tubewells Project	17·9
Second Rural Development Project	6·6
Third Health and Population Project	8·0
Technical Education Project	1·4

We also support a large number of technical co-operation activities, including training in Bangladesh and in the United Kingdom, consultants, advisers, aid personnel and equipment. In 1988-89 some £14 million was spent on these activities.

In addition, Britain provides commodity aid for goods, equipment and spare parts to maintain and improve existing production capacity in Bangladesh. A grant for £15 million was signed in February 1989.

Aid (Disabled People)

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to ensure that an appropriate part of the financial aid given to countries is allocated to the needs of disabled people to ensure that they have equal opportunity in the development of their countries.

Mrs. Chalker: In many developing countries the needs of disabled people are handled by the non-governmental sector. The ODA provides grants to United Kingdom non-governmental organisations operating in developing countries for the partial funding of their projects, which are usually carried out by local organisations. Within our Government-to-Government country aid programmes we are ready to respond positively to requests from recipient Governments to provide assistance to help them meet the needs of disabled people.

Details of projects funded by the ODA, both directly and through non-governmental organisations, which focus on the needs of disabled people, were contained in the answer the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Exeter (Mr. Hannam) on 6 December at columns 231-32.

EMPLOYMENT

Tourism

Mr. Lee: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the latest available figures of the balance of payments deficit on the travel and tourism account; and what is his projection for the year.

Mr. Nicholls: During the first 10 months of the year, overseas residents spent an estimated £5,820 million in the United Kingdom while United Kingdom residents spent £8,370 million abroad. Estimates for the whole of 1989 will be published on 7 March.

Youth Training

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the number of YTS trainees in training broken down by ethnic background and the number of contracted places in (a) London and (b) Birmingham/Solihull for February 1989.

Mr. Nicholls: The number of YTS trainees in training by ethnic background for the two areas requested on 28 February 1989 is as follows:

Ethnic group	London	Birmingham/ Solihull
White	16,630	9,972
Black/African Caribbean descent	2,501	573
Indian sub-continent descent	1,229	830

Prefers not to say	578	63

The number of contracted places for February 1989 are:

	Number
London	31,311
Birmingham	18,041

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has on the construction ITB YTS scheme showing the ethnic background and number of trainees in each of the occupational categories concerned; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The table shows the number in training in YTS CITB schemes as at 31 December 1989 and gives the ethnic breakdown within each occupational area:

In-Training on YTS CITB schemes, as at 31 December 1989

Training

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to relaunch Employment training.

Mr. Nicholls: My Department has no such plans.

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list all training enterprises and schemes which have been introduced since 1979.

Mr. Nicholls: The training programmes and schemes introduced by my Department since 1979 are as follows:
Training Opportunities Scheme.
Open Tech.
National Priority Skills Scheme.
Youth Training Scheme.
Technical and Vocational Education Initiative.
Local Collaborative Projects.
Non Advanced Further Education/Work Related Further Education.
Job Training Scheme.
Training For Enterprise.
Local Grants to Employers.
Wider Opportunities Training Programme.
New Job Training Scheme.
Enterprise in Higher Education and other HE projects.
Employment Training.
Business Growth Training.
Compacts.
The Open College.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if employment training is to become a designated scheme under the Employment Act 1988.

Mr. Nicholls: My Department has no plans for employment training to be designated under the Employment Act 1988.

Union Mergers

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has as to how many union mergers have taken place in the years since 1980, and as to what the sizes of the unions merged were.

Mr. Nicholls: There were 115 mergers involving a total of 2·7 million union members in the period 1980 to 1988; annual data are given in the table. Separate statistics on the sizes of individual unions involved in these mergers are not readily available.

Year	Number of mergers	Number of members involved
1980	13	113,235
1981	4	8,617
1982	12	1,455,207
1983	9	65,320
1984	18	142,302
1985	11	73,526
1986	32	50,530
1987	5	125,200
1988	11	673,300
Total	115	2,707,237

Labour Costs

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his estimate of hourly manufacturing labour costs, indexed with the United Kingdom as 100, in West Germany, France, the United States of America and Japan in 1979 and 1989, and what is his estimate of an index of labour costs in the same countries in the same years, using an index of manufacturing productivity calculated on the same basis.

Mr. Nicholls: International comparisons of hourly manufacturing labour costs (excluding recruitment and training costs and costs of facilities and services) are made periodically by the United States Bureau of Labour Statistics. Available data from this source are as follows:

Index UK = 100

	1980	1988
United Kingdom	100	100
West Germany	166	172
France	120	124
United States	132	133
Japan	76	121

Manufacturing productivity data on the same basis are not available.

Factory Inspectors

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many factory inspectors were employed for each year since 1980.

Mr. Nicholls: The number of factory inspectors employed in the Health and Safety Executive in each year since 1980 is as follows (1 April figures):

Year	Number of factory inspectors
1980	759·0
1981	735·0
1982	678·0
1983	654·0
1984	627·0
1985	652·0
1986	623·0
1987	621·5
1988	592·5
1989	604·0
[1]1990	624·5

[1] 1 January.

Hazardous Substances

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what resources his Department has given for the implementation of the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations.

Mr. Nicholls: These regulations will be enforced by the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) and local authorities as part of their continuing programme of visits to premises. Responsibility for implementation of the regulations rests with industry. The HSE has been working closely with industry organisations and employers to encourage them to develop guidance for their members as well as promoting the regulations by a variety of means including national and trade advertising and the distribution of introductory leaflets.

Training Agents

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many training agents have been appointed in the Wakefield and Leeds area; which individuals or organisations are involved as training agents; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: There are four training agents in the Leeds and Wakefield area currently participating in ET. These are:

Wakefield Training Agent
Leeds City Council
Shapman Ltd.
The Leeds Chamber Training Agent.

Action for Jobs

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much of the expenditure on Action for Jobs, in addition to expenditure on television advertising and printed material in 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88 was spent through the Central Office of Information:

Mr. Eggar: In addition to Action For Jobs expenditure on television advertising and printed material, the following amounts were spent through the Central Office of Information:

1985-86 Nil
1986-87 £1·7 million
1987-88 £2·4 million.

Maternity Leave

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list all the changes in employment law since May 1979 which have affected women's rights to maternity leave.

Mr. Nicholls: The Employment Act 1980 made the following changes:

Initial notification of intention to return after confinement must now be in writing and should include the expected week of confinement or, if confinement has occurred, the actual date.

An employer has the right, not earlier than 49 days after the beginning of the expected week of confinement (or the notified date of confinement) to make a written request for confirmation in writing that the woman intends to return. If she does not comply within 14 days of receiving the request (or if that is not reasonably practicable, as soon as is reasonably practicable) she will lose the right to return.

Final notification of the intended date of return must now be made in writing at least 21 days (formerly 7 days) beforehand.

A woman who has been prevented from returning because of an interruption to work must resume work not later than 28 days (formerly 14 days) after the interruption is over.

The right to complain to an industrial tribunal if an employer does not reinstate her to her old job does not apply where it is not reasonably practicable for an employer to reinstate the woman in her original job (for reasons other than redundancy) and where an offer of employment is unreasonably refused.

Employers with fewer than 6 employees no longer have to re-employ a woman if it is not reasonably practicable either to reinstate her in her old job or to offer her suitable alternative employment.

SCOTLAND

Skye Toll Bridge

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the planning procedure which he intends to follow in relation to the proposed Skye toll bridge.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As indicated in "New Roads by New Means" (Cmnd. 698), it is proposed to introduce new legislation to provide revised procedures for the authorisation of privately financed roads. These would amend and supplement the Roads (Scotland) Act 1984. Alternatively, as with the M25 Dartford crossing, a project specific Bill may be judged the most suitable vehicle to progress Skye bridge timeously. In either case, the statutory procedures adopted will safeguard the environment and uphold the rights of individuals and local councils affected by such privately funded infrastructure developments.

School Boards

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list, in respect of each Scottish education authority area, the applications received by him to have the obligation to have a school board waived, in terms of section 20 of the School Boards (Scotland) Act 1988; and if he will indicate those cases in which he has granted such a waiver.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 21 December 1989]: My right hon. and learned Friend has received one such application, which he has granted in respect of Graemsay primary school in Orkney.

Sand-eels

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will decide whether the ban on commercial sand-eel fishing in the Shetlands will be extended a further season.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 5 February 1990]: A consultation paper setting out the scientific advice on sand-eel stocks and a range of possible management options for the fishery has been issued by the Department. Responses from several bodies are still awaited.

TRANSPORT

Highway Authorities

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list in the Official Report for each highway authority in England (a) their bid for annual capital guidelines and transport supplementary grant for 1990-91, (b) the allocation announced in each case, (c) the allocation as a percentage of bid in each case and (d) the percentage of each authority's transport supplementary grant allocation attributable to minor works.

Mr. Atkins: "Capital allocations" under the present local government finance system are not equivalent to "annual capital guidelines" (ACGs) under the new one for 1990-91 onwards. For example, capital allocations included transport supplementary grant (TSG) but ACGs do not. Furthermore, local authorities are also given "supplementary credit approvals" (SCAs) in addition to ACGs to help them finance capital expenditure not met by TSG.

Table 1 shows each local highway authority's bid for capital expenditure on roads and parking, the sum of its TSG, ACG and SCA allocations, and the percentage that the total allocations are of the bids.

Table 2 shows authorities' bids and allocations for accepted expenditure, the percentage that allocations are of bids, and the percentage of accepted expenditure that is for minor works.

Notes

1. Column 2 does not take into account any adjustments arising from underspends on accepted expenditure in previous years.
2. Transport Supplementary Grant is paid at the rate of 50 per cent. of net accepted expenditure (ie after adjustment).

3. For London, accepted expenditure for Transport Supplementary Grant includes each Borough's share of expenditure on the London-wide Urban Traffic Control system managed by the City of London on behalf of the Secretary of State which is not included in boroughs' bids but is included in their gross accepted expenditure. This is why for some London authorities their accepted expenditure is greater than their bid.

London Assessment Studies

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will permit his Department's consultants to release detailed drawings to the public showing how specific properties will be affected by the proposals in stage 2B of the London assessment studies.

Mr. Atkins: Since the consultants' preliminary drawings are only illustrative it would be inappropriate and misleading to release them to the public. Much more detailed design work will be necessary on any options which may be taken forward before it will be known how specific properties will be affected.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will publish in full the results of the public consultation on stage 2B of the London assessment studies and "Traffic in London".

Mr. Atkins: We have not yet decided in what form the results should be published.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will extend the time period given for public consultation over the London road assessment studies.

Mr. Atkins: No.

M1 (Lighting)

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when motorway lighting will be installed on the M1 from Watford Gap to its junction with the M6.

Mr. Atkins: Motorway lighting is at present being installed from Watford Gap (junction 17) to Crick (junction 18) and will be completed by the end of this month. Further extension from Crick to the M6 junction (junction 19) is planned and should go ahead during the 1990-91 financial year.

Roads (Sterilised Land)

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the latest estimate of land sterilised for other uses by the construction of (a) new two-lane highways, (b) new four-lane highways and (c) new six-lane highways measured in terms of land sterilised per 1,000 m of new road construction.

Mr. Atkins: The amount of land taken for road scheme varies according to topography, structures and the amount of landscape treatment. In terms of standard carriageway widths, the land take is as follows:

Standard	Width	Area per 1000 metres (in hectares) metres
Motorway
Dual 4 lane	≈50	5·0
Dual 3 lane	≈43	4·3
Dual 2 lane	≈35	3·5
All-purpose
Dual 2 lane[1]	≈38	3·8
Wide single	≈26	2·6
Single	≈23	2·3

[1] Includes allowance for footpaths.

When the expanded roads programme is complete, the trunk road network in England will cover an area of 3,836ha, 0·29 per cent. of the total land area.

Greenham Common

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will consider the use of the Greenham Common airfield for civilian aircraft following the closure by the United States Airforce of its base there.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Government are prepared to look sympathetically at applications for civil use of Ministry of Defence airfields, where such use is compatible with their operational role. I understand that RAF Greenham Common will remain available to the United States Airforce as a standby operating base for the foreseeable future.

Jubilee Line

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is the developers' financial contribution to the extension of the Jubilee line in today's prices; and over what period it is due to be paid;

(2) what is the formulation of the agreement between the developers and the Department of Transport over contributions towards the construction of the Jubilee line extension; and if it is available in written form.

Mr. Portillo: In my right hon. Friend's answer of 16 November to my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South (Mr. Marshall) Official Report column 398, he said:

"The Jubilee extension will cost about £1 billion in today's prices to which developers over time will be making a cash contribution of over £400 million".

Of that sum just over £100 million will be paid within the next three years, with the balance to be paid in the years following the opening of the line, which is as yet an indeterminate date. The full total of contributions is not yet known as negotiations with some developers remain to be concluded.

The understandings to this effect, reached in recent months between the Department and developers, remain to be executed as legal agreements between LRT and those developers, and contain commercially confidential material.

London Docklands Railway

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement concerning the resignation of the manager of the docklands light railway; and when he expects a permanent replacement to be appointed.

Mr. Portillo: This is not an appointment made by the Secretary of State. It is a matter entirely for the board of London Regional Transport.

Road Closure, Poplar

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received in connection with the proposed road closure at the junction of Lanrick road and East India Dock road in Poplar, east London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: No proposal has been made to close Lanrick road at its junction with East India Dock road. Representations have been received about the local authority's suggested closure of Lanrick road at its junction with Portree road. These were from the deputy mayor of the London borough of Tower Hamlets, the chief executive of the Poplar standing neighbourhood committee, the local Liberal Focus team, enclosing a petition signed by 230 local residents, and two members of the public. The Department is concerned at the safety implications of the proposed closure since it would create a cul-de-sac access to the busy A13 trunk road. My right hon. Friend would consider any formal proposal made by the local highway authority on its merits.

Cost-benefit Analysis

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has any plans to change the method of pricing involved in the cost-benefit analysis, COBA 9, presently used by his Department.

Mr. Atkins: All the major economic parameters used in COBA 9 are kept under continuous review and adjustments made periodically. A number of major revisions have been made in the last three years. I have no plans, at present, to make any further revisions.

Diesel Exhaust Fumes

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce measures to reduce levels of hydrocarbons contained within diesel exhaust fumes.

Mr. Atkins: Regulations were made last year that will apply to new diesel-engined vehicles from 1 October 1990. They will introduce European Community limits on gaseous emissions, including hydrocarbons. The European Commission is expected to propose much tighter gaseous emission standards for lorries and buses later this year, and to propose limits on particulates. We are pressing the Commission to make its long-overdue proposals as soon as possible.

HEALTH

Private Hospitals

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many private hospitals he has visited in the last 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have not visited any private hospitals in the last 12 months.

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby of 20 December, Official Report, column 333, concerning the accountancy firms employed by his Department, if he will indicate (a) the names of the five firms, (b) a list of payments made to each in 1988 and 1989, (c) details of the consultancy contracts given to each firm and (d) who his Department consulted when drawing up the contracts.

Mr. Freeman: Information about the five consultancy firms employed by the Department is set out in the tables for both financial years.

The individual contracts were prepared to accord with the specific requirements of the work undertaken, drawing as necessary on relevant expertise within the Department and in line with the guidance issued by Treasury on employment of external consultants.

Financial Year 1988-89

NHS Assets (Interest)

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health at what level the interest elements of capital charges are set for National Health Service assets; how this figure is arrived at; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: When capital charging is introduced in April 1991, the interest rate to be applied to the current value of National Health Service assets will be 6 per cent. This rate is based on the discount rate used for the non-trading part of the public sector, as published by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury in 1989.

Tobacco-related Diseases

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the annual cost to the National Health Service of treating tobacco-related diseases.

Mr. Freeman: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave him on 17 January 1990 at column 277.

Computer Security

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department has taken, and is taking to improve the security of its computer systems.

Mr. Freeman: For unclassifed but sensitive systems the Department of Health is expected to follow Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency guidance covering all aspects of IT security, and the application of this has been tightened recently. CCTA advice is kept under continuous review and is based on analysis of security risks and requirements using structured methods such as CCTA's risk analysis management methodology (CRAMM), which has also been made available commercially.

More stringent conditions apply to classified systems.

Temperature Controls (Food)

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what consideration he has given to representations by manufacturers and retailers of certain foods concerning new temperature controls and the commercial viability of their business;

(2) what consideration he has given to representations by soft cheese manufacturers suggesting that any new temperature control will prevent the proper maturing of traditional soft cheeses;

(3) what consideration he has given to stricter food labelling and improved food safety education as alternatives to statutory temperature controls in relation to food hygiene;

(4) what plans he has to introduce statutory temperature controls regulating the temperatures of certain foods following the consultation document issued by his Department regarding proposed amendments to the Food Hygiene (General) Regulations 1970;

(5) what response he has had to the consultation document issued by his Department regarding proposed amendments to the Food Hygiene (General) Regulations 1970;

(6) when he intends to lay before the House amendments to the Food Hygiene (General) Regulations 1970; and to what procedure they will be subject.

Mr. Freeman: Over 150 responses have been received to the consultation document, from all interested parties including those with a duty to enforce the regulations (environmental health officers); the retail trade, including representatives of small shopkeepers; delicatessens and market traders; catering organisations; refrigeration interests; delivery concerns; microbiological experts and trade associations, including soft cheese manufacturers, bakers and representatives of dairy and meat manufacturers.

All the representations received are being given careful consideration in order to bring forward, in the near future, a measure which will balance the protection of the public health with the practicalities of implementation. In accordance with section 120(2) of the Food Act 1984, the regulations when laid will be subject to the negative resolution procedure. Questions of labelling and food safety education and, indeed, hygiene in manufacturing processes are essential adjuncts but not alternatives to temperature controls and are being pursued in parallel.

Compulsory Removal

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department will take steps to compile annual statistical returns on the use by local authorities of powers of compulsory removal under the provisions of the National Assistance Act and the Mental Health Act.

Mr. Freeman: Certain statistical information is already collected centrally about the use of the compulsory powers provided by the Mental Health Act, including the number of cases of guardianship under sections 7 and 37. (The decision to use these compulsory powers is based on the recommendations of medical practitioners). At present we do not see any need to collect statistics on the use of the compulsory removal power in section 47 of the National Assistance Act.

Social Services

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the work of the social services inspectorate during the last available year was concerned with private sector social services provision.

Mr. Freeman: Direct concern with private sector social services provision is a matter for local authorities, which are the registering authorities for private residential care homes. The Department's social services inspectorate works with the statutory, private and voluntary sectors in promoting good standards of care. The results of this work are published from time to time. For example, the inspectorate has recently produced a handbook, "Homes Are for Living In", designed to help care home managers and local authority inspectors evaluate the quality of care in residential care homes for elderly people in both local authority and independent sector homes.

It would not therefore be practicable to apportion the inspectorate's work between sectors.

Great Ormond Street Hospital

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current state of the actions brought against any of the parties over the cardiac block at Great Ormond Street.

Mr. Freeman: All actions brought against parties involved in this case have now been settled.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether any of the capital or revenue expenditure increase for 1988-89 over 1982 for the Hospital for Sick Children given in the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State's letter of 29 January to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras represents spending on the cardiac block at Great Ormond Street.

Mr. Freeman: Health authorities' annual accounts do not separately identify expenditure on specific schemes. The hon. Member may like to consult the authority concerned for this information.

Acute Hospital Beds

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the number of acute hospital beds in the north-west area in (a) 1979 and (b) 1989.

Mr. Freeman: The information is given in the table:

Acute hospital beds in the North Western regional health authority

	Year
	1979	1988-89
Average daily available beds in the acute sector (including units for the younger disabled)	13,545	11,766

Over the same period numbers of patients treated have increased through improved efficiency in bed usage: in-patient cases treated up 43 per cent., day cases doubled and out-patient cases up 11 per cent.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Soil (Straw Incorporation)

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research is taking place into the effects of straw incorporation into heavy clay soils.

Mr. Gummer: Expenditure by my Department on straw-related research is currently running at £706,000 per annum. Of this, £200,000 is concerned with the effect of straw incorporation into heavy clay soils and involves the following projects:

Amount of funding in 1989-90

Location and project	£000
ADAS (Sproatley and Rochford) Straw incorporation on heavy clay and stony soils	50
ADAS (Boxworth EHF and Drayton EHF) Effects of straw disposal by soil cultivation methods
AFRC (IER) Studies on cultivation mechanisms for cereals and other crops	150

Fishing Industry

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from, and what discussions he has had with, fishing industry representatives regarding prospects for the industry in 1990; and if he will make a statement on the outcome of any such meetings.

Mr. Curry: I and my officials are in frequent contact with the various representatives of the fishing industry. We discussed 1990 quotas and their implications in the run-up to the December Fisheries Council. I am working in close consultation with the industry to achieve improvements in our quota management and licensing arrangements and improved technical conservation measures.

Straw

Mr. Butler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what reports he has received on research into alternative uses for straw.

Mr. Curry: We have received the following reports on research into alternative uses for straw:

Straw Disposal and Utilisation: A review of Knowledge: 1984; Working Party of the Straw Utilisation Group, MAFF; available in the Library of the House.

Alternatives to Straw Burning: 1984; S. England, Imperial College London.

The Effects of Field Burning Restriction, Straw Incorporation and Alternative Uses as Fuel, Fibre on Feed on the Amount of Field Burning and the Supply and Demand for Straw: Divisional Note DN 1307; E. Audsley, Institute of Engineering Research.

Register of Research and Development on Straw Disposal and Utilisation: 1985; Chief Scientists' Group, MAFF, available in the Library of the House.

Alternative Methods of Straw Disposal and Utilisation: 1987; National Society for Clean Air, England.

The Biodegradation of Thatching Straw: 1988; J. J. H. Kirby and A. D. M. Rayner, University of Bath.

The Economics of Whole Group Crop Cereal Harvesting: Divisional Note DN 1555; 1989; E. Audsley, Institute of Engineering Research.

Experiments Investigating the Mechanical and Agronomic problems of Incorporating Stripped and Chopped Straw on Clay Soil. 1987-88: Divisional Note DN 1543; 1989, R. E. Cope, Institute of Engineering Research.

Agricultural Extensification

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to meet the chairman of the Countryside Commission to discuss agricultural extensification.

Mr. Curry: I have no present plans to do so, but I am always ready to meet Sir Derek to discuss matters of mutual interest and Ministers from this Department frequently meet Sir Derek at conferences and other functions.

Haddock

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what compensation his Department intends to offer those English fishermen who have been stopped fishing for North sea haddock because of overfishing by some Scottish FPOs.

Mr. Curry: Three Scottish and one English group exceeded their North sea haddock allocations in 1989 causing an early closure of the fishery. Compensation for the groups prejudiced by the early closure will be provided by deductions from the offending groups' 1990 allocations under established rules.

Anthrax Vaccine

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the stock of anthrax vaccine currently available for use in Wales; what is its location; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: There is no commercial source of supply of anthrax vaccine in the United Kingdom at present. Supplies of vaccine are, however, held at the central veterinary laboratory, Weybridge, for emergency use in the event of an outbreak anywhere in the United Kingdom.

Farm Incomes

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a further statement on the current level of farm incomes.

Mr. Curry: Estimates of farm incomes for 1989 are contained in "Agriculture in the United Kingdom 1989", published today and available in the Library of the House.

Milk Quota

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will add the unfrozen 1 per cent. of temporarily suspended milk quota to the national quota for 1989-90, so as to avoid United Kingdom dairy farmers incurring superlevy.

Mr. Curry: The decision taken by the Council of Agriculture Ministers was to cancel 1 per cent. out of the 5·5 per cent. of suspended wholesale quota and to add an equivalent quantity of new quota to the Community reserve for distribution by member states to their producers. I am currently considering to which categories of producer this additional 1 per cent. should be allocated in the United Kingdom. While I will try to ensure that quota is distributed before the end of the current quota year I cannot guarantee that this will be achieved, since we need to obtain Commission approval for our plans. We will seek to have the new quotas in place as soon as possible.

Computer Security

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps his Department has taken and is taking to improve the security of its computer systems.

Mr. Curry: For unclassified but sensitive systems Departments are expected to follow the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency (CCTA) guidance covering all aspects of IT security and the application of this has been tightened recently. CCTA advice is kept under continuous review and is based on analysis of security risks and requirements using structured methods such as CCTA's risk analysis and management methodology (CRAMM) which has also been made commercially available.

More stringent conditions apply to classified systems.

Command Papers

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reasons he ceased to publish the Command Paper entitled "Annual Review of Agriculture"; what information provided there is not included in the replacement volume entitled "Agriculture in the United Kingdom", published annually; and what matter in that publication could be, or was unsuited to, publication in the former Command Paper.

Mr. Curry: The then Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food announced on 5 December 1988 that the results of the annual review of agriculture would no longer be published as a White Paper. Before our accession to the European Community, the annual review led to the determination of commodity price guarantees for the coming year, which were published as part of the White Paper. Since our accession the emphasis has shifted towards the annual negotiation of agricultural prices in the European Community. The annual review White Paper has effectively become a compendium of agricultural statistics and it was considered that it was no longer appropriate to publish these in a White Paper.

All the statistical information previously contained in the annual review White Papers is now published annually in "Agriculture in the United Kingdom", together with some additional material, and all the information in the current publication could have been published in the previous format.

Slaughterhouses

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he intends to exempt any United Kingdom slaughterhouses from the requirements of EEC export standards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The EC Commission envisages that in the single market the rules which at present must be observed by slaughterhouses which engage in intra-Community trade should be extended to all plants throughout the Community, with the possibility of some minor exceptions only. The precise arrangements will depend, however, upon decisions still to be taken by the Council of Ministers.

I fully support the application of common standards to all plants and firmly believe that if any exceptions are to be permitted, for example for very small businesses trading locally, from some of the detailed structural requirements, they should be kept to a minimum and must not compromise hygiene standards.

Breeding Ewes

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his present estimate of the breeding flock of ewes in England and Wales and the number of ewes on which hill livestock compensatory allowance was (a) claimed and (b) paid in 1989 and 1988.

Mr. Curry: We estimate that the total breeding flock is currently 9·3 million ewes in England and 5·1 million ewes in Wales. The number of ewes on which hill livestock compensatory allowances were paid in the last two years is as follows:

	England million	Wales million
1988	3·2	3·9
[1]1989	3·4	4·0

[1] Provisional.

Figures on the number of ewes on which HLCAs have been claimed are not readily available, and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the new projects that he is now funding on bovine spongiform encephalopathy; how much is to be spent on each; where they are to be located; and how many scientists he expects to work on each.

Mr. Gummer: My Department is funding work on BSE to the value of £6·1 million over the years 1990-91 to 1992-93. The projects being funded are:

(a) epidemiology; £0·6 million; at the Central Veterinary Laboratory (CVL);
(b) clinicopathology; £0·6 million; at the CVL;
(c) transmission studies; £2·1 million; at the CVL, the Neuropathogenesis Unit (NPU) and the Royal Veterinary College;

(d) molecular biology; £0·5 million; at the CVL and NPU;
(e) molecular genetics; £0·5 million; at the CVL and NPU; and
(f) dam-offspring transmissions; £1·8 million; by the CVL at ADAS experimental husbandry farms.

Further details of these research projects are contained in the interim Tyrrell report, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. It is not possible to give a meaningful breakdown of the scientific staff to be engaged on each project.

Salmon Dealers

Mr. Butler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what decisions the Government have reached on schemes for the licensing of dealers in salmon; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Our proposals for schemes of salmon dealer licensing in Scotland and in England and Wales, set out in the consultation papers issued last July, attracted responses from a wide range of interests. The Government have considered most thoroughly these responses as well as the benefits—in relation to the costs and other burdens involved—which these schemes might bring to continuing efforts to combat poaching.

As was explained in the consultation paper, the Government's principal objective was to reduce trade in unlawfully taken salmon with as little disruption and control of the lawful trade as practicable. The proposed schemes took account of the previous round of consultations and sought to achieve the best practicable balance between the possible benefits and the regulatory effort and costs which would be required. In particular, it was proposed that the schemes should apply to all salmon and sea trout, including farmed and imported fish, but would exempt final sales of fish by hoteliers, restaurateurs or retailers which they had obtained from licensed dealers.

Many who favoured salmon dealer licensing in principle argued that the schemes would not be effective with the range of exemptions that we had proposed. Some interests felt that salmon dealer licensing would work effectively only if compulsory carcase tagging (for which there is no legislative provision) was also introduced. On the other hand, fish farmers and many fish traders took the view that the schemes, even with the proposed exemptions, imposed an excessive and inappropriate regulatory burden on trade in legally obtained, and particularly farmed or imported, fish.

The Government recognise that the proposed exemptions could undermine the potential effectiveness of the scheme. The scheme would have had to apply to dealers importing salmon and, because wild salmon and farmed salmon are virtually indistinguishable except under forensic conditions, to farmed salmon, too. It became clear that the proposed scheme would impose a heavy burden on many businesses even with the proposals for exemptions and with record-keeping requirements kept to a minimum. For many traders and markets the record-keeping requirements, in particular, would pose virtually insurmountable difficulties. Accordingly, it has now been decided not to proceed further with these schemes for licensing of dealers.

The Government, however, view most seriously the problem of salmon poaching, as do district salmon fishery boards in Scotland, the National Rivers Authority in England and Wales and police authorities. Considerable use has been made of the additional powers introduced in the Salmon Act 1986 to make it illegal to possess or handle fish which had been obtained in suspicious circumstances. Substantial resources will continue to be committed by district boards and the DAFS fishery protection service in Scotland and the National Rivers Authority in England and Wales to enforcement at the point of capture or attempted capture. Further consideration is being given to a proposed scheme of salmon tagging which the River Tweed commissioners have been drawing up as a measure of local river bank management.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Waste Paper

Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his estimate of the United Kingdom's manufacturing industry's current capacity for recycling waste paper.

Mr. Forth: Although my Department has not attempted a capacity estimate, my hon. Friend will be interested to know that in 1988 United Kingdom paper and board manufacturers consumed a total of 2,416,900 tonnes of waste paper. I understand that last year's total will be even higher.

Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much waste paper was imported into the United Kingdom in the year 1988-89 and the most recent 12 months for which figures are available, expressed in tonnes and sterling value.

Mr. Forth: The figures are as follows:

United Kingdom imports of waste paper and paperboard[1]

Year ended	Tonnes	£ thousands
November 1988	59,957	8,970
November 1989	76,349	12,287

Package Travel

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on how the proposed European Community draft directive on package travel will affect current Association of British Travel Agents' codes of conduct.

Mr. Forth: An EC directive has yet to be formally adopted, although EC Ministers reached a common position on an amended proposal at the 21-22 December 1989 Council. It is therefore too early to say, in advance of its finally agreed form, how a directive might affect the operation of the ABTA codes of conduct. However, the Department of Trade and Industry will consult widely when considering how to implement any directive which is agreed in this area.

European Single Market

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has received the report on the prospects for south-west Yorkshire, Strathclyde, Greater Manchester and Merseyside in the European Community single market proposed by the Catholic university of Louvain for the regional policy Commission; if he will seek to have the report made available to hon. Members, indicating what policy changes he is considering in his policy in response; and if he will make a statement on the studies he has commissioned on the problem.

Mr. Redwood: A draft report has been received from the Commission. Only selected regions within the Community were examined; these included Strathclyde and south Yorkshire. The Commission has not yet published the report, though a copy of the draft was placed in the Library of the House on 1 February. The report is being studied.

Accountancy

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he proposes to make to Sir Leon Brittan, and what evidence he intends to provide, for his consideration of new rules to ensure the quality of audit by accountancy firms throughout Europe; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: None.

Textiles

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if the British Government have put any proposals to the European Community in discussions on the general agreement on tariffs and trade and textiles concerning safeguards, anti-dumping, access to new markets and preventing counterfeiting.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 5 February 1990]: The Government recognise the need for the return of trade in textiles and clothing to GATT rules to be accompanied by a strengthening of those rules. We have played—and will continue to play—an active part in the development of Community positions: we are keen to see progress in the current GATT negotiations on safeguards, anti-dumping, market access and intellectual property, all matters of great concern to the textile industry. The EC negotiators will have to judge all these matters in the light of progress in the GATT round as a whole.

Beds

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he expects the British Standards Institute to publish the revised version of BS6807, so enabling bed manufacturers to conform to the requirements of BS7177, with particular regard to the labelling of divan bases.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 5 February 1990]: BS6807 —methods of test for the ignitability of mattresses—was published in 1986. I understand that the revised version which also covers testing of divans and bed bases, is due to be published about the end of March. The proposal to approve BS7177 for the purpose of the general safety duty of the Consumer Protection Act, was and remains limited to domestic mattresses.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Severe Disablement Allowance

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many severe disablement allowance claimants are in receipt of (a) income support, (b) housing benefit, (c) another means-tested benefit; and if he will state for each group what his Department's estimate is of the reduction in dependence on income-related benefits resulting from the introduction of the three age-related additions to severe disablement allowance.

Mr. Scott: It is estimated that about 140,000 severe disablement allowance claimants receive income support and that of these, about 50,000 also receive housing benefit. About a further 5,000 severe disablement allowance claimants receive housing benefit but not income support. The number receiving other income-related benefits is negligible. The introduction of an age-related addition for severe disablement allowance will result in a gross increase in expenditure of £110 million in the first full year after implementation (1991-92). The consequential reduction in expenditure on income-related benefits is expected to be £60 million leaving a net expenditure increase of £50 million. Almost all the reduction in income-related benefit expenditure stems from reduced dependence on income support.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his Department's estimate of the amount of reduction in dependence on income-related benefits by the introduction of the three age-related additions to severe disablement allowance.

Mr. Scott: The introduction of an age-related addition for severe disablement allowance will increase gross expenditure by £110 million in the first year after implementation (1991-92). The consequential reduction in income-related benefit expenditure is expected to amount to £60 million, leaving a net increase in expenditure of £50 million as a consequence of this measure.

Maternity Payments

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list all the changes in social security law since May 1979 which have affected the entitlement of women to maternity payments, giving his estimate of the numbers affected by each measure and the savings, net of tax and benefits as appropriate, or cost of each measure.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The initial changes to extend eligibility for help with the costs of maternity were as follows:

November 1980—introduction of single payments for maternity needs through the supplementary benefit scheme

12 months ending	Amount paid £ million	Number of payments made
December 1981	2·6	61,000
December 1982	5·4	101,000
December 1983	8·5	142,000
December 1984	12·8	188,000
February 1986	16·9	188,000
May 1987	18·3	176,000

Source: Annual Statistical Inquiries.
Notes:

The data relate to all payments made during the 12 months prior to the inquiry. However, they exclude payments made to claimants who ceased to receive supplementary benefit prior to the date of the inquiry. Therefore the figures quoted may be an undercount of the actual payments made.

July 1982—abolition of contribution conditions for £25 maternity grant.
Additional beneficiaries: 60,000.
Additional cost: £1·5 million per year.
The £25 maternity grant had not been increased since 1969. Most families could accommodate the cost of having a baby within their own resources, but for those who did need help £25 was clearly inadequate. The measures introduced in 1987 increased the grant by more than three times to £85 for people on low income.

April 1987—abolition of single payments for maternity needs and maternity grant. Replacement by social fund maternity payment of £85.
Women not entitled to maternity grant: 700,000.
Savings: £17·7 million.

Awards of social fund maternity payments

Year	Amount paid (£ million)	Number of awards
1987-88	15·5	193,000
1988-89	13·9	162,000
April 1989-December 1989	10·9	126,700

There was no doubt that the maternity allowance no longer met its objective. The purpose of the allowance has always been to help pregnant working women to give up work in good time before the baby is due in the interest of their own and their baby's health. But the old contribution test meant that many women who had given up work before they became pregnant could still receive the allowance, whereas other women who had worked continuously over the previous 12 months failed to qualify. The new arrangements better targeted payments more directly on women with a recent employment record.

April 1987—introduction of statutory maternity pay (SMP).
Beneficiaries: 250,000 per year.
Amounts of SMP paid:
1987-88—£193 million.
1988-89—£250 million.

April 1987—introduction of revised contribution conditions for maternity allowance (MA).
Beneficiaries: 45,000 per year.
Amounts of MA paid:
1987-88—£51 million.
1988-89—£27 million.

It is estimated that the combined effect of the SMP and MA changes was a PSBR saving of £13 million in 1987-88. About 94,000 women with no recent attachment to the employment field no longer qualified for MA; some 20,000 women qualified for MA or SMP for the first time.

The rates of maternity benefits are subject to review each year. It is proposed for example that from April 1990 maternity allowance will increase from £33·20 to £35·70 per week and that the lower rate of SMP will be uprated in excess of the increase required to keep pace with the movement in prices from £36·25 to £39·25 per week. The social fund maternity payment will also be increased from £85 to £100.

Maintenance

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his statement of 30 January, Official Report, column 197, when the survey of courts and local Department of Social Security offices commissioned by his Department in conjunction with the Lord Chancellor's Department, the Home Office, the Scottish Office and the Lord Advocate's Department, will be completed, and if it will include data on lone parents not in receipt of state benefits.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The maintenance survey of courts and Department of Social Security local offices will be completed in the summer and I can confirm that it will include data on lone parents not in receipt of state benefits. Further information about the survey is given in my answer yesterday to my hon. Friends the Members for Medway (Dame P. Fenner), for Rochford (Dr. Clark), for Bury, South (Mr. Sumberg), for Pembroke (Mr. Bennett) and for Orpington (Mr. Stanbrook).

ENVIRONMENT

Storm Damage Assistance

Dame Janet Fookes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if the city of Plymouth will be eligible for assistance under the Bellwin scheme following severe storm damage on 25 January;

(2) what practical steps he is taking to advise local authorities of help available in the wake of severe storm damage.

Mr. David Hunt: My Department wrote on 26 January to all local authorities in England to notify them that the Bellwin scheme for special financial assistance to authorities in emergencies had been activated. We have written again today with full details of the operation of the scheme and application forms. A copy of our letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

The scheme covers the cost of emergency work resulting from the storms of 16 and 17 December and 25 January, and also the floods in the Severn valley, which began on 29 January. If the city of Plymouth has incurred eligible expenditure above a threshold equivalent to a 0·15p rate, it will qualify for assistance under the scheme.

Peak and Northern Footpath Society

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Peak and Northern Footpath Society was informed of the inquiry under the Town and Country Planning Act 1971, section 210, into the Metropolitan Borough of Bury (Definitive Right of Way No. 3 St. John's Radcliffe) (Public Path Stopping-up) Order 1989; and whether as an objector the society was given sufficient notice.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Notification of the inquiry under the Town and Country Planning Act 1971, section 210, into the Metropolitan Borough of Bury (Definitive Right of Way No. 3 St. John's Radcliffe) (Public Path Stopping-up) Order 1989, was sent by the Department on 26 January, four days before the inquiry. It is accepted that as a statutory objector, the Peak and Northern Footpath Society was given insufficient notice, and the inquiry has been adjourned until 21 March.

Common Land

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to come forward with legislation arising out of the report on common land produced by the working party established by the Countryside Commission.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 27 November 1989 by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment and Countryside, the Member for Rossendale and Darwen (Mr. Trippier), to my hon. Friend the Member for Harborough (Sir J. Farr), (Official Report, Vol. 162, c. 89).

Rate Support Grant

Sir Peter Hordern: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the cost of rate support grant in each of the last five years, and the proportion that rate support grant bears to total local government expenditure in each of those years.

Mr. David Hunt: The information for English authorities is as follows:

	Rate support grant (£ million)	Total expenditure (£ million)	Rate support grant as a percentage of total expenditure
1985-86	9,153	21,662	42·3
1986-87	9,051	23,729	38·1
1987-88	9,467	25,677	36·9
1988-89	9,687	27,835	34·8
1989-90[1]	9,577	29,564	32·4

[1] Polytechnics were transferred from the local authority sector in April 1989.

Computer Security

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department has taken and is taking to improve the security of its computer systems.

Mr. Chris Patten: For unclassified but sensitive systems, Departments are expected to follow CCTA guidance covering all aspects of IT security, and the application of this has been tightened recently. CCTA advice is kept under continuous review and is based on analysis of security risks and requirements using structured methods such as CCTA's risk analysis and management methodology (CRAMM), which has also been made commercially available.

EC Water Directive

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action his Department is taking to deal with levels of aluminium, nitrate and trihalomethanes above the European Commission's maximum admissible concentrations in Wakefield; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend has accepted programmes of works drawn up by Yorkshire Water services to achieve compliance with the standards in the EC drinking water directive on aluminium and trihalomethanes. The drinking water inspectorate established last month will monitor progress, and advise my right hon. Friend if any further action is necessary. I am not aware of any evidence that nitrate levels in Wakefield exceed the limit in the directive.

Unleaded Petrol

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what level of naturally occurring lead is present within unleaded petrol; and what volume of lead is released into the atmosphere per annum by this means.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: In 1988, the latest year for which figures are available, the concentration of lead in unleaded petrol averaged 0.002 grammes per litre, much of which was residual lead being flushed out of the distribution system. Combustion of the unleaded petrol sold in that year resulted in the emission of 0·5 tonnes of lead.

However, use of this fuel rather than leaded petrol avoided the emission of 35 tonnes. In 1989, we expect that the remarkable increase in the use of unleaded petrol will avoid emissions of around 600 tonnes of lead.

Yorkshire's Water Environment

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the distribution of the NRA report entitled "Guarding Yorkshire's Water Environment"; what was the cost incurred in the production and distribution of this document; and how it was paid for.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I am informed by the NRA that its brochure, "Guarding Yorkshire's Water Environment", has been distributed to the media, local Members of Parliament, local authorities, NRA Yorkshire region staff and advisory committees, internal drainage boards and other relevant organisations. It is also made available to members of the public and others seeking information about the role of the NRA.

A total of 4,000 copies of the brochure were printed at a cost of £11,410, paid for out of the NRA Yorkshire region public relations budget. So far, around 2,000 have been distributed, mainly by post.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the percentage of rate fund revenue account income represented by rate support grant for each charging authority for (a) 1978-79 and (b) 1989-90; and if he will give the equivalent figure for revenue support grant in 1990-91.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 30 January 1990]: The available information has been placed in the Library.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will update the answer to the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East, of 28 July 1989, Official Report, columns 1200-2, listing all recent sources of legislation and official guidance on the operation of the community charge, and any further orders and regulations (a) laid before and agreed to by the House, (b) laid before, but not yet agreed to by the House and (c) yet to be laid before the House, giving in each case an outline of the area of implementation affected.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 5 February 1990]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Perry Barr (Mr. Rooker) on 17 January 1990, Official Report, column 254, which gave details of statutory instruments laid before Parliament up to that date. The other information requested is as follows:

Statutory Instruments laid before Parliament since 17 January 1990
The Relevant Population (England) Regulations 1990—23 January 1990.
The Charging Authorities (Notification of Population to Precepting Authorities) (England) Regulations 1990—23 January 1990.
The Standard Community Charge (Multipliers) Order—5 February 1990.
Community Charge (Co-owners) Regulations 1990—5 February 1990.

Statutory Instruments to be laid before Parliament
Form of the Community Charge and Rate Bill and accompanying information.
Exemption for the severely mentally impaired.
Exemption for 18 and 19 year olds in full-time non-higher education.
Other funds.
Levying bodies.
Payment to and from authorities.

Practice Notes issued to local authorities
Collection Fund—August 1989.
Students and the Community Charge—August 1989.
Transitional Relief Scheme for England—December 1989.

Environmental Protection Bill

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the organisations that have been sent a copy of the schedules of prescribed processes and substances under clause 2 of the Environmental Protection Bill.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 5 February 1990]: The current schedules of processes and substances are working drafts which have been made available to Standing Committee H to inform discussion of part I of the Environmental Protection Bill. They are not the subject of a public consultation exercise, because they do not yet incorporate our proposals for processes to be prescribed on account of special waste arisings, or for waste substances. The drafts will be finalised as soon as possible, and incorporated in a draft of the regulations provided for under clause 2 of the Bill. This will be published for comment as soon as it has been prepared.

Protected Species

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to include the brown hare on the wildlife and countryside list of protected species.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 5 February 1990]: We have no current plans to include the brown hare on the list of species protected under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981. Its position will be considered further during the Nature Conservancy Council's second quinquennial review of species protection under the 1981 Act, due in late 1991.

Newsprint

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will set out for the most recent year available a table showing for the United Kingdom (a) the total usage of waste newspapers, (b) the volume of imports of newsprint and (c) the volume of imports of newsprint from the United States of America.

Mr. Forth: I have been asked to reply.
The information requested is as follows:

	1988 (tonnes)
(a) Usage of newsprint-grade waste paper by United Kingdom paper and board manufacturers (see note below)	367,742
(b) Total imports of newsprint	1,458,953
(c) Imports of newsprint from the United States of America (included in (b))	601

Note: The above information has been provided by the British Paper & Board Industry Federation. The figure at (a) includes certain periodicals, magazines and telephone directories, as well as newspapers (for which no separate information is available).

Canals

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he next intends to meet the chairman of the British Waterways Board to discuss future policy for canals.

Mr. Chris Patten [pursuant to his reply, 24 January 1990, c. 742]: The Government have today published their response to the Environment Committee's report on the British Waterways Board. The Committee's report appeared at a significant stage in the management of the board's affairs and addressed some key issues which were under consideration by the Government. In our response, which reflects consultation with BWB where findings were directed at the board rather than the Government, we reply to the Committee's detailed recommendations and outline policy developments since the report was published.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Water Supplies (Disconnections)

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the latest figures for the number of people who were disconnected from their water supplies in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 2 February 1990]: In Northern Ireland, 292 metered water supplies were disconnected during 1989.

None of these supplies was for use by domestic households only.

Residents' Parking Permits

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has for introducing residents' parking permits in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 2 February 1990]: Legislation to permit the introduction of residents' parking schemes does not currently exist in Northern Ireland. Consideration is being given to taking enabling powers.

Stalker Inquiry

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the dates of formal requests from the Royal Ulster Constabulary to his Department for an investigation into alleged leaks emanating from the Stalker inquiry, specifying whether the requests were made verbally or in writing and his reasons for acceding to or refusing such requests.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 5 February 1990]: Requests were received both verbally and in writing on 20 June 1986. Further requests were made in writing on 18 July and 20 August 1986 and 1 March 1987 and verbally on 6 April 1987.

It was decided that in all the circumstances it would not be productive to mount a separate inquiry in an attempt to identify the individual or individuals alleged by Sir John Hermon to be leaking information from the inquiry by the Greater Manchester police into the Royal Ulster Constabulary.

ENERGY

National Grid Interconnector

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the present capacity of the national grid interconnector between Scotland and England; whether it has been operated at full capacity; and what works would be required to increase the capacity by specified percentages.

Mr. Baldry: This link is a matter for the electricity industry, and I will ask the chairman-designate of the National Grid to write to the hon. Member. However, I understand that the firm capacity available for transfers between Scotland and England in normal circumstances is about 850MW, but this depends on system conditions.

Electricity Supply Industry

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if, pursuant to his answer of 14 December 1989, Official Report, column 779, he will now publish in the Official Report the dates on which the reports of the constituent bodies of the electricity supply industry in England and Wales have been published in each year since nationalisation, either for existing or predecessor corporations.

Mr. Baldry: In recent years these reports have been published in the period late July to early August. In 1989 the Electricity Council and the Central Electricity Generating Board published theirs in December.

Connah's Quay Power Station

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will meet a deputation of Alyn and Deeside council concerning the future of the site of Connah's Quay power station.

Mr. Baldry: Decisions on the future of power station sites are presently a matter for the day-to-day management of the CEGB.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Drugs

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if, pursuant to his reply of 23 January, Official Report, columns 594-96, to the hon. Member for Warrington, South, he will describe the arrangements for monitoring actual expenditure and claims by local education authorities for initiatives aimed at combating the misuse of drugs; and if he will publish relevant details of actual expenditure for this purpose in recent years.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Expenditure on which local education authorities have claimed grant is as follows:

Financial year	Education support grant £ million	LEA training grants scheme £ million
1986-87	1·50	—
1987-88	2·22	1·28
1988-89	[1]2·40	1·60

[1] Figures for 6 local education authorities still to be submitted.

Grant is paid on the basis of claims from local education authorities, which must submit an auditor's certificate confirming that the claims have been made in accordance with the requirements of the programme in question.

Teachers

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many teachers have left the profession in each year since 1979.

Mr. Alan Howarth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave on Monday 8 January, (Official Report, columns 186-87) to the hon. Member for Vauxhall (Miss Hoey).

Special Education

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list by education authority (a) the total number of children in receipt of full-time compulsory education, (b) the total number of such children statemented as being in need of special educational provision and (c) the percentage of each authority's total thus statemented.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The total number of pupils in maintained primary, middle, secondary and special schools and the number and percentage with statements of special educational needs in each local education authority in England in January 1989 are given in the table. The number of pupils with statements includes all pupils in maintained special schools.

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what were the number and the percentage of pupils suspended (a) in each of the city technology colleges in their first year of operation and (b) in the education authority surrounding each of the city technology colleges.

Mr. Alan Howarth: No pupils have been excluded from Kingshurst (Solihull) or Macmillan (Teesside) city technology colleges, and four pupils (some 2 per cent.) have been temporarily excluded from Djanogly college (Nottingham) in their first year of operation. No pupils have been permanently excluded.

Over the same period in each case, 126 pupils (some 1 per cent.) in Solihull and 108 (0·3 per cent.) in Cleveland education authorities have been excluded from maintained secondary schools; and 67 (0·1 per cent.) have been permanently excluded in Nottinghamshire education authority. The authority does not keep records of temporary exclusions, since it regards these as simply a form of internal discipline.

Teachers' Pay

Sir Peter Hordern: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish a table showing the cost of teachers' salaries in each of the last five years, and the percentage increase in each year.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Spending by local education authorities in England on school teaching staff, including national insurance and superannuation, is recorded in the annual expenditure returns to the Department of the Environment. Spending in the last five years for which such data are available was as follows:

Year	£ million (Cash)	Year on year increase per cent.
1983-84	4,752	—
1984-85	4,946	4·1
1985-86	5,233	5·8
1986-87	5,765	10·2
1987-88	6,325	9·7

The changes in spending reflect changes in the number of teaching staff, as well as in teachers' salaries.

Capital Allocations

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what were the education capital allocations to each of the Tyne and Wear metropolitan boroughs in 1989-90 and 1990-91, in both cash and current prices; and what was the capital grant to city technology colleges in the Tyne and Wear area, in cash and current prices for the same years.

Mr. Alan Howarth: For 1989-90, local education authorities received capital allocations for education. With the introduction of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989, the Department has issued an annual capital guideline to each local education authority for 1990-91, which is one element in the calculation of each local authority's basic credit approval for 1990-91 announced by the Department of the Environment. Table A shows the figures for the Tyne and Wear area. Table B shows the estimated total capital expenditure for the new build for Tyneside's CTC, which will be divided on a ratio of 80:20, split between the Department and sponsors.

DEFENCE

United States Forces

4. Mr. Terry Fields: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what new facilities are being prepared in the United Kingdom for use by United States defence personnel.

54. Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what new facilities are being prepared in the United Kingdom for use by United States defence personnel.

113. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what new facilities are being prepared in the United Kingdom for use by United States defence personnel.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The United States maintains a continual programme of construction and works projects at its facilities in the United Kingdom. I understand that some 39 projects of various sizes are currently under construction for United States forces in this country. Around 120 further projects are currently at some stage in the design process. These totals include both United States and NATO-funded projects.

84. Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contribution United States military forces make to the defence of the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

112. Mr. Fishburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the contribution United States military forces make to the defence of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The United States makes the largest single contribution to the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation, membership of which is fundamental to the defence of the United Kingdom.

European Co-operative Long-Term Initiative for Defence

14. Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much money his Department has committed to the European co-operative long-term initiative for defence.

Mr. Alan Clark: No money has yet been committed by any nation to this initiative. We expect that the first detailed collaborative programmes will be agreed in the course of this year. The precise extent of United Kingdom funding will then become clearer and will come from moneys voted for defence research.

Greenham Common

15. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his latest plans for the future use of RAF Greenham common.

116. Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his latest plans for the future use of RAF Greenham common.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The remaining ground-launched cruise missiles are due to be withdrawn from RAF Greenham common by May 1991. After that date the station will remain available to the United States Air Force and revert to its former role as a standby operating base.

In addition the station will continue to provide support to RAF Welford and under the terms of the INF treaty it will remain subject to short-notice inspection by the Soviet Union until the year 2001. It will also remain the designated point of entry to the United Kingdom for Soviet inspection teams wishing to visit either Greenham common or Molesworth.

Conventional Forces in Europe

16. Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications of an elimination of the imbalance of conventional forces in Europe for the procurement of theatre nuclear weapons.

93. Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications of an elimination of the imbalance of conventional forces in Europe for the procurement of theatre nuclear weapons.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications of an elimination of the imbalance of conventional forces in Europe for the procurement of theatre nuclear weapons.

Mr. Tom King: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen).

European Fighter Aircraft

17. Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current position regarding Ferranti's interest in the contract for radar to be fitted to the European fighter aircraft.

32. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the reasons for his Department's choice of the Ferranti radar system for the EFA project.

Mr. Alan Clark: At this stage I have nothing to add to the information I gave the House during the Adjournment debate on 23 January 1990, Hansard, col. 869-72.

26. Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the European fighter aircraft.

Mr. Alan Clark: I have nothing to add to what I told the hon. Member on 23 January, col. 869-72.

81. Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evaluation he has made of the need for the European fighter aircraft following the reduction of tension in Europe in the past year.

Mr. Alan Clark: While we welcome moves towards a reduction in tension in Europe, there will be a continuing need to ensure the future air defence of the United Kingdom and of British forces wherever they may be located. We expect EFA to play a key role in this.

Property Services Agency

18. Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the implications for the security of military installations of privatisation of the Property Services Agency.

52. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the implications for the security of military installations of privatisation of the Property Services Agency.

89. Mr. Buckley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the implications for the security of military installations of privatisation of the Property Services Agency.

101. Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has give to the future of defence security following the privatisation of the Property Services Agency; and if he will make a statement.

119. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the implications for the security of military installations of privatisation of the Property Services Agency.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the implications for the security of military installations of privatisation of the Property Services Agency.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The arrangements for the security of military installations will not be adversely affected by the privatisation of the Property Services Agency.

Ambulance Services

19. Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost of the armed services covering civilian ambulance services.

95. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the cost of the armed services covering civilian ambulance services.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Up to 31 December 1989 extra costs in the region of £1·9 million have been reported for recovery by the Ministry of Defence from the Department of Health, the Scottish Home and Health Department and the Welsh Office.

Flying Accidents

20. Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many civilians have died as the result of Royal Air Force flying accidents in the United Kingdom in the last 10 years.

Mr. Neubert: One civilian has died as a result of Royal Air Force flying accidents in the United Kingdom in the last 10 years. The fatality occurred during a search and rescue mission.

Trident

21. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next expects to meet his American counterpart to discuss the development of the Trident missile system.

Mr. Tom King: As I mentioned earlier in my answer to the hon. Member for Denton and Reddish (Mr. Bennett), I met the United States Defence Secretary in the course of my visit to the United States last week. I expect to meet him again during this year at NATO ministerial meetings.

79. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) defective and (b) successful test firings there have been of the Trident D5 missile; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: In 1989 the United States navy completed a series of 19 land-based Trident II D5 development test firings, of which 16 were successful (one partial), one was destroyed in error by the test range authorities, and two were unsuccessful. The United States navy is currently undertaking a series of submarine-launched test firings of the Trident II D5 missile of which there have been six successful and two unsuccessful flights. The causes of all unsuccessful flights have been diagnosed and corrected.

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will make a further statement on progress on the Trident programme.

56. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress being made on the Trident programme.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer my hon. Friend and the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 31 January at columns 207-08, and to the detailed report on Trident which was placed in the Library of the House on the same day.

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his latest estimate of the cost of the Trident programme.

41. Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his latest estimate of the cost of the Trident programme.

65. Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his latest estimate of the cost of the Trident programme.

110. Mr. Heffer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his latest estimate of the cost of the Trident programme.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer the hon. Members to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 31 January at columns 207-08.

Defence Manufacturing

22. Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what level of employment in defence manufacturing industry he estimates there will be in the year 2000.

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what level of employment in defence manufacturing industry he estimates there will be in the year 2000.

37. Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes he estimates there will be in the number of jobs in the defence manufacturing industries over the next five years; and if he will make a statement.

76. Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what level of employment in defence manufacturing industry he estimates there will be in the year 2000.

92. Mr. Leyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what level of employment in defence manufacturing industry he estimates there will be in the year 2000.

Mr. Alan Clark: It is not for my Department to make general estimates of the future level of employment in private companies.

Nuclear Test Veterans

23. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his Australian counterpart about compensation for nuclear test veterans.

38. Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his Australian counterpart about compensation for nuclear test veterans.

58. Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his Australian counterpart about compensation for nuclear test veterans.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces met a member of the Australian Federal Government last October to discuss a number of issues, including the question of compensation being sought for nuclear test veterans.

64. Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his United States counterpart about compensation for nuclear test veterans.

Mr. Warning: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his United States counterpart about compensation for nuclear test veterans.

122. Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his United States counterpart about compensation for nuclear test veterans.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Government have had no discussions with the United States authorities on this issue.

Air Defence

24. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department is making of Britain's future air defence needs.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The future air defence needs of the United Kingdom are kept under constant review.

Nuclear Weapons

25. Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he proposes to reduce the number of scientists employed in nuclear weapons development and construction.

78. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he proposes to reduce the number of scientists employed in nuclear weapons development and construction.

85. Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he proposes to reduce the number of scientists employed in nuclear weapons development and construction.

Mr. Neubert: No.

62. Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of total accumulated defence expenditure, actual and anticipated, on nuclear weapons, including associated research in the years 1988 to 1991.

70. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of total accumulated defence expenditure, actual and anticipated, on nuclear weapons, including associated research in the years 1988 to 1991.

87. Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of total accumulated defence expenditure, actual and anticipated, on nuclear weapons, including associated research in the years 1988 to 1991.

Mr. Alan Clark: Estimated expenditure for 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90 on the strategic nuclear force is shown in table 2.3 of volume 2 of the 1989 Statement on the Defence Estimates. Estimated expenditure for 1990-91 will be published in the 1990 Statement on the Defence Estimates.

Expenditure Reductions

27. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has identified any possible savings in defence expenditure over the next five years.

34. Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has identified any possible savings in defence expenditure over the next five years.

45. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has identified any possible savings in defence expenditure over the next five years.

102. Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has identified any possible savings in defence expenditure over the next five years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In the 1980s major improvements have been achieved in procurement practices, in the cost-effective use of manpower and in reducing other operating costs through measures to increase efficiency. Savings from these and further such measures will continue to increase the value we get from the defence budget. I refer the hon. Members to the essay on the new management strategy on pages 43-44 of the Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989, vol. 1 (Cm. 675-1).

50. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications for United Kingdom defence spending of the recently announced United States defence budget.

71. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications for United Kingdom defence spending of the recently announced United States defence budget.

75. Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications for United Kingdom defence spending of the recently announced United States defence budget.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The plans for United Kingdom defence expenditure in the years to 1992-93 reflect our assessment of the sums necessary to maintain our security and sustain our responsibilities within the NATO Alliance. The United States defence budget proposals now before Congress do not alter that assessment.

United States Secretary for Defence

28. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next intends to meet the United States Secretary for Defence; and what subjects he proposes to raise.

118. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next intends to meet the United States Secretary for Defence; and what matters he intends to discuss.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend had discussions with Secretary Cheney in Washington on 30 January on a range of matters of mutual interest. He expects to meet him again later this year at NATO ministerial meetings.

Racial Discrimination

29. Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action has been taken in response to the Commission for Racial Equality report on racial discrimination in the Army.

97. Mr. Cabora: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action has been taken in response to the Commission for Racial Equality report on racial discrimination in the Army.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I am not aware of a report by the Commission for Racial Equality on racial discrimination in the Army. The hon. Members may have in mind the report commissioned by my Department into ethnic minority recruitment into the armed services—a report which we have recently made widely available. I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Stamford and Spalding (Mr. Davies) on 23 January which set out in detail the action we shall be taking on the recommendations in the report.

Defence Establishments (Security)

30. Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will initiate an inquiry into security measures at defence establishments.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Security measures at our defence establishments are regularly reviewed.

Volunteer Reserves

31. Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contribution the volunteer reserves make to the United Kingdom defence capability.

115. Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contribution the volunteer reserves make to the United Kingdom defence capability.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer my hon. Friends to the essay at page 28 of the Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989, vol. 1, Cmnd. 675-1.

Disablement Pensions

33. Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will bring forward proposals to increase the levels of pension for the war disabled.

67. Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will bring forward proposals to increase the levels of pension for the war disabled.

108. Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will bring forward proposals to increase the levels of pension for the war disabled.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No. The levels of pensions for the war disabled are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security.

United Nations Forces

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what part British service personnel play in United Nations international peacekeeping and monitoring activities.

99. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what part British service personnel play in United Nations international peacekeeping and monitoring activities.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer my hon. Friends to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Dover (Mr. Shaw).

European Security

36. Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contribution the United Kingdom is making to confidence and security-building measures in Europe.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The United Kingdom is playing a full part, together with its allies, in the CSBM talks now under way in Vienna.

Military Doctrines Seminar

39. Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the defence implications of the recent seminar on military doctrines involving NATO and Warsaw pact senior officers.

57. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the defence implications of the recent seminar on military doctrines, involving NATO and Warsaw pact senior officers.

104. Mr. Buchan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the defence implications of the recent seminar on military doctrines, involving NATO and Warsaw pact senior officers.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the defence implications of the recent seminar on military doctrines involving NATO and Warsaw pact senior officers.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The military doctrine seminar which concluded in Vienna on 5 February, and which involved representatives of all the 35 states of the Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe (CSCE) process, was an important and useful opportunity to exchange views, put forward our own thinking, and explore that of other nations.

Light Attack Helicopter

40. Mr. Duffy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has completed his inquiry into evaluation of light attack helicopter alternatives.

Mr. Alan Clark: Not yet.

Land Holdings (Wales)

42. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many acres of land are owned at the present time by his Department in Wales.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: At 1 April 1989, the latest date for which figures are available, MOD land holdings in Wales, including freehold and leasehold land and foreshore, stood at 52,038 acres.

Nuclear Weapons (Anglo-French Co-operation)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on current Anglo-French co-operation on nuclear weapon development.

Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on current Anglo-French co-operation on nuclear weapon development.

44. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on current Anglo-French co-operation on nuclear weapon development.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Bristol, South (Ms. Primarolo).

Type 23 Frigates

46. Mr. Barry Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next expects to place an order for a type 23 frigate for the Royal Navy.

60. Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to place a further order for a type 23 frigate for the Royal Navy.

Mr. Neubert: The Government remain committed to maintaining a force of about 50 destroyers and frigates, and we will place sufficient orders to meet that commitment. We announced an order for three type 23 frigates on 19 December 1989, col. 197. We hope to invite tenders for a further batch of type 23s later this year. A decision on the size and timing of an order will be made once tenders are submitted by shipyards.

Toxic Chemicals

47. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy on the disposal of toxic chemicals after use by the armed forces.

Mr. Alan Clark: Toxic chemicals are disposed of through contracts laid by the Ministry of Defence with licensed disposal companies.

Ethnic Minorities

48. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action has been taken in response to the report by Peat Marwick McLintock on recruitment of ethnic minorities into the armed services.

61. Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action has been taken in response to the report by Peat Marwick McLintock on recuitment of ethnic minorities into the armed services.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Stamford and Spalding (Mr. Davies) on 23 January 1990 at col. 588-89.

91. Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many recruits to the armed forces in 1989 year were of Afro-Caribbean or Asian origin; and how many service personnel of similar background left.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The provisional results of the survey of ethnic origins of applicants to the armed forces during the financial year 1988-89, the latest period for which figures are available, indicate that 121 recruits classified themselves as Caribbean, 26 as African and 64 as Asian. Figures for those who left the armed forces are not available.

Eastern Europe

49. Mr Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to reduce defence expenditure in the light of the new situation in Europe.

98. Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to review the planned level of defence spending in the light of the changing situation in the USSR and eastern Europe.

83. Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact on future defence policy of recent events in eastern Europe.

Mr. Trednnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes in defence policy have taken place since the recent changes in Governments in eastern Europe.

Mr. Tom King: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Gainsborough and Horncastle (Mr. Leigh).

96. Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what reassessment of the threat to the United Kingdom he is making following the recent changes in eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We keep all potential threats to the United Kingdom under constant review.

NATO Defence Ministers

51. Mr. Douglas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next expects to attend a meeting of NATO Defence Ministers; what topics he expects to raise; and if he will make a statement.

55. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will next meet his NATO counterparts to discuss the military implications of the reforms currently taking place in eastern Europe.

Mr. Tom King: I will attend a meeting of the independent European programme group later this month. A range of issues of mutual interest will be discussed.

86. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next intends to meet the Secretary-General of NATO; and what subjects he proposes to raise.

114. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next intends to meet the Secretary-General of NATO to discuss future NATO strategy in the light of the Vienna talks on conventional forces in Europe.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend regularly meets the Secretary-General of NATO. The next scheduled meeting is at the NATO nuclear planning group in early May, when a wide range of issues of mutual interest will be discussed.

Disaster Relief

53. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what role his Department plays in disaster relief.

111. Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what role his Department plays in disaster relief.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence is always willing to respond positively to requests for military assistance in disaster relief at home and abroad. For an account of the part played by the armed forces in disaster relief operations during 1989, I refer my hon. Friends to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Nuneaton (Mr. Stevens) on 24 October 1989 at column 430.

With the recent spate of bad weather, all three services have been engaged in a range of military assistance to the civil community tasks. Much effort has been directed at helping electricity boards to clear roads blocked by trees toppled during the gales, mobile generators have been supplied for a variety of purposes and service accommodation has been made available to house the homeless. Should it be needed, military units are standing ready to provide assistance to communities at risk from flooding.

Defence Exports

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the overall value of defence exports for the past six months.

59. Mr. Kirkhope: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the overall value of defence exports for the last six months.

Mr. Alan Clark: Figures for the overall value of defence exports are calculated on an annual basis. New contracts signed in 1988 are expected to be worth some £3,500 million. The figure for 1989 is not yet available.

Defence Act 1854 (Repeal)

63. Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will bring forward proposals to repeal the Defence Act 1854.

69. Mr. Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will bring forward proposals to repeal the Defence Act 1854.

82. Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will bring forward proposals to repeal the Defence Act 1854.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will bring forward proposals to repeal the Defence Act 1854.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No.

Service Personnel (Benefits)

66. Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what advice is given to armed service personnel and their families about their eligibility for social security and housing benefits and poll tax rebate.

94. Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what advice is given to armed service personnel and their families about their eligibility for social security and housing benefits and poll tax rebate.

Mr. Neubert: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Ogmore (Mr. Powell).

Strategic Nuclear Weapons

68. Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning the implications for British defence policy of progress in the talks for the reduction of strategic nuclear weapons.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We support the efforts of the United States and Soviet Governments to achieve deep cuts in strategic offensive nuclear weapons. The Government's policy remains as set out in paragraph 215 of the Statement on the Defence Estimates 1989 Cm. 675-1.

Tank Movements, Wiltshire

72. Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has any plans to visit Durrington and Amesbury in Wiltshire to discuss tank movements.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has no current plans to do so.

Defence Review

73. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to institute a defence review.

106. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to institute a defence review.

Mr. Tom King: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Gainsborough and Horncastle (Mr. Leigh).

Low Flying

74. Mr. Harry Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many mid-air collisions have happened between low-flying aircraft that were not part of the same formation for each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Neubert: The table gives the numbers of mid-air collisions between low-flying British military aircraft which were not part of the same formation for each of the last 10 years:

1980	0
1981	0
1982	1
1983	0
1984	1
1985	2
1986	0
1987	1
1988	1
1989	1
1990	1

109. Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will introduce an annual moratorium on low flying during the lambing season.

Mr. Neubert: No.

117. Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many aircraft have been written off as a result of accidents in low flying training since 1979; and what has been the total cost of these aircraft at 1989 prices.

Mr. Neubert: Since 1 January 1979 104 British military aircraft have been written off as a result of accidents while undertaking low flying training. As my hon. Friend the Member for Hove (Mr. Sainsbury) announced on 14 December 1987 (col. 411), it is no longer our practice to publish unit production costs. This precludes us from giving the total cost of military aircraft destroyed in accidents over any specified period since, by varying the period, commercial in confidence information could be deduced.

Research

77. Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of his Department's research contracts are currently placed with United Kingdom universities and other institutions of higher education.

Mr. Neubert: The Ministry of Defence has currently 745 research agreements and 106 research contracts placed with a wide range of United Kingdom universities and other institutions of higher education.

US Construction Budget

80. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has regarding the United States fiscal year 1991 military construction budget for bases and facilities in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I understand from information provided by the United States authorities that funding approval is being sought from their fiscal year 1991 budget for the following military construction projects in the United Kingdom:

High Wycombe Air Station
- Dormitory

RAF Alconbury
- Add to and alter dormitories
- Add to and alter physical fitness centre

RAF Bentwaters
- Post Office
- Conventional munitions shop
- Field training facility

RAF Chicksands
- Satellite communications facility

RAF Lakenheath
- Add to and alter dormitory
- Alter munitions storage

RAF Mildenhall
- Add to physical fitness centre

RAF Molesworth
- Joint Analysis Centre

Systems Controllerates

88. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the possible centralisation of the sea systems controllerate and other procurement executive staff within the travel-to-work area of Keynsham and Bath.

Mr. Neubert: Studies have been carried out into the relocation of the procurement executive's land and air systems controllerates and associated staff away from central London, and into the collocation of the sea systems controllerate. We are now consulting the MOD trade union side on the results of these studies, as is usual in such matters. A final decision will be taken only in the light of the outcome of these consultations and a full statement will be made at the appropriate time.

F-15E Aircraft

90. Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has received any proposals to station F-15E aircraft of the United States Air Force in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: NATO is considering a number of options for adjusting its remaining nuclear forces following the signature of the INF treaty. These options include the possible deployment to Europe, including the United Kingdom, of longer-range dual capable aircraft from the United States. However, no decisions have yet been taken.

West German Defence Minister

100. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next intends to meet the West German Secretary of State for Defence; and what matters he intends to raise.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next expects to meet his West German counterpart; and what matters he will discuss.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend will be meeting Dr. Stoltenberg in Scotland later this month. I expect that a wide range of issues of mutual interest will be discussed.

Royal Army Veterinary Corps

103. Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress is being made with his review of the Royal Army Veterinary Corps, Melton Mowbray.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Further work is continuing in the light of the Ministry of Defence's consideration of the study by Peat Marwick McLintock into future arrangements for canine and equine-related training in the services.

Tactical Nuclear Weapons

Sir Anthony Meyer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had in the current year with his NATO colleagues about the modernisation of tactical nuclear weapons.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has met a number of his principal NATO colleagues over recent weeks. NATO's agreed position of maintaining an appropriate mix of adequate, effective and up-to-date nuclear forces was among a number of items discussed.

Colombia

107. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on British military assistance to the Government of Colombia in their fight against the drug trade.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: At the request of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and as part of Her Majesty's Government's package of assistance to the Colombian Government, training is being provided to the Colombian law enforcement authorities in a number of areas including bomb disposal, close protection of VIPs and riverine patrolling. Royal Navy vessels in the area are also periodically deployed to provide maritime surveillance assistance to Colombia.

Infantry Battalions

120. Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is (a) the full complement and (b) the average strength of infantry battalions.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The complement of an infantry battalion varies between about 590 and 680 officers and men according to its specific task at the time. As at 30 November 1989, the average strength across all infantry battalions was just over 580. These figures do not include Gurkha battalions, which have four rifle companies rather than the usual three, or infantry personnel employed in areas outside line battalions.

British Army of the Rhine

121. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next expects to visit units of the British Army of the Rhine.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence hopes to take an early opportunity to visit the British Army of the Rhine. I visited the Commander-in-Chief BAOR on 24-25 January.

East Germany

123. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with his NATO counterparts on the possible military status of East Germany in the event of German reunification.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has had regular discussions with his NATO counterparts on a wide range of matters of mutual interest.

German Reunification

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the implications for defence policy of the initiatives being taken by the West German Government on German reunification.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We continue to believe that NATO will remain the foundation of western security and welcome the West German Government's continuing commitment to the Alliance.

Training Deaths

Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service men died in training during the last year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In 1988, the last year for which figures are available, the deaths of 14 service personnel were recorded as being attributable to injuries sustained during exercises or training. This figure excludes the Gurkhas and members of the Ulster Defence Regiment and the reserve forces.

National Sports Centre, Cardiff

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Londonderry, East of 30 January, on what date the report into the conditions of the national sports centre, Cardiff indoor firearms range was made.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The range was inspected on 8 August 1989 and a copy of the subsequent report was sent to the Sports Council for Wales on 15 August 1989.

Mr. Hugh Mooney

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the role of Mr. Hugh Mooney in HQ Northern Ireland.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Mr. Mooney was an information adviser to the General Officer Commanding.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Student Loans

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many studies were undertaken by his Department, or on behalf of his Department, to consider alternatives to the currently proposed student top-up loan scheme.

Mr. Jackson: A wide range of options has been considered in advice from officials to Ministers.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his estimate of the number of loans that will have been made to students under the Education (Student Loans) Bill by (a) October 1990, (b) November 1990 and (c) December 1990.

Mr. Jackson: On the basis of a take-up rate of 80 per cent., some 455,000 students are likely to receive top-up loans in the 1990-91 academic year. Students will be able to apply at any time in the year; many will no doubt do so in the first few months.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he has yet written to higher education institutions inviting them to discuss arrangements over certification for student loans.

Mr. Jackson: My right hon. Friend has written to the chairmen of representative bodies of higher education institutions inviting them to meet him to discuss their role in the top-up loans scheme.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will place in the Library copies of all studies undertaken by his Department which considered (a) the currently proposed top-up loan scheme and (b) alternatives to the proposed scheme.

Mr. Jackson: No. Advice from departmental officials to Ministers is confidential.

Information Technology

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the amount of funds received by each local authority in each of the last five years for information technology purposes.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Several activities for which my right hon. Friend has allocated funds under the education support grant programme and the local education authority training grants scheme (and its predecessor the in-service teacher training grants scheme) support spending on information technology (IT). The relevant allocations of expenditure supported for the past five years are shown in the following tables. The grants paid under these programmes are additional to the general rate support grant which local authorities receive, and which they may use for IT purposes within education. Local authorities may also receive funds relating to the use of IT within education from other Government Departments and through contributions from private sources.

Notes to tables:

1. The main Education Support Grant programmes which have supported spending on Information Technology, and which are listed in the tables, are:

i. Micros for SEN (the provision of microelectronic equipment designed or adapted for use by children with special educational needs (SEN)).

ii. IT in NAFE (the development of the use of information technology at non-advanced further education (NAFE) establishments).

iii. CMIS (computerised management information systems —the provision of data processing equipment, accessories and software for use in the management of further education establishments).

iv. Special needs in FE (the provision of computerised learning aids at further education establishments for use by students with special educational needs).
v. IT in Schools (the promotion of information technology as an aid to learning in schools).
vi. LMS (the provision of management information systems for use in connection with schemes for local management of schools).

2. Projects supported under certain other ESG activities may also have had some IT element.

3. The allocations shown for the LMS activity in 1989-90 and 1990-91 are the total allocations for that activity. IT for management information systems is only one of the categories of expenditure covered by the activity, which also covers staff training and the provision of central LEA support. The IT element within the total sum for the activity was £12 million in the 1989-90 programme and £23 million in the 1990-91 programme. This element cannot be separately identified within the allocations to individual LEAs.

4. The Local Education Authority Training Grants Scheme (LEATGS) replaced the former In-Service Teacher Training Grants Scheme in April 1987. The allocations given for the LEATGS show the expenditure supported under the relevant National Priority Areas. Local Education Authorities are free to add to those sums from the allocations made under the LEATGS in support of local priorities, or from their other sources of income.

5. In the 1989-90 LEATGS programme, the National Priority Area shown in the Table as "IT/Subject Competence" covered training to develop competence in the teaching of technical, commercial or professional subjects in the light of recent developments in industry, commerce or the professions, including the teaching of IT and its integration across the curriculum. The element for IT cannot be separately identified within the allocations to individual LEAs.

6. The rate at which grant is paid in support of the allocations shown in the tables has varied.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about the percentage of the education support grant which has been allocated to information technology in each of the last five years.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Various aspects of information technology (IT) have been supported through a range of activities within education support grant (ESG) programmes over the last five years. These activities include those relating to IT as an aid to learning in schools, IT for pupils with special educational needs in schools, local management of schools, computerised management information systems for colleges, IT as an aid to learning in further education, and IT for students with special educational needs in further education. The proportion of the total ESG programme accounted for by the allocations for these activities is:

	per cent.
1986-87	11
1987-88	9
1988-89	24
1989-90	35
1990-91	34

In addition, projects supported under certain other ESG activities may have had some IT element.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his policy on the level of spending on information technology over the next two years.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. Friend considers that, within the resources available to the education service, the level of spending on information technology (IT) should take account of the requirements of the Education Reform Act as well as reflecting the wider benefits which pupils, students, teachers and others can derive from the use of IT. In relation to schools and colleges, it is for each local education authority, and under local management, the institutions concerned, to determine the level of spending consistent with this approach, in the light of local circumstances. My right hon. Friend is continuing to support such spending through the LEA training grants scheme (LEATGS) and education support grants (ESGs). The LEATGS allocations for 1990-91 were announced on 18 December and the ESG allocations on 18 January. Together they will support at least £55 million of spending on IT. My right hon. Friend will be announcing his proposals for the ESG and LEATGS programmes for 1991-92 in due course.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 7 February 1990

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Civil Legal Aid

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Attorney-General (1) how many applications for civil legal aid certificates were (a) granted and (b) refused; and what percentage this was of the whole in 1987, 1988 and 1989;

(2) how many applications were received for civil legal aid certificates in 1987, 1988 and 1989.

The Attorney-General: All information about civil legal aid is contained in the legal aid annual reports which are laid before Parliament each year and are available in the Library. The most recent report provides information to 31 March 1989.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Attorney-General how many prosecutions have taken place in each of the last five years for fraudulent completion of legal aid certificate applications.

The Attorney-General: The legal aid board took over responsibility from the Law Society on 1 April 1989. Since that date there has been one prosecution for fraudulent completion of a legal aid certificate application, mounted by the legal aid board. There were no prosecutions in the preceding four years. The legal aid authorities do not maintain records of police prosecutions.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Attorney-General (1) how many complaints his Department has received regarding erroneous or fraudulent applications for assessments of grant for legal aid;

(2) how many revocations of civil legal aid certificates there were during (a) 1987, (b) 1988 and (c) 1989 as a result of reassessment following information or complaints received.

The Attorney-General: Complaints regarding erroneous or fraudulent applications for assessment of grant for legal aid are dealt with either by the legal aid board or by the legal aid assessment office, Department of Social Security, Preston. Any allegation will lead to a re-examination of the application. Statistics about complaints and any consequent revocations of civil legal aid certificates are not at present maintained, but the legal aid board is introducing new management information and computer systems.

Judges

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Attorney-General how many judges have been removed from office for each year since 1980 for (a) incapacity, (b) misconduct and (c) any other reason.

The Attorney-General: One circuit judge was removed from office in 1983 for misconduct under the powers given to the Lord Chancellor in section 17(4) of the Courts Act 1971.

Criminal Cases

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Attorney-General if, pursuant to his answer of 29 January, he will give the nature of the charge before the court in relation to each of the criminal cases in the Crown court, to the legal aid costs of which he refers.

The Attorney-General: The highest payments, referred to in the answer of 29 January, to a solicitor and counsel were in respect of offences of fraud.

PRIME MINISTER

Germany (Unification)

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Prime Minister what steps are required to be taken by the Governments of the United States of America, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, France and the United Kingdom in drawing up a peace treaty with Germany in the event of reunification; and if she will list the treaty or other provisions governing the changes which may take place in the status of the Federal and Democratic Republics of Germany in advance of a peace treaty.

The Prime Minister: A number of agreements and treaties would need to be amended or abolished in the event of unification of the two German states. The precise details would need to be discussed with our partners and allies.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Audit Policy

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has any proposals for investigating the validity of audit opinions, in the light of the Ferranti, Barlow Clowes, Johnson Matthey and de Lorean affairs.

Mr. Redwood: No.

Inward Investment

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will identify the amount of inward investment announced to all areas of the United Kingdom by economic region in each of the last three years for which he has figures available.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Garscadden (Mr. Dewar) on 1 February at column 290, which contains the information sought.

Manufactured Exports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will show by volume and value British manufactured exports in the last available quarter going to (a) the European Economic Community, (b) West Germany, (c) the United States of America, (d) the European Free Trade Association, (e) France and (f) the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance.

Mr. Redwood: Information on exports of manufactures from the United Kingdom is published in table V of Business Monitor MM20 "Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom" held in the House of Commons Library.

Manufacturing Imports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the share of British manufacturing imports in the last available quarter of 1989 coming from (a) the European Economic Community, (b) West Germany, (c) the United States of America, (d) the European Free Trade Association, (e) France and (f) the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance.

Mr. Redwood: Information on imports of manufactures by the United Kingdom is published in table II of Business Monitor MM20 "Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom" held in the House of Commons Library.

Regional Policy

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when his review of regional policy will be completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Regional policy is kept under continuing review. As already announced a consultant's study is currently looking at various aspects of English Estates' activities. The House will be kept informed.

Computer Security

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps his Department has taken, and is taking, to improve the security of its computer systems.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My Department follows CCTA advice on analysis of security risks and requirements using structured methods such as CCTA's risk analysis and management and methodology (CRAMM) which has also been made commercially available. A departmental IT security steering group was established in 1988 to assess requirements and determine policy. For unclassified but sensitive systems a review was carried out recently and the results are now being implemented. More stringent conditions apply to classified systems.

Textiles

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current balance of trade in the textile industry.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Latest available figures show that imports of textiles (SITC division 65) exceeded exports by £1,576 million in the 12 months to November 1989.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to meet other European Community Ministers to discuss the textile industry.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 5 February 1990]: The textile industry is often covered in the frequent meetings my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I have with our Community colleagues. It was last discussed at the Industry Council meeting on 14 November, which I attended. I anticipate that the subject will be discussed again at the next meeting scheduled for 13 March.

Preventable Loss

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will list the number of professionally qualified loss-prevention staff employed by his Department and the qualifications held by such staff, excluding qualifications obtained during police or military service.

Mr. Forth: All departmental staff have a duty to prevent loss. There are 14 professionally qualified staff in the Department's internal audit branch.

Small Companies (Audit)

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to remove the audit requirement from small companies.

Mr. Redwood: No.

Renaval Programme

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a further statement on the operation of the European Economic Community's Renaval programme in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 5 February 1990]: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave to my hon. Friends the Members for Tynemouth (Mr. Trotter) and for Langbaurgh (Mr. Holt) on 2 February in regard to applications for Tyne and Wear and Middlesbrough and Langbaurgh districts. The Government are considering what other applications might be made.

DTI Structure

Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has for the future structure of his Department.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what plans he has for the future structure of his Department.

Mr. Ridley: I am reviewing various aspects of the work of my Department, but have no changes to announce at present.

ENVIRONMENT

Toxic Waste

87. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make further representations to the United States of America concerning the export of toxic or hazardous waste to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Trippier: I have discussed the problem of the waste at Wath with the United States deputy chief of mission in London and made clear my concern over the continued presence of this waste in the United Kingdom. I understand that he will be raising the matter with the appropriate authorities in the United States. Future discussions on the resolution of this issue will cover the wider implications for arrangements for the movement of waste between our two countries.

Inner Urban Aid

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the allocation of inner urban aid for Lambeth council of (a) 1988-89, (b) 1989-90 and (c) 1990-91.

Mr. Moynihan: The provisional urban programme allocations for Lambeth council for the years 1988-89 to 1990-91 are as follows:

	1988-89 (£m)	1989-90 (£m)	1990-91 (£m)
Lambeth	11·75 1	9·932	9·280

Hertfordshire County Council

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out a table showing (a) the number of full-time employees and (b) the number of part-time employees of Hertfordshire county council in (i) June 1981, (ii) June 1985 and (iii) June 1989.

Mr. Chope: The information is as follows:

Hertfordshire County Council: All Services (at June)

	1981	1985	1989
Full-time	21,724	20,374	[1]
Part-time	18,569	15,365	[1]
Total	40,293	35,739	[1]

[1] Data not available.

Special Education

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out the formula used for calculating the financial needs of each education authority for the provision of special education and list by authority the sum included in the total standard spending assessment for 1990-91 for the provision of special education and for giving special help to children statemented as being in special need.

Mr. Chope: The formula for calculating the standard spending assessment for education is set out in the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England) which is in the Library. The assessment takes account of special needs by means of an index of additional educational needs which reflects additional needs of various kinds and is used to distribute 24 per cent. of the total SSA element for education. This covers both additional costs arising from special education and special support in ordinary schools. It is not possible to identify within this a separate element for statemented children.

Local Government Expenditure

Sir Peter Hordern: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the increase in local government expenditure in each of the last five years; and if he will express the cost of teachers' salaries as a proportion of the whole in each of these years.

Mr. David Hunt: The available information is as follows:

	Percentage increase in total expenditure over previous year	Cost of teachers' salaries as percentage of total expenditure
1985-86[1]	1·8	24·2
1986-87	9·5	24·3
1987-88	8·2	24·6
1988-89	8·4	n/a
1989-90[2]	6·2	n/a

[1] London Regional Transport was transferred from local authority sector in 1985-86.

[2] Polytechnics were transferred from the local authority sector in April 1989.

n/a = not available.

Total local authority spending covers rate fund revenue account net current expenditure on services plus net loan charges, contributions to other funds and accounts (eg. special funds and HRA) and net non-relevant expenditure (eg. net spending on housing benefit), less specific and supplementary grants.

The cost of teachers' salaries covers spending on school teaching staff, including national insurance and superannuation.

Rents and Rates

Sir Peter Hordern: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the total and annual increase in local authority rents and domestic rates in each of the last five years.

Mr. David Hunt: Information for England is as follows:

Local authority rents

	Average unrebated rent £ per week	Increase over previous year per cent.	Cumulative increase since 1984-85 per cent.
1985-86	15·63	6	6
1986-87	16·48	5	11
1987-88	17·40	6	18
1988-89	19·01	9	29
1989-90	[1]20·83	10	41

173	8	8
197	14	23
210	7	31
229	9	43
250	9	56

[1] Domestic rate poundage is the average rate (in pence) per £ of rateable value levied on domestic properties.

Community Charge

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance he has given community charge registration officers on the status as students for the purposes of poll tax of members of Her Majesty's forces undergoing courses of training.

Mr. Chope: There has been no specific guidance from this Department on this issue. General guidance on determining eligibility for the student relief is contained in "The Community Charge": Students and the Community Charge" (Community Charge Practice Note No. 23) which has been sent to all community charge registration officers. A copy is in the Library.

Opencast Mines

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many appeals against refusal of planning permission for opencast mines in county Durham are outstanding.

Mr. Moynihan: Three.

Bellwin Scheme

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether, in his review of the Bellwin scheme, he will consider giving direct funding from central Government in the form of severe weather payments to local authorities.

Mr. Chope: The purpose of the review will be to consider how to adapt the Bellwin scheme given the new local government finance system.

The principles underlying the scheme have been that the primary responsibility for dealing with emergencies lies with local authorities, but central Government assistance may be given exceptionally where otherwise an excessive burden would fall on ratepayers or chargepayers. These principles will remain.

Bathing Waters

Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which United Kingdom bathing waters failed to meet European Community standards for salmonella bacteria in the 1989 bathing waters survey.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Environment announced on 25 January, (Official Report, 25 January 1990, column 785) the results of the 1989 survey of bathing waters for England and Wales, and stated that a detailed summary of the results would be placed in the Library. Detailed results for individual waters, including numbers of samples taken for particular parameters and the number of these which failed to meet the directive's mandatory standards, are given in this report, copies of which have now been placed in the Library.

Local Government Finance

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will show for each district and borough council in Kent (a) by what percentage in descending order of magnitude, its 1989-90 reported budgeted total expenditure is greater or less than its grant-related expenditure assessment, (b) its 1989-90 reported budgeted total expenditure and (c) its 1989-90 reported budgeted total expenditure per head of population.

Mr. David Hunt: The information requested is set out in the table. For the purpose of this reply, the population figures used are estimates produced by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys of the population of each authority at mid-1988.

Council	GRE £ million 1	Reported total expenditure £ million 2	Percent difference (column 1-2 percentage 3	Reported total expenditure per head £ 4

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the 1990-91 revenue support grant entitlement per head of population, before safety net adjustments and after reduction of the amount of revenue support grant, attributable to Kent county council for each borough and district council in Kent in descending order of magnitude.

Mr. David Hunt: It is not possible to calculate the figures requested. Although revenue support grant is paid to district councils in support of services provided by both the district and county councils, there is no amount separately identified as being attributable to the county council.

Shell UK (Planning Appeal)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to complete his urgent consideration of the application for costs in the planning appeal by Shell UK Oil Limited at South Brent as communicated to solicitors acting for the South Brent and Lower Glaze group on Dartmoor on 13 October 1989.

Mr. Moynihan: Unless unforeseen difficulties arise, my right hon. Friend's substantive reply will be given before the end of this month.

Environmental Protection Bill

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what individuals and organisations have been consulted in relation to environmental assessment regulations under the Environmental Protection Bill;

(2) when he will publish draft environmental assessment regulations under the Environmental Protection Bill.

Mr. Trippier: Regulations made under schedule 1 to the Environmental Protection Bill will prescribe details of the application procedure for an authorisation under part I of the Bill. I propose that those regulations should require applications to include information about the environmental effects of the proposed process. I will consult on the draft regulations in the next few months.

Residential Housing, London

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement giving his estimate of the proportion of residential housing in the outer London boroughs, i.e. not in the old London county council area, which is in conservation areas.

Mr. Chope: By 1 January 1990 there were 285 designated conservation areas in outer London, of which 253 include residential properties. It is not possible to estimate the proportion of residential property included in these areas from the information held centrally by English Heritage.

Environmental Protection

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what studies he has made of practice in other countries regarding the use of economic instruments as a means to deliver policies to protect the environment; and what plans he has to make use of such measures in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I have had placed in the Library of the House the report of a recent study by Environmental Resources Ltd. which examines the uses which 10 selected countries make of charges and subsidies as means of pollution control. Seven EC countries (United Kingdom, Denmark, France, Germany, Italy, Netherlands and Spain), two Scandinavian countries outside the European Community (Norway and Sweden) and Japan were chosen for study. The report considers both the effectiveness of such schemes in improving environmental conditions and the trends emerging over the past five years. The study shows that there has been a notable shift away from subsidies as a means of pollution control—in line with increasing emphasis on the "polluter pays" principle. At the same time, much greater attention is being paid to possibilities for using charges.

In the United Kingdom, little use has until now been made of charges as a means of pollution control. However, charges covering the costs of operating a number of pollution regulation systems, including integrated pollution control, are proposed in the Environmental Protection Bill. Moreover, the Government recognise that in appropriate circumstances it is possible that environmental policies could be delivered more efficiently by market-based instruments.

Planning

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the outcome of his review of the procedures in the Town and Country Planning General Regulations 1976.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State and the Secretary of State for Wales have today issued a consultation paper seeking views on proposals to amend the Town and Country Planning General Regulations 1976. The proposals would also entail amending the Town and Country Planning Act 1971 and Local Government Act 1972.

The proposed changes are: councils should in future be required to apply for planning permission like any other applicant for any development where they are not the responsible development control authority; where local authorities determine their own planning applications, the decision should be taken in public; all self-applications should be determined either by the planning committee or by the council and not by a committee, sub-committee or officer responsible for the management or disposal of land or buildings owned by the authority; to direct that all self-applications should be advertised and to issue guidance on public consultation; all self-applications should be brought to the Secretary of State's attention so that where they conflict with the development plan or give rise to unresolved or substantial objections, the Secretary of State can consider whether to determine the application himself.

These proposed changes are intended to ensure fuller and more open debate about local authorities' own development proposals and to increase confidence in the accountability of local planning authorities.

Derelict Land

Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what resources are being made available under the derelict land programme in 1990-91; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The resources available in 1990-91 for derelict land reclamation under the derelict land programme will be £71·512 million.

Derelict land reclamation is one of the most effective ways in which the environment can be improved. Since 1979 the derelict land programme has funded the reclamation of more than 13,000 hectares of derelict land. I expect that, in the course of 1990-91, about 400 schemes producing an additional 1,200 hectares of reclaimed land will be completed. The resources available for 1990-91 should be sufficient to enable about 1,500 hectares of land to be reclaimed. The programme is thus continuing to make a real contribution to the reclamation process.

As in previous years, more than 90 per cent. of derelict land grant resources will be allocated to the north and midlands. I have given priority to the north-west and Yorkshire and Humberside where some of the most extensive and persistent dereliction is found; and to the west midlands where there is a need to fund continued investigative and remedial work on old limestone workings in the black country.

Overall my allocations include more than £12 million for treating dereliction arising from coal mining, thus maintaining the level of support given in last year's allocation.

I am approving new rolling programmes of reclamation for the joint local authority initiatives in east Manchester and Tameside, and north Staffordshire. I am also approving programmes for Oldham, Wakefield and Kerrier.

Following the first round of triennial rolling programme reviews carried out last year, I have decided to discontinue rolling programme status for north-east Lancashire but to transfer Hyndburn, where much remains to be done, to the existing Leeds and Liverpool canal corridor rolling programme. The other programmes or major projects reviewed; Wigan, Normanby Park, the black country, Wirral and Corby will continue. The rolling programmes at Barrow (Project Furness) and Liverpool will be reviewed in the course of 1990.

The total provision made for the 16 rolling programmes approved for 1990-91 will be nearly £23 million.

At present the priorities for derelict land reclamation are set out in circular 28/85 "Reclamation and Reuse of Derelict Land". These stress the importance of schemes designed to reclaim urban, especially inner city, land for housing and industrial and commercial uses.

However, when choosing new schemes to support in 1990-91, the Department will take into account the changes to the existing priorities proposed by the Government following the review of derelict land policy published in September 1989. We want to ensure that, through these changes, the derelict land programme can play an even more effective part in reclaiming sites to improve the environment.

We are considering the responses to our proposals for change, and guidance setting out new objectives and priorities will be issued later this year.

Property Services Agency

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what savings the Government expect to make from the privatisation of the Property Services Agency and Crown Suppliers.

Mr. Chope: A reduction in annual Government expenditure as a result of increased efficiency within the Property Services Agency and the Crown Suppliers.

Oil Pollution

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the total number of reported cases of oil pollution in United Kingdom coastal and estuarial waters in (a) 1988, (b) 1989 and (c) 1990.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 5 February 1990]: The Department of Transport's marine pollution control unit funds a complete annual survey of oil pollution around the coasts of the United Kingdom. This is carried out by the advisory committee on pollution of the sea which draws its information from a number of sources including the Department of Transport and local authorities.

A total of 559 incidents were reported during 1988. Survey results for 1989 are expected to be published in June.

The Department of Transport's own provisional figure for incidents at sea in 1989 is 246 with a further 14 incidents reported so far this year.

Government Buildings (Clearing)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much is spent annually in cleaning Government buildings; and what is the major cause of environmental damage to them.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 6 February 1990]: It is not possible to say how much is spent annually in cleaning Government buildings.

There is no single identifiable major cause of environmental damage to Government buildings. This can be incurred as a result of accident or by airborne or waterborne chemicals and pollutants or through weather conditions, particularly those involving extremes of heat, cold, wind, rain or tide. Records of such damage are not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Water Charges

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he can now announce the charges limits for statutory water companies for the next 10 years.

Mr. Trippier: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment has now determined the charges limits for six English companies and has made firm proposals to a further 20. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales has determined the charges limits for the two companies based in Wales. I have placed in the Library of the House copies of a table showing the figures for each company. Proposals will be put to Mid Sussex shortly. Our proposals will allow charges to rise by 6·5 per cent. a year on average in real terms over the next five years and by less than 2 per cent. a year on average in the following five years. Over the 10 years as a whole this represents average increases each year of only 23p (in current prices) on the monthly bill. Where determinations have not yet been made, companies have 28 days within which to make further representations. Once determined charges limits may only be adjusted or reviewed by the Director General of Water Services.

In determining these limits we have considered with each company its future programmes, operating costs and financing needs to the end of this century. We have had particular regard to the improvements in drinking water quality required to secure or facilitate compliance with the requirements of the Drinking Water Quality Regulations (which incorporates the standards of the EC drinking water directive), and to the investment required to renew aging infrastructure assets and to augment water resources so as to overcome the kind of shortages experienced during recent droughts. The proposed limits provide for total investment by the 29 companies of £1·7 billion (in current prices) over the decade to the year 2000.

My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Wales have also determined the infrastructure charges limits for 27 of the statutory water companies and made revised proposals for one other. Copies of a table showing these have also been placed in the Library. The average charge will be £593, at 1990-91 prices.

ENERGY

Computer Security

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what steps his Department has and is taking to improve the security of its computer systems.

Mr. Wakeham: My Department has clear security policies and procedures for safeguarding its unclassified but sensitive computer systems but is currently tightening its procedures in consultation with the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency. Classified systems are already protected by more stringent controls.

Petroleum Licences

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to the answer of 17 January to the hon. Member for Sheffield Central, Official Report, column 275, which two South African owned companies hold small interests in the United Kingdom offshore petroleum production licences.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The companies are Baytrust Oil Explorations Limited and Unilon Oil Explorations Limited.

Cross-Channel Electricity Interconnectors

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if a new pricing contract for the exchange of electricity via the cross-Channel interconnectors will be completed before the end of the current financial year.

Mr. Baldry: Electricité de France has been invited to be a party to the pooling and settlement agreement. This will permit EdF to buy and sell electricity on a day-to-day basis. Negotiations are also taking place on longer-term contracts.

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he has any plans to facilitate the construction of additional cross-Channel electricity interconnectors.

Mr. Baldry: The construction of additional cross-Channel electricity interconnectors will be a wholly commercial matter for the parties concerned, subject to their obtaining the necessary planning permission.

THE ARTS

English National Ballet

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Minister for the Arts what discussions he had with the chairman of English National Ballet prior to the termination of the contracts of Mr. Peter Shanfriss and Mr. Steven Scott.

Mr. Luce: I have had no such discussions. This is entirely a matter for the board of governors of the English National Ballet.

UPSTART Theatre Company

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Minister for the Arts (1) what information he has on (a) the number of productions of, (b) the number of performances of, (c) the number of seats sold by, (d) the box office income of and (e) the size of the investment of the Arts Council in the UPSTART theatre company;

(2) what information he has on who the auditors approved to audit the accounts of the UPSTART theatre company are; and whether any such accounts have been lodged with Companies House.

Mr. Luce: The UPSTART theatre company was established in 1988 with the support of the Arts Council and others to generate new touring productions. I have asked the chairman of the Arts Council to write to the hon. Member with the information he requires.

Mummified Heads

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Minister for the Arts (1) what discussions he has had with the Governments of Australia and New Zealand about the future of mummified aboriginal and Maori heads in British museums;

(2) what information he has on the (a) number and (b) location of mummified aboriginal and Maori heads and other human relics in British museums.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 5 February 1990]: I have received no representations from the Governments of Australia and New Zealand about the future of mummified aboriginal and Maori heads in British museums. I understand that of the national museums and galleries for which I am responsible, the British Museum's museum of mankind has seven Maori heads in its Oceanic collection, and the natural history museum has one mummified Maori head and one mummified aboriginal head in its keeping.

NATIONAL FINANCE

European Monetary Scheme

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the percentage of deviation quarter by quarter of the pound sterling from the central trend of the exchange rate mechanism of the EMS from 1985 to date.

Mr. Ryder: The sterling/ecu exchange rate is published in the Central Statistical Office's "Financial Statistics", table 13.1. Sterling's notional central rates against the European currency unit (ECU) up to and including 12 January 1987 are given in the Commission's booklet "The EMS: Ten Years of Progress in European Monetary Co-operation". Both publications are available in the Library of the House. Sterling's notional central rate following the reweighting of the ecu on 21 September 1989 was set at 0·728627. It was subsequently set at 0·728615 after the realignment of 8 January 1990.

Income Tax

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people pay income tax; and how many fill in income tax returns.

Mr. Lilley: It is estimated that about 21·4 million single people and married couples (25 million individuals) will be liable to income tax in 1989-90. These estimates are based on a projection of the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes and are provisional. Approximately 8 million income tax returns were sent out for the most recent year.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much total revenue the poll tax is expected to raise in 1990-91; and what increase in income tax would raise an equivalent sum.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Total revenue from community charges in 1990-91 will depend on the level of charges set by individual charging authorities.

Money Supply

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was (a) the forecast and (b) the outturn for (i) M0 and (ii) M4 for 1988 and 1989; what was the cause of the differences between forecasts and outturns; and what assessment he has made of the effects on inflation of both.

Mr. Ryder: Official forecasts for M0 and M4 are not published, but target ranges for M0 growth are set out each year in the medium-term financial strategy published in the Financial Statement and Budget Report. The target range for both 1988-89 and 1989-90 was 1 to 5 per cent. M0 growth has fallen gradually since September 1988 as a result of the progressive tightening of monetary policy. M0 is a reliable indicator of monetary conditions; movements in broad money require careful interpretation but are also taken into account in assessing monetary conditions.

Interest Rates

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to announce a reduction in interest rates.

Mr. Ryder: There will be no early relaxation of monetary policy. Interest rates will remain high for some time to come.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the yield and cost of collection of the stamp duty on (a) the sale of domestic housing and (b) any other categories where the information is available for the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Lilley: The latest available forecast of receipts from stamp duties in 1989-90, split between the major transactions from which it is derived, was given in the reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley) on 30 November 1989, Official Report, columns 431-32. About £950 million of the stamp duty on land and property is attributable to residential property.

The cost of collection is expected to be around 0·3 per cent. of total stamp duties; a separate figure for the cost of collecting duty on residential property is not available.

Mortgage Interest Rates

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the total savings for domestic mortgage payers from a 1 per cent. drop in mortgage interest rates.

Mr. Lilley: A reduction of one percentage point in the current level of mortgage interest rates would reduce total mortgage interest payments net of tax relief by about £170 million per month for the estimated 9·3 million domestic mortgage payers. This represents an average monthly saving of about £18 per mortgagor.

Ambulance Workers (Notice Staff)

Mr. Booker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the cost of production and distribution of the notice to the Treasury staff entitled, "Industrial Action in Support of Ambulance Workers" dated 23 January, Ref.: BO6L. AM/Allen/Ambulance issued by B.Fox (BOG).

Mr. Ryder: The estimated production and distribution costs were £13.

Building Societies Association

Mr. Parry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next expects to meet representatives from the Building Societies Association; and what matters he proposes to discuss.

Mr. Waring: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he next expects to meet representatives from the Building Societies Association; and what matters he proposes to discuss.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor does not expect to meet representatives from the Building Societies Association in the near future.

Skiball

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received concerning the revenue implications of the introduction of a spot-the-ball game to be called Skiball; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: None.

Japan (Trade)

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish in the Official Report the extent in cash terms of export trade from the United Kingdom to the empire of Japan and the extent in cash terms of import trade from the empire of Japan to the United Kingdom; and if he will publish figures for both for each year since 1979.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information may be found in the "Monthly Review of External Trade Statistics" and its mid-year supplement, available from the Library of the House, or on the Central Statistical Office databank which may be accessed through the Library.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Animal Maltreatment

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation which will strengthen bans on ownership against persons who have maltreated dogs; and if he will extend such bans to protect other animals.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The power already exists. As a result of section 1 of the Protection of Animals (Amendment) Act 1988, where a person has been convicted under the Protection of Animals Act 1911 of an offence of cruelty to any animal, the court by which he is convicted may order him to be disqualified from having custody of any animal.

Skilball

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from the Gaming Board and others concerning the introduction of a gambling activity to be called Skilball; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We understand that the promoters of "Skilball" intend it to be a prize competition in which success will depend to a substantial degree on the exercise of skill, so that it will not fall to be regulated or prohibited under the laws of gambling. Only a court could determine this question authoritatively.

The Gaming Board for Great Britain has expressed to us its concern that, in the event that "Skilball" is promoted or perceived as a form of gambling, it could have serious implications for policy on lotteries and for the general principle that demand for gambling should not be stimulated. We have also received letters from two hon. Members about "Skilball", one in his capacity as a consultant to its promoters, the other asking about its relationship to the law on lotteries.

We are at present considering the implications of the proposed competition. We have no current plan to amend the law on prize competitions such as "Skilball" is claimed to be. The position is being kept under review, and no assurance can be given that legislation may not at some stage be proposed which might affect the legality or viability of such competitions.

Hong Kong

Mr. Ashdown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria for settlement in Britain will be required for the Asian spouses of British expatriates living in Hong Kong; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Paragraph 50 of the Immigration Rules (HC. 388) sets out the criteria for admission for settlement as the spouse of a British citizen or other person who is present and settled in the United Kingdom or who is at the same time being admitted for settlement.

Summer Time (Green Paper)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many requests have been received for a copy of the Government's Green Paper on summer time, consultative document Cm 722, since June 1989; and how many responses he has received as a result.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Her Majesty's Stationery Office has sold 1,082 copies. A total of 30,867 responses have been received.

Young Offenders

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list, in respect of each young offender institution and remand centre, the numbers of (a) convicted and (b) unconvicted prisoners under the age of 16 years who are receiving fewer than 15 hours of education each week.

Mr. Meller: During the most recent week for which figures are available, all inmates under 16 years of age in young offender institutions received at least 15 hours education. The number of inmates under 16 years in remand centres who did not receive 15 hours education was as follows:

Inmates under 16 years

Remand centre	Convicted	Unconvicted
Brockhill	2	4
Cardiff	1
Feltham	18	7
Glen Parva	1
Manchester	1

Sentenced Prisoners

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many of those persons sentenced to a gaol by a Crown court in England and Wales during 1988 had committed an offence involving (a) violence, (b) sex, (c) robbery and (d) supply of drugs; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what proportion of (a) 17 to 20-year-olds and (b) adults were sentenced to immediate custody for (i) violence against the person, (ii) burglary, (iii) theft and handling, (iv) fraud and forgery, (v) criminal damage and (vi) drug offences in each of the Crown court centres in England and Wales during 1988; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what was the average sentence length in England and Wales for (a) Crown courts, (b) magistrates courts and (c) all courts during 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 25 January 1990]: Information on the average sentence lengths by the Crown court and magistrates courts in England and Wales is given in "Criminal Statistics England and Wales 1988" (Tables 7.16 to 7.20), a copy of which is in the Library.

Information that relates to the number of persons sentenced to immediate custody by the Crown court for certain offences; and the proportion of persons aged 17 to 20 and 21 and over who were sentenced to immediate custody by certain offences in each Crown court centre in England and Wales in 1988 is given in the tables:

Table 1 Persons sentenced to immediate custody by the Crown Court 1988
England and Wales

Offence	Total immediate custody
Violence against the person	7,697
Sexual offences	2,362
Robbery	3,092
Supplying drugs (Trafficking)	2,594

Mr. Mesuum Ali Khan

Mr. Maddox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he asked the post in Islamabad to issue entry clearance to Mesuum Ali Khan (References: TH/28527/87; K223746; IMM/31449); when Mr. Khan will be issued with entry clearance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 23 January 1990]: After the appeal of Mesuum Ali Khan against refusal of entry clearance was allowed by an adjudicator on 11 October 1989, an application for leave to appeal to the immigration appeal tribunal was made on behalf of the entry clearance officer. That application has now been withdrawn and the entry clearance officer was notified on 1 February that entry clearance should be issued.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Live Births

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the latest information he has on live births and survival at low gestational age, and on live births with estimated gestation less than 28 weeks, in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 1 February 1990]: In 1986 there were 106 live births with an estimated gestational age of less than 28 weeks. The remaining information is not available.

Child Benefit

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on behalf of how many children are parents receiving child benefit and what is the cost of paying it.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 1 February 1990]: The number of children for whom child benefit is currently being paid in Northern Ireland is 456,000. The total amount of benefit paid for the year ended 31 March 1989 was £172,969,000. The administrative cost of paying the benefit in that year was £3,456,000.

TRANSPORT

London Assessment Studies

Mr. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy, after selecting the preferred option in stage 2B of the London assessment studies, to provide the resources necessary to implement all components of the proposals, including the public transport and traffic calming and management elements.

Mr. Atkins: I cannot anticipate decisions on what schemes will be taken forward or what priority they will have.

Mr. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if his Department will undertake a programme of publicity and public meetings on the proposals contained in stage 2B of the London assessment studies and its document, "Traffic in London"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: A full public consultation programme is already under way. Some 2,900 copies of the London assessment studies reports, and 180,000 copies of summaries of the consultants work, with leaflets giving the Department's initial views, have been printed; 4,500 copies of the "Traffic in London" discussion document have been issued.

Displays of the assessment studies options have been mounted in public libraries and at other locations throughout the study areas. Arrangements have been made for Department of Transport officials to attend over 20 public meetings arranged by boroughs to explain the study options and the Department's initial views. The officials will answer questions about the "Traffic in London" initiatives.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department took to ensure consistency in the level and detail of information its consultants have released on the proposals contained in stage 2B of the London assessment studies.

Mr. Atkins: The Department has sought to ensure consistency by arranging for discussions between the consultants.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will make it his policy that, before reaching a final decision on stage 2B of the London assessment studies and the introduction of the priority route network proposals, their combined impact on traffic and movement in the capital will be assessed using the LTS model and that the results will be published.

Mr. Atkins: We are proposing a pilot scheme which will assess the effectiveness of priority routes. We are also consulting local authorities and others on the composition of the network. It will not be possible to estimate the overall effects of the network until this work is completed. Any schemes adopted following the assessment studies will be subject to further detailed appraisal.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether he will undertake and publish a detailed analysis of the environmental impact of the proposals contained in stage 2B of the London assessment studies and his Department's document "Traffic in London";

(2) whether, before reaching a final decision on stage 2B of the London assessment studies, and the introduction of the priority route network proposals outlined in "Traffic in London", they will be assessed in the context of the Pearce report on sustainable development.

Mr. Atkins: A full and detailed analysis of the environmental impact of the assessment study options is contained in the consultants' stage 2 reports published on 14 December. The Pearce report findings will be taken into account along with all relevant factors when decisions are taken on what proposals, if any, should be taken forward.

Rail Electrification

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions he has now had with the chairman of British Rail on the time scale of the electrification of the Edinburgh-Linlithgow-Falkirk-Glasgow and Edinburgh-Dundee-Aberdeen lines.

Mr. Portillo: It is for British Rail to bring forward any worthwhile proposals for electrification.

Airmiss (Tranent)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passengers and crew were on the BAC1-11 flight which was involved in an airmiss with a Tornado aircraft over Tranent on 2 August 1989; what airline it belonged to; what was its flight number; and from which airport it was flying.

Mr. McLoughlin: Anonymity in airmiss investigation is preserved in the interest of full and frank reporting of incidents. This does not inhibit thorough investigation or follow-up action to remedy any failings which are uncovered. There is no reason to change this practice over the incident at Tranent on 2 August 1989.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will amend the air traffic regulations to establish the responsibility of an air traffic controller for vectoring aircraft in controlled or special rules airspace in respect of both the vertical and horizontal planes, in line with the recommendation of the joint airmiss working group following the incident over Tranent on 2 August 1989.

Mr. McLoughlin: I understand that amendments to the manual of air traffic services in line with the joint airmiss working group recommendations have already been agreed and are included in the next amendment list to the regulations.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will amend the air traffic regulations to establish the responsibility of an air traffic controller to instruct and advise pilots in order to ensure that they remain in regulated airspace even when such pilots accept a visual approach or other relaxation from full control, as recommended by the joint airmiss working group following the incident over Tranent on 2 August 1989.

Mr. McLoughlin: I understand that amendments to the manual of air traffic services requiring controllers to ensure that the clearances they issue do not allow aircraft inadvertently to leave regulated airspace have already been agreed and are included in the next amendment list to the regulations. Regulations allow captains of aircraft to make a conscious decision to leave regulated airspace should they so require.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to ensure that civil pilots have readily available information as to the vertical limits of regulated airspace as recommended by the joint airmiss working group following the incident over Tranent on 2 August 1989.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Civil Aviation Authority has the statutory responsibility for the safety regulation of civil aviation. I understand that it is the CAA's view that the publication of the vertical limits of regulated airspace in the United Kingdom aeronautical information publication, on the CAA topographical maps and on commercially available approach charts and en route maps meets all reasonable requirements for the availability of this information.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if, in the light of the deliberations of the joint airmiss working group into an incident over Tranent on 2 August 1989, he will now extend the area of controlled airspace around Edinburgh airport.

Mr. McLoughlin: The joint airmiss working group made no recommendation to change the dimensions of controlled airspace around Edinburgh airport. All regulated airspace in the United Kingdom is reviewed regularly to ensure that it remains appropriate to the traffic density. There are no plans to change the dimensions of the Edinburgh CTR/SRZ or those areas of the Scottish TMA associated with Edinburgh procedures.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if, in view of the deliberations of the joint airmiss working group into an incident over Tranent on 2 August 1989, he will direct the Civil Aviation Authority to provide secondary surveillance radar at Edinburgh.

Mr. McLoughlin: As part of a national programme instituted before the Tranent airmiss secondary surveillance radar is being installed at Edinburgh airport and is expected to be operational before the end of May 1990.

Barton-le-Clay Bypass

Mr. John Carlisle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on what evidence and information he based his decision to decline the provision of a footbridge over the newly constructed A6 Barton-le-Clay bypass.

Mr. Atkins: The joint decision of the Secretaries of State for the Environment and Transport was based on evidence given at the public inquiries about forecast traffic flows, known pedestrian-cyclist movements and the estimated cost of a footbridge.

Mr. John Carlisle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received regarding the provision of a footbridge over the newly constructed A6 Barton-le-Clay bypass.

Mr. Atkins: Requests that a bridge be provided have been received from my hon. Friend, Barton-le-Clay parish council, South Bedfordshire district council and a small number of private individuals.

Mr. John Carlisle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will reconsider his decision to refuse the provision of a footbridge over the newly constructed A6 Barton-le-Clay bypass.

Mr. Atkins: I have undertaken to review the position once the bypass is open to traffic.

Pensioners (Bus Passes)

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish in the Official Report the estimated cost of providing free bus travel for pensioners in England and Wales.

Mr. Portillo: Total local authority expenditure on all travel concessions for pensioners, disabled persons and children in 1989-90 is estimated at £350 million. No information is available on how much of this expenditure is on free bus travel for pensioners.

Lorries

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has recently taken any initiatives to combat the environmental problems caused by lorries in residential areas and town centres.

Mr. Atkins: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 23 January the publication of two documents that address the environmental problem lorries can cause in residential areas and town centres. "Lorries in the Community" and the "Lorries and Traffic Management" manual were published following a lorry management study co-sponsored by my Department, the Civic Trust and the County Surveyors Society. Copies of these documents are in the House Libraries.

One of the aims of the trunk road programme is to improve the environment by removing through traffic from unsuitable roads in towns and villages. Since 1979, over 100 bypasses and relief roads have been completed. There are over 150 bypasses and relief roads in the current programme. Other roads also have a bypassing effect.

New limits on the harmful gases which can be emitted by all kinds of vehicles have now been agreed in Europe. They are being introduced during the early 1990s. A second stage of limits is going to be discussed later this year. Limits will be set on particulates as well as on gaseous emissions. This means that in the future we can look forward to lorries and cars which are much cleaner.

New rules will mean that the noise from the heaviest lorries will almost have been halved during the last decade. The European Commission is now working on further proposals for tighter vehicle noise limits. The Quite Heavy Vehicle 90 project has also been undertaken. This has been a collaborative partnership between industry, Government and research organisations to develop techniques to reduce noise from heavy lorries. The project included research into developing quieter engines, exhaust system panels and the enclosures around engines.

London Underground

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has received for investment in improving the conditions for passengers in the rush hours on the London Underground.

Mr. Portillo: The Government have already approved a major programme of investment, which includes the modernisation of the Central line, improvements to Liverpool Street and Angel stations, and the purchase of new trains. We have made financial provision for the extension of the Jubilee line, for congestion-relief measures at the most overcrowded stations, for a substantial programme of train-refurbishment, and for the modernisation of the Northern line. We expect to take a decision later this year on the introduction of a Bill for a new line to relieve congestion in the central area of London. Such investments will benefit all passengers, but will be particularly welcome to those who travel at the busiest peak periods.

Birmingham Cross-city Line

Dame Jill Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has now considered British Rail's formal investment case for the electrification of the Birmingham cross-city line; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Parkinson: I received British Rail's initial evaluation of tenders for electric rolling stock on 29 January 1990, and have now considered it in the light of earlier proposals for fixed works. The case for electrification is now fully established. I welcome the proposal. Passengers have had to put up with old and worn-out trains for some time. The modernisation of this line will greatly improve the quality and reliability of the service for the people of the west midlands. The new rolling stock will offer a more comfortable ride, better lighting, sliding doors and faster journey times. The benefits will go wider than the cross-city line, as the stock will also be used on Coventry-Wolverhampton services in off-peak periods.

I have given approval to the whole scheme in principle and for works to electrify the line at a cost of about £18 million which will be completed by 1992. The scheme will be jointly funded by British Rail and the West Midlands passenger transport executive.

British Rail will select the type of electric rolling stock that it wishes to purchase later in the year when it has decided which of the offers it has had from manufacturers will give best value for money.

Planning Application (Redbridge)

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out the extent to which the proposal in the planning application No. 322/88, LRO(T) Reference GLRT 41 35027/3/0287, which the Department of Transport on 25 April 1988 directed the London borough of Redbridge to refuse, would have required modifications to the Made Line and Side Roads Order 1986.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 2 February 1990]: The need to maintain minimum clearance of underground structures at Wanstead LT station would have required the centre line of the developers' wider tunnel to run about 1·5m north of that established for the Department's tunnel by the made London-Great Yarmouth Trunk Road (A12) (Eastway to Eastern Avenue) and (Slip Roads at Wanstead) Order 1986. The developers' tunnel needed to be wider to accommodate mechnical ventilation equipment made necessary by its extra length.

That would have required republication of the line order. The planning application would also have affected slip roads at the Green Man interchange and in turn related made side road orders.

Made Line and Side Roads Order 1986

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what modifications have been made since the date of Made Line and Side Roads Order 1986 by the Department of Transport to the intended line of the proposed London-Great Yarmouth trunk road (A12) in order to take account of sight restrictions or for any other reason; and whether such alteration will require modifications to the Made Line and Side Roads Order 1986.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 2 February 1990]: The main line of the route is fixed by the London-Great Yarmouth Trunk Road (A12) (Eastway to Eastern Avenue and Slip Roads at Wanstead) Order 1986, made following the inquiry in 1983. The proposed line of the dual carriageway has remained unchanged since that date.

EMPLOYMENT

Employment and Training (Lancashire)

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what programmes designed to boost employment and training are available to employers in Lancashire; and what they will cost during the financial year 1990-91.

Mr. Nicholls: All my Department's employment, enterprise and training measures are available to boost employment and training in Lancashire, as elsewhere. Measures available to employers and the self-employed include the jobcentre service, business growth training and the enterprise allowance scheme; many employers also participate in programmes designed to equip the unemployed and young people for employment, such as employment training and YTS. My Department's expenditure plans for 1990-91 are contained in chapter 6 of the public expenditure White Paper, published last month.

Training Grants

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to increase a trainee's choice of skills he may acquire by paying training grants direct to young people.

Mr. Nicholls: Trainee choice will be widened under the new arrangements for youth training, to be run by training and enterprise councils from spring 1990 onwards. These arrangements will in themselves widen the range of training opportunities and offer higher level qualifications. The Government have no plans at present to give training grants directly to young people.

YTS

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many young people are currently involved in YTS.

Mr. Nicholls: At 31 December 1989, a toeal of 386,000 young people were in training on YTS schemes in Great Britain.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people are currently unemployed.

Mr. Nicholls: The information is available in the Library. In December 1989 the level of unemployment, seasonally adjusted, in the United Kingdom was 1,635,000.

Training Costs

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his estimate of total Government spending on skills and competence for work and youth training programmes for 1989-90 and for 1992-93; and what is the cost (a) per capita of total population and (b) per trainee; what is his estimate of spending for these purposes on the same basis in (i) Holland, (ii) West Germany and (iii) France for the latest available year.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the public expenditure White Paper published on 30 January 1990.

The total spend on skills and competence for work is forecast at £2,481 million for 1989-90 and planned at £2,392 million for 1992-93. The cost per capita of the total population is £44·60 for 1989-90 and £42·62 for 1992-93. It is not possible to provide a cost per trainee, as some of the expenditure is on programmes not directed towards individual trainees. Comparable information is not available for Holland, West Germany or France.

Computer Security

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps his Department has and is taking to improve the security of its computer systems.

Mr. Eggar: It is not the policy of the Employment Department to make public details of computer security systems, as such information would be of assistance to potential attackers. During the development phase of all computer systems, the Employment Department undertakes a structured analysis of security risks and requirements. The adequacy of the installed countermeasures is periodically reviewed throughout the lifetime of such projects. All security analysis draws on central guidance, the applications of which is kept under continuous review and has been tightened recently.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what response he proposes to make to the Commission for Racial Equality report, "Ethnic Minorities and the Graduate Labour Market"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The CRE report "Ethnic Minorities and the Graduate Labour Market" makes a number of useful recommendations on action that could be taken to help improve the employment opportunities of graduates from the ethnic minorities. The recommendations are directed to institutions of higher education and employers, who, it is hoped, will note them and, where necessary, take appropriate action. Unnecessarily restricting access to employment and higher education opportunities for ethnic minority graduates, or potential graduates, is not only morally wrong but makes bad business sense, particularly in the face of the recent tightening of the graduate labour market.

Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many times the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service has been used to settle industrial disputes since 1979; and if he will publish a list of all references made and the outcome in each case.

Mr. Nicholls: Information on the overall number of disputes that ACAS has helped to settle is published in the ACAS annual reports, copies of which are held in the Library. The names of individual parties to such disputes, and the outcomes, are not comprehensively listed and this information is not available.

Small Business

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what evaluation his Department has made of the potential gains to small business through the formation of consorzi; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tim Eggar: Italian consorzi are based on the principle of small firms combining to undertake marketing, distribution and other activities together. This has clear potential benefits for the firms involved. It is, however, a matter for firms themselves to decide whether to opt for this way of organising their activities.

Wages (North-West)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what measures he proposes to introduce to increase wage rates in the north-west region.

Mr. Nicholls: Pay in the north-west, as elsewhere, is generally a matter for employers and employees to decide for themselves in the light of all the relevant circumstances. Any unnecessary intervention by the Government could only be harmful to business and to prospects for jobs.

Explosives Act

Mr. Alison: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the requirements in section 6 of the Explosives Act 1875, which relate to an applicant's submission for a draft licence for a new factory or magazine, for consideration by the Health and Safety Executive of the environmental and social repercussions which might follow from the approval of the draft licence.

Mr. Nicholls: Section 6 of the Explosives Act 1875 requires that a new explosives factory or magazine shall not be established on a site except in a manner specified in the licence issued by the Health and Safety Executive. The terms of the licence usually specify matters entirely concerned with the safety and security of the explosives at the proposed site.

Section 7 of the Act requires that the local authority grants assent to such a factory or magazine and must hear the applicant and any persons objecting. At such a hearing environmental and social considerations in addition to safety and security matters may be discussed. In addition, a proposed development for an explosives factory is subject to the normal requirements of the planning legislation.

Mr. Alison: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what draft licence under the Explosives Act 1875 has been received, approved, or rejected by the Health and Safety Executive in relation to a new factory or magazine at Steeton Hall farm, South Milford, near Leeds.

Mr. Nicholls: No draft licence has been received by the Health and Safety Executive in connection with Steeton Hall farm, South Milford, Leeds.

Trade Unions

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list those industries, professions and services in which more than 75 per cent. of the employees are represented by trade unions.

Mr. Nicholls: There are no data available on trade unions that enable a full answer to be given. However, there is information relating to the divisions of the standard industrial classification. The most recent data come from a specially commissioned survey of employees conducted for the Department in February and March 1989.

Regarding trade union membership, the survey showed that only in one division of the standard industrial classification—energy and water supply—does the level of trade union membership among employees exceed 75 per cent.

The survey also showed that in two divisions, over 75 per cent. of employees worked in establishments that recognised trade unions for purposes of collective bargaining. These are energy and water supply, and transport and communication.

Earnings

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what were the total earnings before tax, now and in 1979, for those on half and three quarters average earnings, both in cash terms and inflation adjusted terms.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is provided in the following table:

Weekly earnings in 1979 and 1989, in cash and real terms.

	1979 in cash terms £	1979 in cash terms £	1989 in cash terms £
Half average earnings	44·6	93·8	119·9
Three quarters average earnings	66·8	140·7	179·8

Notes

1. Gross weekly earnings of all full-time adult employees. Figures as at April of each year.
2. 1979 real terms figures are the cash figures revalued to April 1989 prices using the RPI (all items) index.

State Earnings-Related Pension Scheme

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, after how long a delay and under what conditions those opting out of SERPS and claiming incentive payments to do so can rejoin the scheme later.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: There are no restrictions on an individual who is a member of an occupational or personal pension scheme rejoining SERPS at any time.

WALES

Benefit Rules

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he proposes to review housing benefit rules in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Decisions on housing benefit policy are made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security.

Environmental Health Officers

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the present number of environmental health officers presently employed by Welsh local authorities, listed by district area for the past five years; and what is the present number of environmental health officer vacancies throughout Wales.

Mr. Grist: The number of local authority non-manual staff employed in environmental health in Wales for each of the last five years is given in the table. It is not possible to identify separately the number of environmental health officers included in this number. Figures by authority are not available centrally, neither is information on vacancies.

Number of non-manual staff employed in environmental health[1]

	1985	1986	1987	1988	[2]1989

[1] Full-time equivalents as at September for each year.
[2] Figures for September 1989 are provisional.

Doctors and Nurses

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will identify the number of doctors and nurses employed in Wales (a) now and (b) in June 1979.

Mr. Grist: The available information is shown in the tables:

Medical and dental staff (whole-time equivalents) in post at 30 September[1]

	Number
1979	2,181
1988	2,545

General medical practitioners[2] (number) as at 1 October

1988	1,599

Nursing and midwifery staff (whole-time equivalents) in post at 30 September[1 3]

	Number
1979	23,031
1989	28,037

[1] Employed in the hospital and community service.
[2] Unrestricted principals.
[3] No adjustment has been made to take account of the change in working hours in 1980 from 40 to 37·5 hours a week.

Sewage Outlets

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the number and location of untreated sewage outlets into the rivers and coastal waters of Wales.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Cardiff, South and Penarth (Mr. Michael) on 8 November 1989.

Anthrax (Llay)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will grant money to Clwyd county council as compensation for its unforeseen outlay consequent upon the anthrax outbreak at Llay; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Expenditure associated with local government's animal health responsibilities has been allowed for in the 1989-90 rate support grant settlement and reflected in Clwyd county council's grant-related expenditure assessment for the rate support grant purposes.

Local authorities have discretionary powers to incur expenditure on unforeseen incidents such as the anthrax outbreak and would normally include an amount in their budgets for such contingencies.

The Government recognise that it would be unreasonable for substantial extra expenditure incurred in exceptional circumstances to fall wholly upon ratepayers. Consequently, the Bellwin scheme, which is designed to deal with extraordinary costs arising from emergencies, allows for the provision of special financial assistance to local authorities in certain circumstances. We are ready to consider a detailed and fully costed application. But, on the information available to the Department we do not believe that the scale of additional expenditure in this instance would justify use of the scheme.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet members of Clwyd county council and officials to discuss the financial impact of the 1989 anthrax outbreak.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No.

Queensferry High School

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will meet members of staff of Queensferry high school concerning the future of the high school;

(2) if he will meet the Parent-Teachers Association of the Queensferry high school to discuss their concerns regarding the future of the high school;

(3) if he will visit the Queensferry high school.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No. This is a matter initially for the local education authority which has a duty to consult interested persons before publishing statutory notices.

Cancer Treatment

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to make a statement on cancer treatment services for north Wales patients.

Mr. Grist: A comprehensive study of cancer treatment services in north Wales, commissioned by the Welsh Office, is presently the subject of wide consultation and responses have been invited by 31 March 1990. We do not propose to make any announcement until responses to consultation have been carefully considered.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the costs of collecting and administering the present rating system in Wales for the last five years; and what is the expected cost of collecting and administering the poll tax.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The costs of collecting and administering the present rating system in Wales for each of the last five years are shown in the table:

Net current expenditure

Year	£ million
1985-86	7·89
1986-87	8·41
1987-88	8·90
1988-89	9·76
1989-90	[1]9·80

[1] As recorded in local authority budgets for 1989-90.

The 1989 report of the expenditure sub-group to the settlement working group estimated that the cost of collection and administration of the community charge in Wales in 1990-91 would be £25·6 million.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list in appropriate order, according to the latest available information, the community charge for 1990-91 for each of the county councils in Wales and his own assessment;

(2) if he will list in appropriate order, according to the latest available information, the community charge for 1990-91 for each of the district councils in Wales and his own assessment.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: We have received no information from local authorities in Wales on 1990-91 community charge levels. Charging authorities are being asked to return this information in April. Details of my assessments of the county and district components of community charges for spending in line with the 1990-91 revenue support grant settlement are given in the following tables:

[1] Includes community councils.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list in appropriate order, according to the latest available information, by how much in cash and percentage terms each of the district councils in Wales are planning to increase their spending in 1990-91;

(2) if he will list in appropriate order, according to the latest available information, the planned spending in 1990-91 of all district councils in Wales and the consequent percentage of his standard spending assessment;

(3) if he will list in appropriate order, according to the latest available information, by how much in cash and percentage terms each of the county councils in Wales are planning to increase their spending in 1990-91;

(4) if he will list in appropriate order, according to the latest available information, the planned spending in 1990-91 of all county councils in Wales and the consequent percentage of his standard spending assessment.

Mr. Grist: We have received no information from Welsh local authorities on their planned spending in 1990-91. Authorities are being asked to return budget details in March.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales pursuant to his statement on 24 January, Official Report, columns 993-94, what proposals he has received from South Glamorgan, Powys, Gwynedd, Newport and Cardiff councils for lower community charges for the forthcoming financial year.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend has received no such proposals.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what analysis he has made of Cardiff city council's planned spending for 1990-91; and what is his assessment of how much of that planned spending will be expended in the financial year;

(2) what analysis he has made of South Glamorgan council's planned spending for 1990-91; and what is his assessment of how much of that planned spending will be expended in the financial year.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend has made no such assessments.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the estimates published by the Council of Welsh District Councils on 20 December 1989 with regard to the average community charge for Wales in 1990-91 and the 1990-91 total community charge for Cardiff and South Glamorgan councils.

Mr. Grist: The estimates published by the Council of Welsh Districts on 20 December 1989 were of an average community charge in Wales of £209 and a community charge in Cardiff (including South Glamorgan county council's precept) of £193. It appears that these estimates were based on levels of spending 4 per cent. in excess of the 1990-91 local authority revenue settlement.

Our assessment is that such increases are too high. The 1990-91 settlement for Wales allows for an increase of 7·1 per cent. in local authority expenditure—entirely adequate to maintain and where appropriate develop council services. On this basis the average community charge in Wales would be £173. However, if Cardiff city council and South Glamorgan county council were to increase their spending line with the settlement the community charge in Cardiff need be only £157.

Press reports indicate that on the basis of the expenditure plans apparently under consideration by the two councils the community charge in Cardiff could be as high as £235. We have urged both councils to exercise restraints over their spending in order to contain it to levels nearer the Department's plans. Such action would bring very significant benefits for chargepayers in Cardiff whilst allowing services to be maintained and developed.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total budget of each county and district council in Gwynedd and Clwyd in (a) 1988-89 and (b) 1989-90.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is published in table 8.5 of "Welsh Local Government Financial Statistics" No. 13, 1989.

Abattoirs

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many abattoirs there are in each county in Wales; how many of them are up to EEC standards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: The number of abattoirs by county is as follows:

	Number
Clwyd	17
Dyfed	12
Gwent	3
Gwynedd	9
Mid Glamorgan	6
Powys	12
South Glamorgan	—
West Glamorgan	6

These include three establishments which are EEC approved.

Airfield (Mid-Wales)

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to build an airfield in mid-Wales during the next five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: We have no plans to do so. The provision of an airfield would be a commercial decision more appropriate for the private sector.

Hill Livestock Allowance

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total amount of hill livestock compensatory allowance contributions to the Meirionnydd Nant Conwy constituency in (a) 1988 and (b) 1989.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Hill livestock compensatory allowance (HLCA) statistics are not held on a constituency basis. However, the figures for Gwynedd for the two calendar years were:

(a) 1988—£5·82 million.
(b) 1989—£5·96 million.

Tourism

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total budget of the Wales tourist board in 1988-89 and 1989-90; and how much money was allocated to its north Wales office during both years.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The WTB's gross budget was £11,381,000 for 1988-89, and £13,692,000 for 1989-90. The board operates three regional offices in Swansea, Machynlleth and Colwyn Bay. The 1988-89 provision for the Colwyn Bay office was £471,260 and the corresponding figure for 1989-90 is £516,500. These funds are primarily for salaries and general administration. Much of the board's other expenditure, although administered from Cardiff, is of direct benefit to north Wales.

Radiation Hotspots

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action his Department has undertaken following the discovery of three radiation hotspots at Talycafn, Llanfairfechan and Trawsfynydd in Gwynedd.

Mr. Grist: A report that radiation hotspots had been discovered at Talycafn, Llanfairfechan and Trawsfynydd was investigated by Government scientists who found no evidence to support the claims.

Development Board for Rural Wales

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total budget of (a) the Development Board for Rural Wales and (b) Mid Wales Development in (i) 1988-89 and (ii) 1989-90.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Mid Wales Development was the former marketing title of the Development Board for Rural Wales, which the board no longer uses to promote its activities. It had no separate budget. The further information requested on the DBRW budget is as follows:

1988-89 Gross provision £	1989-90 Gross provision £
18,183,000	19,384,000

Land Authority

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total budget of the Land Authority in Wales in (a) 1988-89 and (b) 1989-90; and what proportion of these moneys were spent in Gwynedd and Clwyd.

Mr. Grist: Expenditure on land purchases by the Land Authority for Wales in 1988-89 was £9·5 million. I have asked the chairman of the authority if he would write to the hon. Gentleman to give an estimate of the authority's expenditure in the current financial year and details of the amounts spent in Gwynedd and Clwyd.

Tai Cymru

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total budget of Tai Cymru in (a) 1988-89 and (b) 1989-90; and what proportion of this money was spent in north Wales.

Mr. Grist: In 1988-89, the Housing Corporation in Wales' gross outturn was £72·89 million. Of this, 13·7 per cent. was spent in Gwynedd and Clwyd. The figures for 1989-90 are not yet available.

Sheltered Placement

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many employment opportunities the sheltered placement scheme currently offers in Wales; and how many places have been offered in total in Wales since the scheme started in 1985.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The number of sheltered placements offered in Wales has increased from 29 in 1985 to 395 as at 31 December 1989, the latest date for which information is available.

Disabled Employees

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales under the present disabled employee quota system, how many Welsh companies have been prosecuted since 1960; and what has been the average fine resulting from prosecutions.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: There has been one prosecution in Wales since 1960 under the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act 1944. The case was dismissed.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of registered disabled adults are in (a) full-time, (b) part-time and (c) home-based employment in Wales.

Mr. Grist: The information is not held centrally.

Earnings

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the latest figures for average gross earnings per week of (a) disabled adult men, (b) disabled adult women, (c) the male working population in general and (d) the female working population in general in Wales.

Mr. Grist: Figures for earnings of disabled persons in full-time employment in Great Britain are contained in table 3.1 of report 2 of the OPCS surveys of disability in Great Britain—"The financial circumstances of disabled adults living in private households"—published in November 1988 by HMSO and available in the House of Commons Library.

Corresponding statistics for the disabled in Wales are not available, but figures for average gross weekly earnings obtained from the new earnings surveys were £238·6 and £168 for all full-time adult males and females respectively in April 1989.

Disabled People

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total number of registered disabled people in Wales in each year since 1979.

Mr. Grist: The numbers of people in Wales on local authority registers for the disabled in each year since 1979 were as shown in the following table:

	Persons with a mental handicap	Others[1]
1979	n/a	70,043
1980	n/a	75,096
1981	n/a	84,291
1982	n/a	91,435
1983	n/a	100,037
1984	n/a	109,729
1985	n/a	119,091
1986	n/a	130,872
1987	n/a	138,302
1988	9,470	144,770
1989	9,726	149,612

[1] Includes the blind, deaf and persons with other classes of physical handicap.

River Quality Standards

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which rivers in Wales do not comply with European Community river quality standards; and what steps are being taken to improve them.

Mr. Grist: There is no EC legislation setting general quality standards for rivers. However, the United Kingdom has designated some 50,000 km of waterways for the purposes of the EC directive "Quality of freshwater needing protection or improvement in order to support fish life" (78/659/EEC). In 1984, a survey which formed the basis of a report to the European Commission and which was undertaken in England and Wales by the former water authorities showed that well over 90 per cent. of these waterways met all the directive's mandatory standards and in Wales only one length of designated river, a tributary of the Rhymney, failed. Another survey which is being conducted in England and Wales by the National Rivers Authority is currently under way and the results will be placed in the Library as soon as they are available. The NRA is now responsible for the control of water pollution in England and Wales and has wide powers to seek improvements in river quality when they may be needed.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

St. John the Baptist School, Dartmouth

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he hopes to make a substantive reply to the letter from the hon. Member for South Hams concerning the specific points made by the head teacher of St. John the Baptist primary school, Mildon lane, Dartmouth, in his letter of 3 November 1989 to the Secretary of State which were not covered in his letter to the head teacher of 6 December 1989.

Mr. Alan Howarth: A reply will be sent as soon as possible.

Computer Security

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps his Department has and is taking to improve the security of its computer systems.

Mrs. Rumbold: For unclassified but sensitive systems, Departments are expected to follow CCTA guidance covering all aspects of IT security and the application of this guidance has been tightened recently. CCTA advice is kept under continuous review and is based on analysis of security risks and requirements using structured methods such as CCTA's risk analysis and management methodology (CRAMM) which has also been made commercially available. More stringent conditions apply to classified systems.

Further Education (Grants)

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has as to how much each local education authority in England and Wales has allocated for discretionary grants to students undertaking full-time and sandwich further education courses for each of the last five years.

Mr. Jackson: The available data is listed in the table.

Discretionary awards made under section 2 of the 1962 Education Act for further education courses at polytechnics and colleges.

Preventable Loss

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assessment he has made of the extent of preventable loss arising from theft or misappropriation in his Department.

Mrs. Rumbold: There is no assessment as such, as known preventable losses are prevented. The Department takes all reasonable steps to ensure that loss arising from theft or misappropriation is prevented. Financial controls operate to this end and the Department's internal audit unit provides assurance on their adequacy, effectiveness and application. The annual internal risk assessment and plan of work takes account of potential exposure. The Department's annual report of fraud to Her Majesty's Treasury for the financial year 1988-89 contained no cases of fraud perpetrated within the Department. Reassessment would occur in the light of evidence of losses from theft or misappropriation in the Department.

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will list the number of professionally qualified loss prevention staff employed by his Department and the qualifications held by such staff, excluding qualifications obtained during police or military service.

Mrs. Rumbold: The Department does not employ any professionally qualified loss prevention staff. Physical security is provided by private security companies and the Property Services Agency.

DEFENCE

Community Charge

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the rates of pay of the 411 Royal Air Force apprentices and technicians classified as students for community charge purposes and referred to in his answer to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Perry Barr of 29 January, Official Report, column 62.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: These personnel are paid at various rates ranging from £3,708 per annum to £9,399 per annum.

Mr. Colin Wallace

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Arundel (Mr. Marshall) of 30 January, Official Report, columns 110-13, if he will establish an internal inquiry into the reasons why certain relevant records were not made available to Ministers; and what steps he is taking to ensure that there is no recurrence of such circumstances.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State told the House on 1 February, an inquiry is in hand within the MOD into how papers were overlooked and the outcome will be reported to the House.

Airmiss (Tranent)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will identify the unit and base of the Tornado aircraft which was involved in an airmiss with a civil BAC1-11 flight over Tranent on 2 August 1989.

Mr. Neubert: It is our policy to preserve the anonymity in airmiss publications in order to encourage full and frank reporting of airmisses and thus ensure that flight safety is not compromised.

DROPS Vehicles

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on incidents of a Leyland DROPS trials vehicle overturning, since the last such incidents reported to the House, indicating whether the incidents occurred while being driven by Leyland-employed personnel or Ministry of Defence test drivers; and whether he is satisfied with the stability of these vehicles.

Mr. Alan Clark: While undergoing tests on 23 November 1989, a DROPS medium mobility vehicle was involved in an incident in which it fell on its side when negotiating a bend on the snake section of the track at RARDE Chertsey. The vehicle, owned by Leyland DAF, was being driven by a company employee. A subsequent inquiry established that excessive speed was the cause of the incident; the inherent stability of the vehicle is not in doubt.

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessments he has made of the safety of DROPS vehicles on the public roads; and on what grounds the decision was taken to use vehicles which exceed normal legal limits on size.

Mr. Alan Clark: As part of trials at RARDE Chertsey, all military vehicles have to be approved as suitable for road use before they are allowed on to public roads. It is MOD policy to keep within Department of Transport construction and use regulations wherever operational circumstances permit. However, because of the mobility necessary to meet its operational role, exceptionally it was necessary in the case of the DROPS improved medium mobility vehicle to invoke Crown exemption to exceed the limit laid down for axle widths by 0·4 m.

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been achieved towards achieving the last revised in-service date for DROPS and to state (a) which components of the complete DROPS supply system have been accepted for service, (b) which components of the complete DROPS supply system have now been ordered in production quantities and (c) when these individual components of the system will be in service.

Mr. Alan Clark: The DROPS medium-mobility vehicles, including the load handling system, and the standard flatracks, have been accepted for service and production quantities have been ordered. They will enter service some four to five months beyond the due date. The improved medium-mobility vehicles have been accepted for service subject to the reliability requirements being satisfied; their date of entry into service will depend upon the outcome of further trials. The rail transfer equipments have been accepted and ordered; deliveries are being made on schedule. The simple rail transfer equipments have yet to complete reliability trials and it is expected that these will enter service about a year late.

Production options for the DROPS long wheel-base trailers are expected to be exercised in the very near future and these should enter service about 12 months later than intended. It is anticipated that the MLRS trailers and flatracks, which are required in a later time scale, will enter service on schedule.

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the driver of the DROPS trials vehicle, 42 KC 12, was advised by his Department to plead guilty to a charge of driving without due care and attention; whether he was advised to enter or not to enter a plea of mitigation to the effect that, due to the size or design of the vehicle, he was unable to see the car he crushed; and whether the fine and costs imposed by Basingstoke magistrates court in December 1989 have been, or will be, reimbursed to the driver.

Mr. Alan Clark: The driver of the vehicle was given no advice and pleaded guilty of his own volition. He has considerable experience of driving this type of vehicle and freely admitted that the cause of the accident was driver error; a plea of mitigation was not made. He has not been and will not be reimbursed for the fine or the costs he incurred as a result.

Western European Union

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what response he has had from the Belgian Defence Minister, now president of the WEU, to his letter of early December 1989 suggesting closer ties between the independent European programme group and the WEU; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: It is assumed that my hon. Friend is referring to the letter sent last November by my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Defence, to my hon. Friend the Member for Hampstead and Highgate (Sir G. Finsberg), the leader of the United Kingdom delegation to the WEU assembly. That letter expressed merit in a closer association between the Independent European Programme Group (IEPG) and the WEU. A detailed information letter on the IEPG was subsequently sent to the WEU presidency by the IEPG chair. As yet there has been no response from the WEU.

Hunts

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many hunts have licences to hunt on Ministry of Defence land; and if he will provide details of the hunts, the areas they are permitted to hunt on and the conditions of the licences.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces will write to the hon. Member.

Military Research and Development

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made in exploiting military research and development for civilian purposes.

Mr. Neubert: Where technology developed for defence purposes also has civil applications, the Government are committed to maximising the benefit to the wider economy through spin-off to, and collaboration with, the civil sector. Some 70 technological transfer agreements with industry, mainly in the form of licences, have now been signed by Defence Technology Enterprises for the exploitation of innovative technology, and more are under negotiation. The civil industrial access scheme (CIAS), launched in February 1988, is designed to give commercial firms improved access to the facilities and expertise of the defence research establishments. They also undertake work funded by civil Departments, mainly in the fields of aerospace and electronics and participate in a range of collaborative initiatives with commercial firms.

SCOTLAND

Fishing Quotas

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he intends to take to ensure that Scottish FPOs will not in the future exceed their quotas.

Mr. Lang: Fisheries Departments will closely monitor the uptake of United Kingdom quotas by all groups in 1990. As in previous years, Fisheries Departments will close a fishery to any FPO if it appears, on the basis of available catch statistics, that the organisation is near to taking its allocation. Under current management arrangements, any group exceeding its quota to the detriment of others must compensate those who have been disadvantaged in the following year. Latest catch statistics show that various groups, both English and Scottish, exceeded their quotas in 1989 to the detriment of other Scottish and English fishermen.

Incoming Firms

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much incoming firms, established since the formation of Locate in Scotland have contributed to (a) the Exchequer, (b) exports and (c) imports.

Mr. Lang: This information is not available.

Investment

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list the instances of inward investment into Scotland made since the formation of Locate in Scotland; and what was (a) the total number of permanent new jobs created and (b) the number of companies created which had a research and development facility;

(2) if he will state the number of new jobs forecasted at the time of announcement of new inward investment projects by Locate in Scotland for each year of Locate in Scotland's operation, listing each project, the number of new jobs forecasted in the SDA/Scottish Office news release at the time of the announcement, and the actual number of jobs today.

Mr. Lang: It is not possible to provide details of individual projects, as much of the information concerned is supplied on a commercial in confidence basis; and information is not available on the numbers of inward investing companies which established a research and development facility.

However, the table shows the total number of new jobs forecast by companies at the time their plans were made.

Year	New jobs
1981-82	4,500
1982-83	4,200
1983-84	3,500
1984-85	8,169
1985-86	4,663
1986-87	4,106
1987-88	6,363
1988-89	4,846

For a variety of reasons, job achievement has varied as plans have changed; and many of the projects concerned have yet to be completed. Experience suggests, however, that on average the final direct employment outturn may be about two thirds of the planned level, although a significant number of additional jobs are also created indirectly in supply and service industries.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of industrial investment, inward investment has represented for each year since Locate in Scotland was formed.

Mr. Lang: The information requested is not readily available in the form required. The table shows manufacturing investment by foreign-owned enterprises as a percentage of total manufacturing investment from 1983 to the latest available figures for 1987.

Manufacturing investment by foreign-owned enterprises as a percentage of total manufacturing investment

Year	Percentage
1983	29·2
1984	25·9
1985	31·4
1986	29·1
1987	26·0

Note: Information is not available for 1982.

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of total employment in Scotland inward investment has represented for each year since Locate in Scotland was formed.

Mr. Lang: The information requested is not readily available in the form required. The table gives the information on employment in overseas-owned plants for the period 1982, when Locate in Scotland was formed, to 1988. Figures for 1988 should be regarded as provisional.

	Manufacturing employment in overseas-owned plants (thousands)	Total manufacturing employment in Scotland (thousands)	Percentage of total manufacturing employment attributable to overseas-owned plants
1982	80·2	421·7	19·0
1983	71·1	398·8	17·9
1984	70·9	382·0	18·5
1985	72·9	375·5	19·4
1986	70·2	368·6	19·0
1987	70·9	358·0	19·8
1988	70·0	351·0	20·0

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will outline the monitoring procedures for ensuring that inward investors use public money for spending on new jobs; how many breaches of the rules there have been; and how much money has been involved in such breaches.

Mr. Lang: Following the restructuring of regional assistance in 1984, all offers of grant, whether to foreign or United Kingdom-owned companies, have contained specific provisions for withholding grant payments, or securing recovery of grant already paid if, among other conditions, jobs are not created or safeguarded according to the conditions of the offer. Officials make periodic inspections to monitor progress of projects both before and after completion. Between April 1987 and January 1990, a total of about £1 million of regional assistance was recovered in Scotland because of failure to meet one or more conditions of offer. Separate information for inward investors, and on grant recovered or withheld specifically because of failure to meet job targets, could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Investors and Companies (Financial Assistance)

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list under each category of public sector financial assistance available to both inward investors and established companies in Scotland between 1979 and the latest available figures the total amount granted to incoming companies and the total amount granted to established companies and the average grant per company in each category by size;

(2) what has been the total amount of public sector and central Government financial assistance made available to incoming firms since the formation of Locate in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: Comprehensive information in the form requested is not available. Between January 1979 and December 1989, a total of £321 million of regional selective assistance under section 7 of the Industrial Development Act 1982 was offered in Scotland to companies whose ultimate ownership lay outside the United Kingdom, and £297 million was offered to domestically owned companies. The average size of offer made to foreign owned companies was £0·81 million and to domestically owned companies £0·17 million, reflecting the fact that inward investors tend to set up larger projects. Not all of these offers were taken up. A total of £284 million of this assistance was offered to foreign owned companies since the formation of Locate in Scotland in 1981.

Corresponding information for other types of assistance and data by size of company are not available, or could be provided only at disproportionate costs.

Locate in Scotland

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total running cost of Locate in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: The total running cost of Locate in Scotland in the most recently completed year, 1988-89, was approximately £4 million.

Computer Security

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps his Department has taken, and is taking to improve the security of its computer systems.

Mr. Rifkind: For unclassified but sensitive systems my Department follows Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency (CCTA) guidance covering all aspects of information technology security and the application of this has recently been tightened up. CCTA advice is kept under continuous review and is based on analysis of security risks and requirements using structured methods such as CCTA's risk analysis and management methodology (CRAMM) which has also been made commercially available. More stringent conditions apply to classified systems.

Pensioners (Bus Passes)

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish in the Official Report the estimated cost (a) to community charge payers and (b) to business rate payers of providing free bus travel for pensioners in each of the regional councils in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: While community charge payers and business rate payers contribute to local authorities' income, from which the cost of services are met, it is not possible to attribute the cost of a service to a particular source of income.

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish in the Official Report the estimated cost of providing free bus travel to pensioners in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Local authorities have estimated the cost of providing concessionary travel on public transport for pensioners and disabled persons in 1989-90 at £42·7 million. The cost for pensioners only is not available centrally.

"Ethnically-Based Statistics on School Pupils"

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his circular No. 8, "Ethnically-Based Statistics on School Pupils", with specific reference to (a) how widely he anticipates the circulation of the document to be, with specific reference to the preparation of individual schools within education authorities which he expects to receive it, (b) whether the onus of responsibility for circulation falls primarily upon the education authority or upon individual schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: These are matters for education authorities, to whom the circular is addressed. The circular invites authorities to issue appropriate guidance to schools and/or to offer training to staff involved in the collection of data.

Electricity Privatisation

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all the organisations, firms and individual advisers which have advised or are now advising his Department on any aspect of the privatisation of electricity, including any jointly instructed for this purpose with the Department of Energy, giving in each case the dates of their involvement and the aspect on which they advise.

Mr. Rifkind: The information requested is set out in the table. Each of the advisers' involvement is continuing. No appointments have been made jointly with the Department of Energy.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current estimate of the total fees which will be paid by his Department in connection with the privatisation of the Scottish electricity industry to the end of March 1989, for the current year, and in total.

Mr. Rifkind: Expenditure to the end of March 1989 amounted to £2·7 million and the revised provision for the current year is £4·95 million. Latest forecasts of requirements for 1990-91 will be published as part of the Supply Estimates in March. The overall costs of privatisation will be made available once flotation has been completed.

Greater Glasgow Health Board

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide detailed information on the contracts awarded by the Greater Glasgow health board in connection with the Government's competitive tendering initiative; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: As at 31 December 1989, Greater Glasgow health board had let 54 contracts—32 in-house and 22 to private contractors. Costs, savings and other relevant details are set out in the table:

Education Expenditure

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the capital expenditure on local authority schools in each of the past 10 years in cash and constant price terms.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 5 February 1990]: The information is given in the following table, which has been compiled from local authority financial returns. The reduction in expenditure in real terms during the period reflects a substantial and progressive decline in pupil numbers which in turn reduced the requirement for new school building.

Capital expenditure by local authorities on schools (£ million)

Year	At outturn prices	At 1988-89 prices
1979-80	47·598	89·625
1980-81	52·301	83·214

1987-88	48·260	51·761
[1]1988-89	59·392	59·392

[1] Provisional.

The figures include expenditure on nursery, primary, secondary and special schools. Outturn figures have been converted to 1988-89 prices using the GDP deflator.

Cochlear Implants

Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much additional finance he has made available (a) in total to health boards in Scotland and (b) to each health board in Scotland, to enable a programme of cochlear implants to be established; and when he expects such programmes to commence.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 6 February 1990]: With effect from 1 April 1990, a total of £200,000 will be made available each year for the next three years to support the programme of cochlear implants in Scotland which I announced on 11 January. Of that amount, £150,000 per annum will be allocated to Ayrshire and Arran health board which already has an established programme and has built up considerable expertise in this procedure.

A number of surgeons elsewhere in Scotland have expressed interest in developing this exciting new technique which greatly enhances the quality of life for some deaf people. Accordingly, bids will be invited from other health boards for the remaining £50,000 per annum to facilitate the development of a second centre.

SOCIAL SECURITY

SERPS

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the cost of (a) contribution rebates and (b) greater payments to those withdrawing from SERPS in (i) 1987-88, (ii) 1988-89 and (iii) 1989-90.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Member to appendix 7 of the report by the Government Actuary on the Drafts of the Social Security Benefits Uprating Order 1990 and the Social Security (Contributions, Re-Rating) Order 1990 (Cm 948), a copy of which is in the Library.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the total number of contributors leaving SERPS by the end of this financial year; what has been the total cost of incentive payments to them; and what was the total loss of contributions to the fund in the financial year.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: It is not possible to give an estimate of the number of people who will have left SERPS in this financial year to become members of an occupational or personal pension scheme, but it is anticipated that the vast majority of those taking out a personal pension will previously have been in SERPS.

The Government Actuary's estimate of revenue forgone by the national insurance fund in 1990-91 through payment of the incentive for personal pensions and new contracted-out schemes in respect of 1989-90 is £615 million. His estimate of total revenue forgone in 1990-91 in respect of the incentive and the standard rebates is £2,115 million.

Community Charge

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are his present estimates of (a) expenditure on community charge benefit, (b) the average number of benefit cases and (c) the number of charge payers that will be helped by community charge benefit in England, Scotland and Wales in 1990-91.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information is in the table.

Community Charge Benefit 1990-91

	England	Scotland	Wales	Great Britain
Central Government grant to local authorities: (£ billion)	£1·45	£0·22	£0·07	£1·75
Average number of benefit cases (million)	6·5	0·9	0·4	7·9
Average number of chargepayers helped by Community Charge Benefit: (millions)	8·1	1·15	0·5	9·75

In addition, adjustments were made in April 1989 to the income-related benefits, to help claimants pay their minimum contribution to the community charge, at a cost of more than £500 million in Great Britain (£400 million in England).

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many persons in each of the past five years died before their claim for attendance allowance had been processed.

Mr. Scott: I regret that this information is not available.

Child Benefit

Mr. Raison: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage uprating of child benefit is allowed for in the Government's latest expenditure plans for 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer my right hon. Friend to paragraph 62 and table 14.1 of the public expenditure White Paper (Cm. 1014) published last month.

National Insurance

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in Scotland paid the appropriate national insurance contributions for self-employed status in every year since 1979.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that the information requested is not available.

Pensioners (Australia, New Zealand and Canada)

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what plans he has to make pension increases when paid at home available to British pensioners living in (a) Australia and (b) New Zealand;

(2) whether he now has any plans to make pension increases when paid at home available to British pensioners living in Canada.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have no plans at present to pay annual increases in retirement pensions to United Kingdom pensioners living in Australia, New Zealand or Canada.

Disability Allowance

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will ensure that existing beneficiaries of attendance allowance have their level of benefits protected and increased once the new disability allowance is introduced;

Mr. Scott: The introduction of the disability allowance will not affect the level of benefit paid to existing recipients of attendance allowance. We will continue to review the level of the benefit annually. The same procedure will apply to the new disability allowance when it is introduced.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will ensure that existing beneficiaries of mobility allowance have their level of benefits protected and increased once the new disability allowance is introduced.

Mr. Scott: The introduction of the disability allowance will not affect the level of benefit paid to existing recipients of mobility allowance. We will continue to review the level of the benefit annually. The same procedure will apply to the new disability allowance when introduced.

Disabled People

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people who are in receipt of severe disablement allowance are (a) in receipt of income support and (b) in receipt of another means-tested benefit.

Mr. Scott: I refer the right hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Exeter (Mr. Hannam) on 7 February 1990 at columns 577-78.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people who are in receipt of severe disablement allowance will gain an increase in their real disposable income as a result of the new proposed age-related additions to severe disablement allowance.

Mr. Scott: I refer the right hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Gr[illegible]ham, West (Mr. Meacher) on 19 January at columns 483-84.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his Department's estimate of the number of disabled people who have extra costs above the existing rates of attendance and mobility allowance.

Mr. Scott: The most up-to-date information available is contained in the 1985 Office of Population Censuses and Surveys' surveys of disabled adults and disabled children in private households and shows that about 95,000 recipients of attendance allowance or mobility allowance reported additional disability-related expenditure in excess of the amounts of those benefits which they were receiving. That takes no account of any additional help with disability-related costs which they may have been receiving through other benefits, including supplementary benefit. About 700,000 recipients of attendance allowance and mobility allowance reported additional disability-related expenditure that was less than the amounts of benefit received. The 1988 social security reforms have since introduced extra help specifically for disabled people on the lowest incomes.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to increase the level of severe disablement allowance to the level of basic invalidity benefit in line with the Social Security Advisory Committee's recommendation.

Mr. Scott: The Social Security Bill currently before the House introduces age-related additions to severe disablement allowance. We have no present plans to bring the rate of the allowance up to the level of invalidity benefit.

Hospital Visits

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, for each month since January 1989, what was the total number of grants awarded by the Caernarfon social security office to assist those visiting patients in hospitals.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, for each month since January 1989, what was the total amount of grants allowed by the Llangefni social security office to assist those visiting patients in hospitals.

Mr. Scott: I regret that this information is not collected.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Guatemala

15. Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will seek to raise human rights violations in Guatemala at the United Nations Commission on Human Rights.

Mr. Maude: There is currently a UN special adviser on human rights in Guatemala. His report is likely to be discussed at the 46th session of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights.

Helsinki Agreement

16. Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement regarding the USSR's fulfilment of its outstanding human rights obligations following on from the Helsinki agreement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Despite substantial progress in Soviet human rights performance under Mr. Gorbachev, the Soviet Union is still some way from meeting its international obligations in full. In particular there are still a considerable number of unresolved refusenik cases, on which we continue to press the Soviet authorities.

Romania

17. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to visit Romania.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs hopes to be able to visit Romania in the next few months.

Iraq

18. Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has received about the position of Kurdish people in Iraq.

Mr. Waldegrave: We receive regular representations from individuals and organisations about the position of the Kurdish minorities in Iraq. We take every opportunity to make clear to the Iraqi Government at all levels our continuing disquiet at Iraq's human rights record and their treatment of its Kurdish population.

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the United Kingdom's relations with Iraq.

Mr. Waldegrave: We attach importance to our bilateral relationship with Iraq and have regular contact with Iraqi Ministers. This allows us to discuss regional issues and to make clear our concerns on such matters as the continuing detention in Iraq of British subjects and reports of Iraqi human rights abuses. We also have important trading links: United Kingdom exports to Iraq in 1989 rose by over 9 per cent. compared with 1988.

Palestinian Self-Determination

19. Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will launch an initiative to encourage moves towards Palestinian self-determination.

Mr. Waldegrave: We support Palestinian self-determination and are closely involved in current efforts to promote a dialogue between Israel and representative Palestinians, as an important step towards a settlement.

South Africa

20. Mr. Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a further statement on United Kingdom policy towards the latest developments in South Africa.

Mr. Waldegrave: The moves President de Klerk announced on 2 February are an historic landmark on the road to a new South Africa. We urge opposition groups such as the ANC, PAC and others, to respond positively and join in negotiations to achieve a peaceful transition to a non-racial South Africa.

21. Mr Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent communications he has had with the Government of South Africa; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We maintain regular contact with the South African authorities on a wide range of issues, both here and via Her Majesty's ambassador.

66. Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action Her Majesty's Government have undertaken to secure the implementation of UNSCR 432 on Walvis bay.

Mr. Waldegrave: As we and other members of the contact group made clear when UNSCR 432 was adopted, we are prepared to offer diplomatic support to achieve a successful negotiation on the issue of Walvis bay between the Governments of an independent Namibia and South Africa.

59. Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the implications for the United Nations arms embargo against South Africa of proposed changes in the COCOM system of controls of military and strategic exports.

Mr. Waldegrave: There are no implications for the United Nations arms embargo.

54. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contact he has had recently with the Foreign Minister of South Africa.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has not yet met Mr. Botha but has contact through normal diplomatic channels.

49. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Republic of South Africa regarding the release of all political detainees.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have made frequent representations on behalf of detainees in South Africa. We will continue to urge the South African Government either to charge or release unconditionally all those so detained.

30. Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the implications for stability in southern Africa of South Africa's expansion of military facilities in Walvis bay.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have no evidence of such expansion. On 19 January the South African Government announced that the naval base at Walvis bay would be scaled down as part of a wide-ranging package of defence cuts.

CSCE

22. Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether, in the light of the recent changes in eastern Europe, he is in favour of reconvening the Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe; to what extent he sees the Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe as a vehicle for increased East-West European co-operation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: On 20 January, in Dublin, EC Foreign Ministers agreed in principle to a CSCE summit meeting in 1990. We view this as an opportune proposal. The CSCE process has a valuable role to play in overcoming East-West barriers. We should use it imaginatively in the months ahead.

25. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with his European Community counterparts regarding the creation of a forum other than the Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe to discuss European co-operation and security matters.

Mr. Maude: None. At the European Council in Strasbourg on 8-9 December 1989, EC Heads of State and Government pointed to the vitality of the CSCE process, describing it as a means of establishing new relations among European countries in the areas of security, economic and technical co-operation and of human rights.

Inter-governmental Conference

23. Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out his objectives for the forthcoming European Community inter-governmental conference.

Mr. Maude: Our objective is practical progress towards a robust and realistic form of economic and monetary union, with full regard to democratic accountability and the doctrine of subsidiarity.

85. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he is satisfied with the progress being made in the EEC Council of Ministers on preparations for the December 1990 inter-governmental conference of the Community; and if he will make a statement on current proposals to augment the terms of reference and scope of the conference.

Mr. Maude: The Strasbourg Council noted the Commission's intention to submit, before April, a composite paper on economic and monetary union. The ECOFIN Council on 18 December 1989 asked the Monetary Committee to undertake further work and report in March. Our EC colleagues and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs briefly discussed the work programme at the Foreign Affairs Council on 5 February. The Strasbourg Council decided that the inter-governmental conference would set its own agenda.

African National Congress

24. Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has any plans to meet senior members of the African National Congress.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has no current plans to do so. However, he has made it clear that if Mr. Walter Sisulu visits this country he would be happy to meet him.

Israel

26. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations between Britain and Israel.

Mr. Waldegrave: Relations with Israel are good.

27. Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he intends taking as a signatory to the fourth Geneva convention on the recent report by Amnesty International on the Israeli Government's treatment of Palestinians in the occupied territories.

38. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he intends taking as a signatory to the fourth Geneva convention on the recent report by Amnesty International on the Israeli Government's treatment of Palestinians in the occupied territories.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Israelis are well aware that we deplore their repressive policies in the occupied territories. We have already raised with them some of the cases cited by Amnesty.

84. Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met a representative of the Israeli Government.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs looks forward to maintaining the close working relationship which his predecessors enjoyed with Israeli Ministers. I saw the Israeli ambassador on 30 January and 1 February.

56. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Israeli Government about the intifada and the way in which Israeli troops are being used.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have repeatedly urged the Israeli authorities to administer the occupied territories in accordance with international law and human rights obligations, pending their withdrawal in the context of a negotiated settlement of the Arab/Israel dispute.

57. Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to support the decision of the European Parliament to suspend scientific co-operation with Israel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: No.

Cricket Tour, South Africa

28. Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the South African authorities concerning the action of the South African police at Jan Smuts airport on 19 January against those objecting to the rebel cricket tour of South Africa and against British journalists covering the protests.

Mr. Waldegrave: We deplore the use of violence from whatever quarter in South Africa. We have expressed our concern to the South African authorities over recent incidents. We note that the South African Government are committed to allowing peaceful demonstrations provided proper authority is sought.

Hong Kong

29. Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to meet Chinese leaders to discuss elections to the Hong Kong Legislative Council.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has no present plans to meet Chinese leaders.

48. Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what communications he has received from the committee meeting held on the weekend of 20 and 21 January to discuss a basic law for Hong Kong post-1997.

Mr. Maude: None. The drafting of the basic law is a matter for the Chinese Government. However, we are following the drafting process extremely closely and, where necessary, seek clarification from and make representations to the Chinese Government. The content of those exchanges is confidential.

43. Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations there have been between his Department and the Chinese Government about the percentage of Hong Kong legislature positions to be directly elected post-1997.

Mr. Maude: The Chinese Government are currently finalising the drafting of the political structure provisions of the basic law. We have made clear to the Chinese Government, on a number of occasions, the importance of a basic law which fully reflects Hong Kong people's views, especially in this important area.

44. Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current emigration situation in Hong Kong.

Mr. Maude: Some 42,000 people emigrated from Hong Kong in 1989, of whom about 20,000 were part of the working population. Of these, about 50 per cent. were professional, technical, administrative and management personnel.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what training the immigration officers, currently involved in the screening process of the Vietnam refugees in Hong Kong, have undertaken.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 24 January 1990]: Immigration officers assigned to screening duties have attended training courses conducted by the immigration department and the UNHCR's legal officers from the department of law and doctrine. In addition, there are frequent formal and informal in-service training sessions designed to ensure that the screening procedures are being carried out in accordance with UNHCR guidelines.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the refugee status review board in Hong Kong is obliged to give reason for a negative decision.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 24 January 1990]: The refugee status review board is not obliged to state its reasons for upholding a decision for the director of immigration.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Vietnamese asylum seekers, their representatives or the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees are allowed to be present at the meeting, where the refugee status review board considers individual cases.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 24 January 1990]: No. But the representatives of the asylum seekers and the UNHCR have an opportunity to put all the relevant information to the board before their cases are considered. The board may also interview asylum seekers if it requires clarification of any matter of fact.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many punishment cells there are at present in the Hong Kong camps; what are the dimensions of such cells; what is the average stay of each individual in the cells; and how widespread is their use.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 24 January 1990]: Of the 10 Vietnamese boat people detention centres in Hong Kong, four have segregation sections, containing a combined total of 133 cubicles. The dimensions of these varies from 3·5 sq m to 7·5 sq m. The average length of stay is 14 days. They are used only for persons who seriously and repeatedly breach detention centre rules.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will commission a fully independent and impartial inquiry into the methods used by the correctional services department and the tactical response squad in the Hong Kong camps.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 24 January 1990]: No. We are fully satisfied with the work of correctional services department (CSD) staff and the tactical response squad.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the number of disturbances that have taken place in the closed camps in Hong Kong since June 1988 and the number of detainees involved.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 24 January 1990]: Most disturbances in the detention centres since June 1988 have been caused by clashes between rival groups of boat people. There were 25 such incidents during the period June 1988 to January 1990 involving groups of between 50 and 400 people. In addition, there were three serious disturbances directed against police or correctional services department officers. These were:

Place	Time	Numbers involved
Sek Kong	July 1989	2,000
Tai a Chau	August 1989	1,000
Chi Ma Wan	December 1989	3,000

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what processes the detainees in the Hong Kong camps have open to them to complain about alleged attacks and ill-treatment at the hands of the police and correctional services department.

Mr. Maude [holding answer 24 January 1990]: Complaints may be made to visiting justices of the peace, to the UNHCR protection and field officers who work in all camps or, in the case of the police, to the complaints against the police office. All such complaints are thoroughly investigated.

Somalia

31. Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of international efforts to achieve peace in Somalia.

Mr. Waldegrave: The achievement of peace in Somalia must be primarily a matter for the Somali people. We continue to support all constructive efforts to promote this process. Regrettably there is little sign of progress so far.

European Single Market

32. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what implications the 1992 changes will have for international relations between Britain and (a) other European Community member states and (b) developing or undeveloped countries.

Mr. Maude: The single market programme will integrate the economies of the EC member states more closely. By removing barriers to trade, and increasing the size of the market, it should provide new opportunities for those of our trading partners who are outside the Community.

Immigration

33. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to ensure that the operation of immigration controls overseas is made more effective.

Mr. Maude: Applications made overseas for entry clearance to come to the United Kingdom are dealt with in accordance with the immigration rules (HC 388). The entry clearance operation is kept under continual review and we are satisfied that it operates effectively.

Nelson Mandela

34. Mr. Orme: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the impending release of Nelson Mandela.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have been at the forefront of those calling for Mr. Mandela's early and unconditional release. We warmly welcome the decision announced by President de Klerk on 2 February that Mr. Mandela will shortly be released.

Eastern Europe

35. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further steps his Department will take to help support the political and economic reforms taking place among the countries of eastern Europe.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have said that we will extend the know-how fund to other eastern European countries once they are fully committed to reform. Meanwhile we will also support the reforms through an expanded programme of ministerial contacts, visits, seminars and training schemes. We will continue to play a major role in international efforts to support the reform process.

36. Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what Her Majesty's Government are doing to ensure that European Community aid to eastern Europe is properly utilised in projects that will enable successful market economies to emerge.

Mr. Maude: EC Heads of Government agreed at the Strasbourg European Council that a major objective in responding to developments in eastern Europe should be consolidation of democratic reform and promotion of market-based economies. British Ministers and officials consult closely the European Commission, EC partners and other members of the Western Group of 24 on the best means of achieving this objective. Commission proposals for EC aid made against this background are considered fully in the Council and in the management committee which oversees expenditure of the EC's aid budget for eastern Europe. Member states' agreement is required before aid projects are implemented.

81. Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further assessment he has made of the impact on future Government policy of recent events in eastern Europe.

Mr. Maude: We warmly welcome the recent historic changes in eastern Europe and we shall continue to support the political and economic reforms which are now occurring. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs was glad to announce on 22 January that our know-how funds for Poland and Hungary will now be expanded to include the remaining countries of the region, as they move decisively toward democracy and the adoption of market-based economic systems.

76. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the desirability of institutional changes in the European Community following the developments in eastern Europe.

Mr. Maude: We welcome the process of economic and political reform which has swept eastern Europe. We agree the Community must continue to develop, and want faster integration. The immediate priority is for pressing ahead with completing the single market programme on which the United Kingdom has taken a leading role. Proposals for institutional change should be considered on their merits.

40. Sir Anthony Meyer: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with other EC Ministers about future relations with the states of eastern Europe.

Mr. Maude: Eastern Europe was the focus of the Dublin meeting of EC Foreign Ministers on 20 January. Those discussions resumed at the Foreign Affairs Council on 5 February. The Community intends to complete the network of agreements covering trade and commercial and economic co-operation with the emerging democracies of eastern Europe. As their economic and political reforms progress, the Council will consider wider forms of association and the criteria that are appropriate.

European Commission

37. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to meet the President of the European Commission; and what will be discussed.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs next expects to meet the President of the European Commission at the Foreign Affairs Council meeting on 5 March, when a range of EC issues will be discussed.

61. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the President of the European Commission, Jacques Delors; and what was discussed.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs met Mr. Delors at the Foreign Affairs Council on 5 February at which a range of European Community issues were discussed.

Middle East

39. Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Britain's contribution towards finding a diplomatic and peaceful solution to the Palestinian-Israeli conflict acceptable to the international community.

55. Sir Dennis Walters: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress towards peace in the middle east.

Mr. Waldegrave: We support the current efforts to promote a dialogue between Israel and representative Palestinians as an important step towards a settlement.

China

41. Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to meet the Chinese Foreign Minister; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has no plans to do so.

83. Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations between Britain and the People's Republic of China.

Mr. Maude: I refer the hon.Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Christchurch (Mr. Adley) on 20 October, column 267.

63. Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will comment on his most recent discussions with the Government of the People's Republic of China.

67. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the Chinese ambassador; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs is in touch with the Chinese Government on a number of issues, including the future of Hong Kong, on which he reported to the House on 17 January.

50. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government policy on human rights violations in China.

Mr. Maude: We have been unequivocal in our condemnation of the suppression of the pro-democracy movement in Peking last year. We and our partners will continue to take suitable opportunities to register our concerns.

Palestinian Liberation Organisation

42. Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government will desist from any further contacts with the Palestinian Liberation Organisation as long as it is its policy that Arab countries should open their borders to Palestinian Fedayeen action.

Mr. Waldegrave: Through its renunciation of terrorism and its recognition of Israel, the PLO has earned the right to participate in the peace process. Our dialogue with it is conducted on that basis.

Ethiopia

45. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the prospects for peace in Ethiopia.

Mr. Waldegrave: The respective talks between the Ethiopian Government and the Eritrean People's Liberation Front and the Tigrayan People's Liberation Front have not yet got beyond procedural matters. We urge all involved to persevere since negotiations offer the only prospect of a lasting peace.

Nicaragua

46. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on plans by EEC countries to observe the Nicaraguan elections.

Mr. Maude: The United Kingdom is sending an official observer, Dr. David Browning. No other EC Government will be sending official observers to the Nicaraguan elections. However, we understand that a number of parliamentarians from EC countries will observe the election, some as members of the UN observer mission. A group of Members of the European Parliament will also observe the elections.

Yugoslavia

47. Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Yugoslavia about human rights in Kosovo.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have frequently raised human rights matters with the Yugoslav authorities. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs discussed the question of Kosovo with the Yugoslav ambassor, Mr. Rikonovic, on 22 November.

British Hostages

51. Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made about the fate of Terry Waite and other British hostages; and to whom.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have raised the matter with a wide range of Governments and organisations which might have influence on the hostage holders, but we do not make public confidential exchanges between Governments.

Know-how Funds

52. Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what aid his Department is channelling to Romania; and if he has considered the extension of the know-how fund beyond Poland and Hungary.

Mr. Waldegrave: As well as the initial consignment of medical supplies sent to Romania on 24 December, we have given medical equipment and literature. Five victims of the December fighting arrived in the United Kingdom for urgent treatment on 31 January. We made a major contribution to the £7·5 million of emergency medical and food supplies sent by the EC between 22 and 31 December, and shall also do so in relation to the further £27 million food aid package which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs agreed with EC colleagues on 20 January. Furthermore, my right hon. Friend announced on 22 January that the know-how fund will be expanded to include other countries of eastern Europe, as well as Poland and Hungary, once they are firmly committed to reform.

Drugs

53. Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what particular initiative he is hoping to take at the forthcoming special United Nations session on drug misuse and trafficking.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs will be going to the special session. The United Kingdom will be working for a commitment to improving the effectiveness of the United Nations effort against drugs, and for agreement on a practical programme of international and national action—including ratification of relevant United Nations conventions, measures to strengthen the monitoring of precursor chemical movements, and undertakings to develop a network of agreements to trace, freeze and confiscate the proceeds of drug trafficking.

64. Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will next meet heads of state of the Andean group of countries to discuss drug trafficking.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs expects to meet President Barco of Colombia when he attends the London drugs summit conference in April. He hopes then also to meet the representatives of the other Andean countries to the conference.

Vietnamese Boat People

58. Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the latest figures for numbers of Vietnamese boat people repatriated forcibly and voluntarily from Hong Kong.

Mr. Maude: Eleven hundred and one Vietnamese have returned voluntarily from Hong Kong to Vietnam. Fifty-one Vietnamese, who had not volunteered to return, were repatriated on 12 December 1989. No force was used.

Cyprus

60. Mr. Holt: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met the Greek Cypriot leader to discuss the future of Cyprus.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs last met President Vassiliou of Cyprus on 28 November 1989.

82. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last discussed with the Secretary-General of the United Nations the present position in Cyprus; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has not yet discussed the Cyprus question with the United Nations Secretary-General. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister did so on 8 November. Officials are in frequent touch with the Secretary-General in connection with the Cyprus good offices mission, which we fully support.

Baltic States

62. Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to discuss the future of the Baltic states with his Soviet counterpart.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. The Soviet Union is well aware of our policy towards the Baltic states.

Amazon Rain Forest

65. Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he will next meet the Peruvian ambassador to discuss the destruction of the Amazon rain forest.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has no plans to meet the Peruvian ambassador for this purpose.

George Belitsky

68. Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will raise with the Soviet authorities the case of George Belitsky who is unable to apply for an exit visa until 2010.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have raised the case of George Belitsky on numerous occasions, most recently when my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs met Mr. Shevardnadze in London on 19 December. The case was also raised at senior official level during Anglo-Soviet talks on human rights held in Moscow on 9 January. We shall continue to press the Soviet authorities until there is a satisfactory outcome.

Cambodia

69. Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of international efforts to secure an urgent peaceful settlement in the Cambodian conflict.

Mr. Maude: Asia directors of the five permanent members of the Security Council met on 15-16 January in Paris to discuss the problem of Cambodia. They agreed a set of principles to guide them in working for a resolution of the Cambodia problem, including an enhanced role for the United Nations. A further meeting is planned in New York in the first half of February.

78. Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last discussed Cambodia or Vietnam with the American Secretary of State.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs last discussed Cambodia with Secretary of State Baker on 11 December 1989. They discussed the problem of Vietnamese boat people in Hong Kong on 29 January 1990.

Third World

70. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent meetings he has had with other European Economic Community Foreign Ministers to discuss relations with Third world countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: Relations with developing countries and regions are regularly discussed both within the Council and in political co-operation. The European Council of 8-9 December issued statements on the middle east, Lebanon, the Euro-Arab conference, Southern Africa, Ethiopia, Chile and Central America. A new Lomé convention providing for comprehensive trade, aid and co-operation was agreed in December between the EC and 68 developing countries in Africa, the Caribbean and Pacific.

Diplomatic Links

71. Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries do not have full diplomatic links with Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 14 November 1989 by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Riverside (Mr. Parry).

Falkland Islands

72. Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, what the population of the Falkland Islands was in 1982; and what it is at the present time.

Mr. Maude: According to the December 1980 census the population of the Falkland Islands was then 1,813. The figure for the next census, in December 1986, was 1,947. We do not know precisely what the population was in 1982, but local estimates place it at around 1,700. The estimated current population is about 2,050.

Sri Lanka

73. Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Government of Sri Lanka.

Mr. Maude: We have a regular dialogue with the Government of Sri Lanka on a wide range of matters. These have in the last few months included a number of representations on human rights issues.

EC Policies

74. Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further proposals he intends to place before his European Community partners for the development of Community policies.

Mr. Maude: We shall continue to play a full and leading part in the development of the Community.

Vietnam (Emigration)

75. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made by his Department since December to the Vietnamese Government concerning the potential of further emigration from north Vietnam to Hong Kong when the South China sea sailing season commences.

Mr. Maude: Her Majesty's embassy in Hanoi is in regular contact with the Vietnamese Government over aspects of the boat people problem, in particular the possibility of further large-scale emigration during the forthcoming sailing season. Under the terms of the comprehensive plan of action agreed in Geneva last June, the Vietnamese authorities are obliged to take measures to deter people from leaving clandestinely and to encourage those who wish to leave to do so through the orderly departure programme.

Warsaw Pact

77. Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps the Government are taking to encourage the moves towards democracy amongst the member nations of the Warsaw pact.

Mr. Maude: We are actively considering ways in which we can help the countries of eastern Europe in this field. Groups of Hungarian and Polish politicians have already participated in successful seminars on the United Kingdom parliamentary system organised by the Great Britain/East Europe Centre. Budding politicians from Bulgaria, Romania, Czechoslovakia and the GDR will attend similar seminars in the coming months to look at our political and parliamentary system in order to help them organise their parties and electoral campaigns.

In addition, the IPU is sending factfinding missions to these four countries to determine how the IPU could be of assistance in the parliamentary field.

Lithuania

79. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to establish diplomatic relations with Lithuania.

Mr. Waldegrave: We cannot establish diplomatic relations with Lithuania, which is not a sovereign independent state. It was unlawfully incorporated into the Soviet Union in 1940.

East Germany

80. Mr. Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what matters were discussed during his visit to East Germany in January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, North-East (Mr. Thurnham) on 1 February.

86. Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Germany.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs visited Bonn on 6 February to give a speech to the Konrad Adenauer Foundation. He met Chancellor Kohl, Herr Genscher and Herr Rühe, for a broad range of discussions on topics of current interest. He visited East Berlin and the GDR from 22-24 January, and I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, North-East (Mr. Thurnham) on 1 February.

Lorrain Osman

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will now make a statement on the future of Lorrain Osman.

Mr. John Patten: I have been asked to reply.

Mr. Osman is the subject of an extradition request from Hong Kong and has been committed for return there. The delay in his return reflects both the complexity of the case and the series of appeals which Mr. Osman has made against his extradition, since the law provides that a fugitive cannot be surrendered while proceedings on such appeals are pending. The sequence of events demonstrates how it is Mr. Osman's own use of the appeal channels open to him which has led to his substantial period in prison:

6 December 1985
Mr. Osman arrested on provisional extradition warrant.

7 December 1985
Mr. Osman remanded in custody.

24 January 1986
Home Office issued authority to Bow street magistrates to proceed with extradition case under Fugitive Offenders Act 1967, in respect of an arrest warrant issued in Hong Kong on 20 January 1986.

25 April 1986
Further warrant of arrest issued in Hong Kong in respect of 43 offences.

13 May 1986
Second authority to proceed issued superseding the authority to proceed of 24 January 1986.

27 May 1986
Committal proceedings began at Bow street.

1 June 1987
Bow street magistrates committed Mr. Osman to await the Home Secretary's order for surrender to Hong Kong.

9 June 1987
Application by Mr. Osman for writ of habeas corpus to have the magistrate's decision set aside.

30 June 1987
Complaint to European Commission of Human Rights.

30 March 1988
After four weeks hearing Divisional Court dismissed application for writ of habeas corpus.

29 April 1988
Divisional Court refused leave to appeal to House of Lords.

13 May 1988

Mr. Osman petitioned House of Lords direct for leave to appeal and made second application for writ of habeas corpus on grounds of diplomatic immunity.

14 July 1988

Petition to House of Lords rejected.

21 October 1988

Divisional Court hearing of second application for writ of habeas corpus.

21 December 1988

Divisional Court dismissed second application for writ of habeas corpus.

14 February 1989

Divisional Court refused leave to appeal to the House of Lords.

24 February 1989

Mr. Osman petitioned House of Lords direct for leave to appeal.

13 March 1989

European Commission declared inadmissible Mr. Osman's complaint under the European Convention on Human Rights.

4 May 1989

Court of Appeal, Hong Kong, quashed the arrest warrant issued in Hong Kong on 30 November 1985, on the ground that it had been vitiated by bias.

9 May 1989

Mr. Osman's solicitors sought adjournment of their petition for leave to appeal to the House of Lords and gave notice of their intention to make a third application for habeas corpus because of the quashing in Hong Kong of the warrant of 30 November 1985, and the issue of a diplomatic note by the Liberian Ambassador relating to Mr. Osman's claim of diplomatic immunity.

6 June 1989

The High Court granted leave to apply for a third writ of habeas corpus.

26 July 1989

The Divisional Court refused Mr. Osman's application for bail.

26 September 1989

Application for judicial review deferred to start of habeas corpus proceedings which were due in the Divisional Court on 3 October.

4 October 1989

Judicial review proceedings began, to be followed by habeas corpus proceedings on the question of what constituted "relevant offences" for the purposes of Mr. Osman's extradition.

5 October 1989

Application for independent inquiry refused. Application for bail refused. Case adjourned to 19 October.

26 October 1989

The Divisional Court adjourned for judgment on both judicial review and habeas corpus proceedings.

17 November 1989

The Divisional Court dismissed Mr. Osman's applications for judicial review and habeas corpus. The Court decided that Mr. Osman had been lawfully arrested and there had been no dishonesty or abuse of process. It also decided that all of the charges faced by Mr. Osman were relevant offences for the purposes of extradition, although it was agreed that a phrase objected to in the wording of one charge would be deleted.

5 December 1989

The Divisional Court refused leave to appeal to the House of Lords.

15 December 1989

Mr. Osman lodged a further petition for leave to appeal to the House of Lords direct, against the Divisional Court's judgment on the third habeas corpus application.

1 February 1990

Mr. Osman's outstanding petitions for leave to appeal to the House of Lords were refused by the House of Lords Appeal Committee.

2 February 1990

Mr. Osman lodged his fourth habeas corpus application.

Mr. Osman cannot be surrendered to the Hong Kong authorities until this further application has been heard.

Women Diplomats

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement concerning his Department's policies to encourage the appointment of more women to senior diplomatic posts.

Mr. Maude: The FCO makes all appointments on the basis of merit. The FCO is fully committed to being an equal opportunities employer.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Leicester, East of 12 January, Official Report, column 794, where the five women ambassadors and high commissioners are posted; and how long they have been in post.

Mr. Maude: Four women are currently serving as ambassadors to Ivory Coast (June 1987), Luxembourg (February 1988), Mozambique (September 1989) and Chad (non-Resident, September 1989). A fifth woman is the leader of the United Kingdom delegation to the conference in Geneva and has been in post since October 1987.

Kashmir

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Indian Government about its suppression of the nationalist uprising in Kashmir.

Mr. Maude: We have made clear in our regular contacts with the Indian and Pakistan Governments that we believe the status of Kashmir can be settled only by agreement between the two sides. We have also made clear that we have no sympathy with those who espouse violence for political ends.

Computer Security

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department has taken and is taking to improve the security of its computer systems.

Mr. Maude: For unclassified but sensitive systems Departments are expected to follow CCTA guidance covering all aspects of IT security and the application of this has been tightened recently. CCTA advice is kept under continuous review and is based on analysis of security risks and requirements using structured methods such as CCTA's risk analysis and management methodology (CRAMM) which has also been made commercially available.

More stringent conditions apply to classified systems.

Germany

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last had meetings with the ambassadors of the Federal Republic of Germany and the German Democratic Republic; what subjects were discussed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs last met the ambassador of the Federal Republic of Germany on 6

February during his visit to Bonn, when he discussed a wide range of issues. He last met the ambassador of the German Democratic Republic when he visited East Berlin and the GDR on 22-24 January, about which I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, North-East (Mr. Thurnham), on 1 February, Vol. 166, column 307.

HEALTH

Cervical Cancer

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent reports and evidence he has received about the incidence of cervical cancer among over-65-year-olds; whether he has any plans to alter his Department's guidelines to include regular provision of regular cervical smears for women over 65 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information about the incidence of cervical cancer is regularly published by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys. Guidance issued by the Department of Health to health authorities, family practitioner committees and general practitioners in January 1988, a copy of which is in the Library, stated: "women aged 65 and over who have not had two consecutive negative smears in the last ten years should also be screened." GPs are well placed to carry this out. Our most recent figures show that women over the age of 65 already consult their doctor more than six times a year on average. Under the GPs' new contract much greater emphasis is being placed on health promotion and the prevention of ill health, including the requirement to offer health checks in specific circumstances (for example annually to patients aged 75 and over) and encouraging doctors to hold more health promotion clinics. This will mean that GPs will have even more opportunities to advise women patients over 65 of the wisdom of accepting these effective preventive measures.

National Health Service (Cost)

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the contribution is for an average family of four, on a weekly basis, towards the cost of the National Health Service (a) at the latest available date, (b) in 1979 and (c) at constant prices.

Mr. Freeman: It is not possible to provide the information requested. The greatest part of National Health Service funding comes from the Consolidated Fund and it is not possible to distinguish between the proportion contributed by private taxpayers and taxation raised from other sources. However it is possible to calculate figures for National Health Service expenditure per notional family of four and these are as follows:

	£ per week
1989-90	35
1979-80	13
[1]1979-80	27

[1] At current (ie. 1989-90) prices.

Consultants

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the criterion under which whole-time consultants employed in the National Health Service are allowed to earn a percentage of their gross income from private practice without losing their status and payment qualifications as full-time National Health Service consultants.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The terms and conditions of service for hospital medical and dental staff provide that a whole-time consultant can earn up to 10 per cent. of his gross whole-time salary, including the value of any distinction award held, from private practice.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the Government have any plans to end the practice of paying whole-time medical consultants higher salaries to partly compensate them for their dedication to the National Health Service.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No.

Durham Health Authority

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list all capital spending projects and their costs to Durham district health authority since 1974.

Mr. Freeman: Information on building schemes held centrally does not include small schemes or schemes carried out before 1980. The hon. Member may like to contact the chairman of the Northern regional health authority for a full list from the regional records.

Student Nurses

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many student nurses will qualify as students for community charge purposes.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Students on undergraduate nursing courses and those undertaking Project 2000 training will be eligible for student relief for the purpose of the personal community charge. No precise estimate can be made of the numbers likely to be involved. Thirteen Project 2000 schemes will be in operation by 1 April 1990, and it is planned to start further schemes during 1990-91.

Case Managers

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to ensure that case managers are trained to take full account of the views of the disabled person, authorised representative and carer when assessing their community care needs.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A key objective of the White Paper "Caring for People" is to ensure that assessment of needs for social care services takes full account of the views of the client and his or her carer. The Department will be issuing guidance to local authorities on assessment and case management. Training in the skills required by case managers will be addressed in improved qualifying training programmes, in new post qualifying training programmes, and in enhanced vocational training.

Community Care

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to ensure that the new arrangements for community care take full account of the needs of young disabled people.

Mr. Roger Freeman: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friends the Members for Dover (Mr. Shaw) and for Eastleigh (Sir D. Price) on 12 December at column 605. Our proposals are intended to benefit all people in need of community care.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to ensure joint planning by health and local authorities prior to the implementation of the proposed changes in community care.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 6 February 1990]: A key component of the Government's policy on community care, set out in the White Paper "Caring for People" is the production by local authorities of community care plans. Health authorities will also be expected to produce community health care plans. The two should be prepared collaboratively. The Department will bring forward guidance in support of the requirement to produce these plans. The precise form of collaboration over the production of plans is for local decision and agreement.

Medical Advances

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department takes to keep doctors informed of the latest medical advances.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Every medical practitioner has the responsibility of keeping up to date with medical knowledge appropriate to his or her chosen specialty. To assist in this, the Department and health authorities allocate funds for the provision of courses and other educational activities and for the expenses of attending such activities. The content of educational activities is largely determined by the profession itself. In addition, from 1 April 1990, a new postgraduate education allowance will be payable to family doctors who maintain regular programmes of approved education and training.

Applied Microbiology

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the future of the centre for applied microbiology and research.

Mr. Freeman: I am carefully considering the way ahead for CAMR in the light of advice from scientific and financial advisers. It is clear that the essential public health work must remain under the responsibility of the public health laboratory service. As one of the options for the future of the non-public health work at CAMR, we are considering an approach to acquire CAMR by Porton International plc. We will be advised by Hambros plc. I am not persuaded that these non-public health functions of the centre are of a nature that need necessarily be carried out within the public sector. When we have considered Porton's approach we will make a further statement, taking into account the interests of staff and public health.

Disabled People

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to monitor the implementation of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The Department's social services inspectorate has carried out a number of exercises to monitor the implementation of the Act. The results of an inspection of the operation of all sections of the Act in force were published on 6 February under the title "Developing Services for Disabled People". The findings of a more specific study of the progress of six authorities towards implementation of sections 5 and 6 are due to be published shortly. Copies of both reports will be placed in the Library.

Maternity Hospitals

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress his Department is making with implementing the maternity hospital episode system; how many districts are unable to provide all the items of information in the minimum data sets; and whether all National Health Service hospital trusts and private hospitals in England will be required to provide this information in the future.

Mr. Freeman: The collection of Korner maternity data commenced in September 1988. It is not possible to give a precise figure for the number of districts providing all items of the data set but approximately 70 per cent. have supplied all or most of the data required. The shortfall has been caused by technical difficulties between local maternity information systems and district information systems. Recommendations for changes to information systems consequent to the White Paper "Working for Patients" are currently the subject of consultation with the NHS. For maternity data the recommendation is that all providers to the district of residence will produce a minimum data set for hospital episodes of care. Those "contract" minimum data sets will include the data required under current maternity systems.

Eye Tests

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if, pursuant to his reply of 15 January to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes), Official Report, column 87, he will now place in the Library full details of the questions and sample questionnaires being circulated for the purposes of drawing up a survey of the level of eye tests for the first quarter of 1990; if he will indicate to whom such details are being circulated; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A sight test volume survey is being conducted by NOP Market Research Limited as part of its regular omnibus survey. The field work will be carried out between mid-March and mid-April. It will involve a random sample of 10,000 adults being asked the following questions:

"i. Have you had your sight tested at an opticians—not at a hospital or at your doctors—since Christmas?

and if yes,

ii. Was it an NHS sight test or did you pay for a private sight test?"

Abortions

Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many abortions have been carried out since the passing of the 1967 Act for minor facial deformities.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is not available.

Cardiac Unit, North Western RHA

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will seek to expedite a reply to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe's letter of 16 January to the chairman of the North Western regional health authority about urgent problems facing the regional cardiac unit, raised with the right hon. Member by all the consultant cardiologists and cardiac surgeons at Wythenshawe hospital.

Mr. Freeman: I have been assured that the chairman of the North Western regional health authority will reply shortly to the letter of 16 January from the right hon. Member.

Nursing Staff

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department has conducted any exercises in computer modelling in relation to the supply of nursing staff, similar to those conducted by the Institute of Manpower Studies in relation to the supply of teaching staff in its study, "The Supply of Teachers 1989".

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: In 1988 the Department initiated, on a national basis, a computer model which looks at the impact of Project 2000 (the new system of nurse education), together with demographic change and the changing patterns of nurse recruitment and retention, on the supply of trained nurses up to and beyond the year 2000. The model was made available to the NHS in 1989.

Deaths (South Yorkshire)

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many deaths on arrival were delivered by the police, armed services and voluntary organisations in December 1989 for each of the health authorities operating in south Yorkshire; and what was the cause of death;

(2) how many deaths on arrival were delivered to the health authorities operating in south Yorkshire in December 1987 and December 1988.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 15 January 1990]: The number of deaths on arrival recorded at south Yorkshire hospitals during December 1987, 1988 and 1989 were as follows:

	1987	1988	1989
Barnsley health authority[1]	32	30	34
Doncaster health authority	54	53	74
Rotherham health authority	15	28	26
Sheffield health authority	49	33	67

[1] The figures do not distinguish between deaths on arrival at the accident and emergency department and bodies delivered to the public mortuary at the Barnsley district general hospital.

Details of cause of death could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

These figures do not provide any sensible statistical basis for drawing any conclusions at all about the effect of the industrial action by the ambulance trades unions upon patients. The number of deaths on arrival at a hospital can fluctuate widely in normal circumstances depending on the range of cases in a particular month and if there has been any temporary increase in illness locally, for example, as a result of a flu epidemic. As further illustration there were 60 cases of deaths on arrival at Sheffield hospitals and 21 at Rotherham hospitals in December 1985.

Welfare Milk

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the total number of welfare milk scheme beneficiaries for each year since 1979 in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 16 January 1990]: I regret that the information is not available in the form requested. The information that is available is in the table.

Estimate of the weekly number of welfare milk recipients in Great Britain 1979 to 1989

Year[1]	Number
November 1979	339,000
December 1980	449,000
December 1981	646,000
December 1982	809,000
December 1983	884,000
December 1984	976,000
February 1986	1,068,000
May 1987	1,096,000
June 1987 to May 1988[2]	932,000
May 1988 to December 1989	741,000

[1] Information to May 1987 is from the Annual Statistical Enquiry carried out in Social Security local offices. No information is available for 1985.

[2] From June 1987 it is an average based on the number of milk tokens surrendered for reimbursement by suppliers of liquid milk. Tokens used to obtain dried baby-milk are not included.

Social Workers

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many statutory child care cases are not currently supervised by local authority social workers because of staff shortages.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 6 February 1990]: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Spiramycin

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he is satisfied that there are adequate supplies of the drug spiramycim in syrup for babies suffering from toxoplasmosis.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 6 February 1990]: No product licence has been applied for in respect of spiramycin. Without a licence, the drug could not be imported on a commercial basis, though a doctor might arrange with the manufacturing company to supply it to him on a named-patient basis.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Arable Sector

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the current state of the arable sector.

Mr. Curry: In 1989-90, United Kingdom beet sugar production was just over 1·25 million tonnes. Devaluation of the green pound more than offset the 2 per cent. reduction in the EC sugar price.

Rapeseed production in the United Kingdom is estimated at 953,000 tonnes in 1989-90. Under the EC stabiliser mechanism, the target price has been reduced by 3·1 per cent. because Community production has exceeded the maximum guaranteed quantity. This amounts to a price increase of nearly 5 per cent. over 1988-89, when the price was reduced by 7·65 per cent. Taking account of the green pound changes, the support price increase in sterling is over 12 per cent. Market prices in 1989-90 have been considerably higher than in the previous year. Production of protein crops in the United Kingdom in 1989-90 is estimated at 703,000 tonnes. Institutional prices have been reduced by around 10 per cent. under the stabiliser mechanism as they were in the previous year. In sterling terms this has resulted in a price rise of over 7 per cent. taking account of green pound changes. Market prices have been higher in 1989-90 than in the previous year

For potatoes, estimated United Kingdom production in the current July-June crop year was 6,221,000 tonnes compared with 6,899,000 tonnes in 1987-88, but the shortfall has been partially offset by lower wastage. Weekly average producer prices are running at over £90 per tonne compared with less than £60 at this time last year.

Grain

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many days' supply of grain are currently in store in the United Kingdom (a) in intervention storage and (b) in all storage; and what were the figures for each of the past three years.

Mr. Curry: United Kingdom intervention stocks of cereals at the end of January 1990 represented around 11 days' supply compared with 21 days, 20 days and 52 days at the end of January 1989, 1988 and 1987 respectively.

The latest available information on the quantity of grain in commercial storage is in the form of estimates of stocks of wheat, barley and oats at 31 December 1989. Adding these estimates to the intervention stocks at the time gives total storage figures representing about 267, 282, 281 and 324 days' supply for December 1989, 1988, 1987 and 1986 respectively.

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the latest estimate of the stocks of grain which will be in store at the end of June 1990 (a) in Britain, (b) in the European Economic Community and (c) in the world, expressed in tonnes and days' supply; and what is the latest estimate of the stocks of grain at the present time in (a) Britain (b) the European Economic Community and (c) in the world expressed in tonnes and days' supply.

Mr. Curry: Current estimates of cereals likely to be in store in the United Kingdom and the European Community as a whole at the end of the 1989-90 marketing year on 30 June 1990 are as follows:

	Million tonnes	Days' supply
United Kingdom	3	55
EC	26	70

These figures are based on the Commission of the European Communities' balance sheet for cereals.

The International Wheat Council's estimate of world stocks of grain is an aggregate of national figures based on different definitions of marketing years and therefore does not relate to a particular date. However, the council's latest estimate for world stocks for the end of the 1989-90 crop year is 225 million tonnes or around 60 days' supply.

The latest estimate of current stocks of grain in the United Kingdom is for 31 December 1989 when the total was 15 million tonnes, representing about 267 days' supply. Estimates for the European Community and the world are not available.

Cereals

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the level of imports into the United Kingdom of (a) cereals and (b) cereals substitutes in each year since 1979.

Mr. Curry: The information is as follows:

Calendar year	Imports of cereals (000 tonnes)	Imports of cereal substitutes (000 tonnes)[2]
1979	6,216	432
1980	5,333	519
1981	4,197	1,382
1982	3,728	1,928
1983	3,225	1,439
1984	2,744	1,048
1985	3,286	1,038
1986	3,490	1,035
1987	3,484	1,091
1988	3,341	1,108
[1]1989	2,398	796

[1] To end November.

Meat and Bonemeal Exports

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has issued any notice to countries which import meat and bonemeal from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: Countries determine whether or not to import meat and bonemeal from the United Kingdom and the conditions which apply to such trade on the basis of this country's health status, about which they are kept fully informed.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice he has given to other European Community member states on the risks to their livestock posed by the feeding of British meat and bonemeal.

Mr. Maclean: Other member states of the European Community have been kept fully informed about BSE since it was identified as a new cattle disease, including its likely cause.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has on restrictions in other European Community member states on the incorporation of meat and bonemeal into ruminant feeds.

Mr. Maclean: The Netherlands have imposed a ban on the feeding of ruminant-based meat and bonemeal to ruminants.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has imposed any restrictions on the importation of meat and bonemeal into the United Kingdom; and what regulations exist governing the incorporation of imported meat and bonemeal into United Kingdom livestock feed.

Mr. Maclean: On 1 May 1989 new measures were introduced under the Importation of Processed Animal Protein 1981 and the Importation of Animal Protein and Poultry Products 1980 (as amended) Orders which stengthened safeguards against the importation of animal disease, including salmonella. These included the provision of veterinary certification confirming treatment to destroy salmonellae where consignments have come from countries that have previously shown the presence of salmonellae. On arrival at British ports, consignments may be sampled and tested for salmonellae. Subsequent action is appropriate to the results obtained.

Ruminant-based meat and bonemeal whether domestically produced or imported, is banned from use in ruminant rations.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the different types of grant aid available under the environmentally sensitive area system; and what is the average size of farms awarded grant aid when an environmentally sensitive area is developed.

Mr. Curry: Under the environmentally sensitive areas scheme farmers receive annual payments for following agricultural practices beneficial to the environment. Each scheme focuses on the environmental features characteristic of the area concerned. Since individual management agreements do not generally relate to the whole farm, it is not possible to state the average size of the farms involved.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total annual cost to public funds of the environmentally sensitive areas system; and what is the total annual budget for each environmentally sensitive area.

Mr. Curry: United Kingdom expenditure under the environmentally sensitive area schemes (ESAs) for the current financial year is forecast to be £12·6 million. The level of expenditure is determined by the number of agreements made with individual farmers. Budgets are not fixed for each separate ESA.

Agricultural Development Advisory Service

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total budget of the Agricultural Development Advisory Service in Wales in (a) 1988-89 and (b) 1989-90; and what proportion of this money was allocated to Gwynedd and Clwyd.

Mr. Curry: The budget of the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service in Wales for 1988-89 was £7·42 million, of which £1·18 million was allocated to Gwynedd and Clwyd. The budget for 1989-90 is £7·68 million, of which £1·19 million is allocated to Gwynedd and Clwyd.

Farm Animals

Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what initiatives he proposes to take to improve the welfare of farm animals.

Mr. Gummer: I am determined that the special concern which the United Kingdom has shown towards animal welfare is carried across to our partners in the European Community. The protection of farm animals is now inevitably a European issue and Britain will have to play an active part in getting higher standards of animal welfare throughout the Community.

Animal welfare is an issue which transcends national boundaries and has to be tackled on a Community basis. While in some circumstances we have to reserve the right to maintain national controls, we must avoid encouraging imports from countries where standards are lower than our own. The way forward therefore is to seek the fullest degree of harmonisation so that all countries of the Community operate to the same high standards.

The Community has already taken some action in this area but much remains to be done. We will in particular press for action in the Community in the following areas:

Protection of animals in transit. There must be proper standards for transport including requirements for feeding, resting and adequate ventilation. Community rules must allow for surveillance during journeys particularly at key points such as sea and air ports.

Protection of horses. The Government recognise the concern about this issue. We will press for controls to be maintained on exports of horses for slaughter and for legislation to ensure proper welfare safeguards whenever horses are transported or slaughtered.

Welfare of pigs and calves. The Commission has made proposals but these need to be revised to take more account of the very real concern about certain farming systems such as veal crates (which have already been banned in the United Kingdom) and stall and tether systems for dry sows.

Poultry. When the battery hens directive was under negotiation the United Kingdom maintained that the minimum space allowance of 450 sq cm per bird (as finally agreed) was inadequate. This continues to be our view and in the review of the directive, which the Commission is required to complete by the end of 1992, we will press for an allowance of at least 600 sq cm. The review should also address improvements to the design of cages, and the welfare problems which can arise in alternative systems. For broilers Community rules are required to establish proper standards for husbandry, collection and transport.

Other species. Common standards are needed for the keeping of all farm livestock. These should cover specific issues such as the use of electric goads and rules on stocking densities, ventilation of buildings etc.

Slaughter. Common standards must be introduced as part of the completion of the single market. Community rules will have to have proper regard to the religious beliefs of citizens.

Enforcement. There are claims that observation of welfare legislation is not uniform throughout the Community. The legislation must be rigorously enforced and there must be a Commission inspectorate to ensure uniform application by the authorities in all the member states.

The United Kingdom will press for action in these areas in order to achieve the improvements in farm animal welfare which are urgently needed in the Community.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Civil Legal Aid

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list the numbers of those who in 1989 and each of the preceding four years (a) applied for civil legal aid, (b) had their application for civil legal aid refused because they did not have a reasonable case, (c) had their application for civil legal aid refused because they did not meet the financial requirements and (d) were successful in securing civil legal aid on appeal against not having a reasonable case.

The Attorney-General: An analysis of applications for legal aid, which includes the number of applications made and the number refused on legal and financial grounds, is set out at appendix 2B(1)(a) of the Law Society's annual reports.

Statistics relating to appeals are set out in appendix 2F of the reports for 1987-88 and 1988-89. Information on appeals for earlier years is not available.

Figures for 1989 are currently available only to 31 March of that year.

THE ARTS

Arts Funding (North-west)

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Minster for the Arts if he will make a statement on funding of art galleries and museums in the north-west.

Mr. Luce: Grants to centrally funded museums and galleries in the north-west are as follows:

£ million

	1988-89	1989-90	1990-91	1991-92	1992-93
Greater Manchester Museum of Science and Industry	1·473	1·561	1·725	1·829	1·906
National Museums and Galleries on Merseyside	10·220	11·006	12·302	12·258	12·852
Tate Gallery (Liverpool)	0·700	0·800	n/a	n/a	n/a n/a = figures not available.

I understand that for local museums and galleries, the north-west museum and art gallery service grant-in-aid assistance, and funding of conservation and design services, amounted to £326,602 in 1987-88 and £348,374 in 1988-89. I also understand that the Museums and Galleries Commission has provided capital grants of £89,499 in 1987-88 and £95,900 in 1988-89 to north-west museums and art galleries.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Tobacco

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the annual income to the Exchequer from tobacco-related taxes and duties.

Mr. Ryder: In 1988-89 excise duty revenue from tobacco taxation was £4,990 million; value added tax of around £1,050 million would also have accrued.

European Commission

Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last had discussions with the president of the European Commission; and what was discused.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer last met Mr. Delors at the Council of Economic and Finance Ministers on 18 December last year, as I reported to the House on 20 December, Official Report, Vol. 166, c. 244.

Self-employment

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how, for tax purposes, the Inland Revenue defines self-employed.

Mr. Lilley: The Inland Revenue applies case law laid down by the courts to the facts of particular cases. The essential question is, "Are you in business on your own account?"

A joint Inland Revenue—Department of Social Security leaflet provides guidance to those who are unsure about their employment status. Copies of the leaflet (IR56/NI39), available from any local tax office or DSS office, are held in the Library.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Angola

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the total outstanding debt owed to Her Majesty's Government by the MPLA Government; what arrangements have been made for repayments and if he will make a statement; how much MPLA debt to this country is guaranteed by Her Majesty's Government for repayment; if he will place in the Library a copy of an agreed debt cut between Her Majesty's Government and the MPLA Government; and if he will estimate the amount of private sector debt owed to companies in the United Kingdom by the MPLA Government.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of any debt list agreed between Her Majesty's Government and the Government of Angola.

Mr. Maude: Angola's outstanding debt to Her Majesty's Government is all owed to ECGD. For commercial reasons, ECGD does not reveal detailed figures for debt that it is owed by individual countries, or for its outstanding guarantees. A copy of the United Kingdom-Angola debt agreement No. 1 (1987) which rescheduled some of Angola's debt payments to ECGD is available in the Library of the House. A second rescheduling was negotiated last year and an agreement will be signed shortly. Lists of debt covered by the rescheduling are not published. As for private sector debt, figures for debts to United Kingdom banks are given in table 15 of the Bank of England's Quarterly Bulletin, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. Figures for debts to other private sector institutions are not available.

Bangladesh

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met members or officials of the Government of Bangladesh; what issues are outstanding; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs looks forward to making his first contacts with Bangladeshi Ministers when opportunity arises. My right hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development is visiting Bangladesh at the moment and plans to call on President Ershad today. We have excellent relations with Bangladesh, and are not aware of any major outstanding issues between us.

Preventable Loss

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the extent of preventable loss arising from theft or misappropriation in his Department.

Mr. Maude: A revision of the inventory of valuable items in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office is in train and should be completed shortly.

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will list the number of professionally qualified loss prevention staff employed by his Department and the qualifications held by such staff, excluding qualifications obtained during police or military service.

Mr. Maude: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office employs no specialist loss prevention staff, but we employ our own cadres of security officers, at home and overseas, to supervise security arrangements in buildings for which we are responsible. They receive training in all aspects of their duties, which include loss prevention.

Hong Kong

Mr. Stanbrook: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Hong Kong Government have made provision for war service to be included in the calculation of pensions for their expatriate staff.

Mr. Maude: The Hong Kong Government are still considering whether to include war service in the calculation of pensions for expatriate staff. At the turn of the year they sought, and were given, further information about the British Government's war service credit scheme for colonial pensioners. I will inform my hon. Friend when a decision has been made.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what he is doing to improve the living and sanitation conditions at detention camps for Vietnamese boat people in Hong Kong.

Mr. Maude: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Mossley Hill (Mr. Alton) on 12 January, c. 791-92.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the total number of Vietnamese boat people who have tried to commit suicide in detainment camps in Hong Kong in 1990.

Mr. Maude: Since 1 January 1990, seven people have inflicted injuries upon themselves in Hong Kong's detention centres. None of the injuries has been serious.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to give assistance to improve the environmental health conditions and housing in the Kwun Tong public housing area in Hong Kong.

Mr. Maude: As part of a comprehensive redevelopment programme to renew the urban environment, over 58,000 old public housing flats will be demolished, and about 55,000 new flats will be constructed between 1990 and 2001 in the Kwun Tong area, partly to provide replacement accommodation and partly to provide new housing for those in need. Planned environmental health improvements include the closure of a local refuse dump, restrictions on the sulphur content of industrial fuel oil, and the introduction of vehicle emission controls.

Foreign Affairs Council

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report a statement on the outcome of the Foreign Affairs Council on 5 February.

Mr. Hurd: The Foreign Affairs Council met in Brussels on 5 February. My hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, my noble Friend the Minister for Trade and I represented the United Kingdom.

Following our informal discussions in Dublin on 20 January, Ministers had a preliminary discussion of the prospects for extending the Community's relations with, and assistance to, the countries of eastern Europe. Preliminary suggestions from the Commission closely reflect United Kingdom ideas, which we put to partners before the Strasbourg European Council. The Commission also presented its proposals for the creation of a European training foundation and a mobility scheme for students (TEMPUS). These fulfil the mandate from the Strasbourg European Council to extend training assistance to the countries of eastern Europe. The Council separately agreed on the importance of the forthcoming CSCE economic conference in Bonn as an opportunity to monitor and encourage the development of market economies in eastern Europe, and considered a Commission proposal for a draft concluding document of the conference.

Ministers issued a statement welcoming the reforms announced by President de Klerk of South Africa on 2 February. We looked forward to their early implementation, and hoped for further measures leading to the complete abolition of apartheid. Our statement noted that, to the degree that dialogue is instituted in South Africa, the Twelve will be prepared to reconsider their position in respect of sanctions in accordance with the European Council declaration at Strasbourg on 9 December. We agreed to discuss developments in South Africa on this basis at the next meeting on European political co-operation issues, which will be in Dublin on 20 February.

The Council discussed the future regime for imports of Japanese cars, and will revert to the issue in March. The Council expressed its support for the Commission's opinion on Turkey's EC membership application and asked the Commission to draw up detailed proposals for strengthening EC-Turkey relations within the context of the association agreement.

The Council discussed a Commission outline paper on a new Mediterranean policy and asked the Commission to produce detailed proposals taking into account the full range of views expressed at the meeting. The United Kingdom argued for a differentiated approach to individual Mediterranean countries, and in favour of measures to promote trade.

The Council noted with approval the EC's acceptance at the January GATT Council of the GATT panel report on the EC's oilseeds regime. Ministers discussed possible solutions to the hormones dispute and invited the Commission to put forward further proposals for discussion at official level

The Council took note of the Commission's proposals for assistance to Colombia's special co-operation programme and agreed on the importance of supporting the Government of Colombia in their courageous efforts to combat the drugs problem.

Ministers reviewed preparations for the inter-governmental conference on economic and monetary union.

Ethiopia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action the Goverment are taking to encourage a negotiated long-term solution to the war in northern Ethiopia.

Mr. Waldegrave: Negotiations between the parties to the conflict in Ethiopia offer the only hope of a lasting solution. We have therefore been active in encouraging the parties, both directly and through others who have influence, to pursue seriously the peace talks initiated last autumn.

Middle East

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the number of people killed by terrorist action in the middle east in each of the last three years, setting out in each case the numbers killed by (a) Israelis and (b) Arabs.

Mr. Waldegrave: We do not keep statistics in the form requested.

Cash Limits

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he proposes to make any changes in his Department's diplomatic wing cash limits and running cost limits for 1989-90.

Mr. Maude [pursuant to the reply 29 January 1990, c. 16]: On changes to this Department's diplomatic wing cash limits and running cost limits for 1989-90, the details in the second paragraph refer to class II vote 2 (Other External Relations).

HOME DEPARTMENT

Bangladesh

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is undertaking to obtain a dependable estimate of the number of (a) spouses and (b) children who are currently awaiting entry clearance from Bangladesh.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Such estimates are available for all three countries in the Indian sub-continent; 1,700 spouses and 2,300 children in Bangladesh were awaiting a decision on their application for entry clearance for settlement in the United Kingdom at 30 November 1989. Aggregate information for (i) wives, children and persons applying for entry clearance for immediate settlement, and (ii) husbands and male fiances are published in tables 6 and 11 respectively of the annual Command Paper "Control of Immigration: Statistics, United Kingdom" (most recently, for 1988, in Cm. 726), a copy of which is in the Library.

Preventable Loss

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the extent of preventable loss arriving from theft or misappropriation in his Department.

Mr. Waddington: The extent of such loss in the Home Office is believed to be very small. Where losses do occur, appropriate measures are taken to minimise the risk of recurrence, including the recovery of moneys obtained by fraud.

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will list the number of professionally qualified loss prevention staff employed by his Department and the qualifications held by such staff, excluding qualifications obtained during police or military service.

Mr. Waddington: Staff employed by the Home Office have professional qualifications in several relevant disciplines, such as accountancy, auditing, fire prevention and health and safety. It would require a disproportionate use of resources to list them and their qualifications.

All-seater Stadiums

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a timetable for the possible all-seater status of stadiums included under schedules in the Safety of Sports Grounds Act 1975; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. and learned Friend's statement on 29 January, at column 19, and to the schedule placed in the Library on the same date responding to recommendations 1 to 4 of the final report of the Hillsborough inquiry which set out the timetable for admitting spectators to seated accommodation only.

Deer

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will send to the hon. Member for Mansfield a copy of the Nature Conservancy Council report by V. P. W. Lowe on wild and feral deer in Great Britain, reference number NCC NERC Contract HF3/05/43.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No spare copies of this interim report, which was produced in 1979, are held by either the Home Office or the Nature Conservancy Council. However I will arrange for a photocopy to be sent to the hon. Member as soon as possible and for another to be placed in the Library.

Entry Clearance

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is undertaking to obtain a dependable estimate of the number of (a) spouses and (b) children who are currently awaiting entry clearance other than in the Indian sub-continent.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: None is planned. The collection of data on persons outside the Indian sub-continent applying for entry clearance for settlement in the United Kingdom was terminated at the end of 1979 because it was considered that its usefulness did not justify the resources required to undertake it. Information continues to be collected on persons applying in the sub-continent because of the large number of applications there. Some information on applications for entry clearance by persons in Hong Kong has been collected since the end of 1984; this information includes the numbers of spouses and children awaiting first interview but not the total numbers awaiting a decision on their application.

Computer Security

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department has taken and is taking to improve the security of its computer systems.

Mr. Waddington: A wide range of steps have been and are being taken to ensure the security of my Department's computer systems: it would not be sensible to make details public. The measures needed to maintain adequate security are kept under review, and take due account of guidance issued centrally.

Abortion Clinics

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his reply of 7 December, Official Report, column 256, what information is available about arrests in the vicinity of abortion clinics and the reasons for those arrests.

Mr. John Patten: None. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to her on 6 December 1989 at column 256.

John McGranaghan

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the reason for the transfer into segregation of John McGranaghan on 17 October 1989; what is the reason for keeping him in segregation since that time; what is the reason for the delay in informing him of the reason for his segregation; and when he will be informed of the detailed reasons.

Mr. Mellor: Under the terms of prison rule 43(1), Mr. McGranaghan was removed from normal association on 17 October 1989 for the maintenance of good order or discipline. He returned to an ordinary location though in a different establishment on 14 November but from 22 November until 15 January 1990 he was again removed from normal association for similar reasons. These were explained to him by prison staff on both occasions.

Metropolitan Police Officers

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on the cost to public funds of (a) training a Metropolitan police officer and (b) the estimated cost of wastage during the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available, arising from resignations, early retirement and transfers of officers to other forces.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The cost of the initial training provided for Metropolitan police officers is estimated at about £12,000 per officer. Continuing training is provided throughout an officer's service. Figures for the numbers of officers leaving the Metropolitan police are given in table 13(iii) of volume 2 of the report of the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis for 1988. Information on the cost of this wastage is not available.

Prisoners' Complaints

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department from what sources he receives complaints from prisoners regarding conditions or treatment; and approximately what proportion of these complaints would come under the jurisdiction of the Parliamentary Ombudsman.

Mr. Mellor: The majority of prisoners' complaints are received directly as petitions to the Secretary of State or indirectly through Members of Parliament, prisoners' friends, relatives or legal advisers. It is not possible to make any reliable estimate of the number which might fall within the jurisdiction of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints he has received from prisoners or from organisations concerned with prisons that hon. Members have not passed on prisoners' complaints to the Parliamentary Ombudsman.

Mr. Mellor: We have no record of having received such a complaint in an individual case.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to appoint a prison ombudsman; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: We are considering the comments made on this matter in response to the report of the working group on an improved system of grievance procedures for prisoners' complaints and requests.

Sentencing

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the proportion of 17 to 20-year-olds being given a prison sentence for criminal damage by area of the country where the case is heard.

Mr. John Patten: The information requested is given in the table. Data for 1989 will not be available until autumn 1990.

[2]Denotes fewer than 25 persons sentenced in this age group.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to establish limits on the variation in the probability of an offender being given a custodial sentence in different areas of the country for similar offences.

Mr. John Patten: Our proposals for a more coherent statutory framework to achieve greater consistency in sentencing are set out in the White Paper "Crime, Justice and Protecting the Public" (Cm 965), published on 6 February.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with which individuals and organisations he has discussed the issue of an agreed national sentencing framework; and what advice he received.

Mr. John Patten: A wide variety of organisations and individuals have contributed to the public debate about criminal justice which preceded publication of our White Paper "Crime, Justice and Protecting the Public" (Cm 965) on 6 February.

Ambulance Duties

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call upon the chief constables of Hertfordshire, Lincolnshire, Bedfordshire, Derbyshire, South Yorkshire, Hereford and Worcester and Dorset for a report as to the cost per policeman hour of deploying the police on ambulance duties within their police districts.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the chief constables of Lincolnshire, Bedfordshire, West Mercia and Dorset that they are charging the relevant regional health authorities an average of £8·48, £8·95, £7·91 and £9·75 respectively per police constable per hour for assisting ambulance services. This basic charge does not include pensions and national insurance contributions, and rent allowance, which will be charged separately.

In Hertfordshire, Derbyshire and South Yorkshire, I understand that the charge is about £20·55, £20·55 and £19·90 respectively per police constable per hour, but that this does include pensions and national insurance contributions and rent allowance.

Charges will also be made for vehicle conversion and running costs, meal and subsistence allowances, civilian costs, and other sundry items.

Firearms

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applicants in the Greater Manchester area have handed in firearms for compensation under the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1988; and how many claims have been (a) allowed and (b) refused.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Private Remand Centres

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to publish the results of the consultancy study by Deloitte, Haskins and Sells into the practical feasibility of involving the private sector in the operation of remand centres.

Mr. Mellor: The report by Deloitte, Haskins and Sells, "Practicality of Private Sector Involvement in the Remand System", was made public on 1 March 1989. A copy was placed in the Library. As my right hon. Friend the Member for Witney (Mr. Hurd) announced in his statement on that date at columns 277-78, further studies were needed before final decisions could be taken, and we are now considering the results of those studies.

Mr. Mohammed Azem

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when a decision will be taken on a request made by the representative of Mr. Mohammed Azem, Ref. OVS/41524/88, for refusal to allow him to enter the United Kingdom from Hong Kong to be reconsidered.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The grounds of appeal submitted by Bradford law centre on behalf of Mr. Mohammed Azem in its letter of 16 June 1989 were carefully considered but it was decided to maintain the original refusal decision. An explanatory statement setting out the facts and the reasons for the decision was submitted to the appellate authorities on 9 January.

Mr. Sodagar Hussain

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will call for a report from the post in Islamabad explaining why Mr. Sodagar Hussain, who was born on 21 July 1959, has been refused entry to join his wife in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The post in Islamabad refused the application on Home Office instructions on the ground that we were not satisfied that it was not the primary purpose of the marriage to obtain Mr. Hussain's admission to the United Kingdom. Mr. Hussain has appealed against that decision and the Home Office will shortly be sending an explanatory statement setting out the facts and reasons for the decision to the independent appellate authorities.

ENERGY

Preventable Loss

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what assessment he has made of the extent of preventable loss arising from theft or misappropriation in his Department.

Mr. Wakeham: Assessments are carried out on a regular basis and include reviews of physical security measures and internal financial and non-financial control systems.

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he will list the number of professionally qualified loss prevention staff employed by his Department and the qualifications held by such staff, excluding qualifications obtained during police or military service.

Mr. Wakeham: The Department's policy is that staff in its internal audit branch are professionally qualified. Currently there are five fully qualified Members of the Institute of Internal Auditors (MIIA) and five under training.

Non-fossil Fuel Obligation

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether electricity supplied to English boards from Scottish Power and Scottish Hydro Electric will qualify as part of the non-fossil fuel obligation of the respective English companies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The interconnectors between England and Scotland are used for electricity trading in both directions. Because of this, electricity supplied through the interconnectors will not qualify for inclusion in the non-fossil fuel obligation.

Fuel Prices

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will publish a table showing how prices for petrol and diesel have changed during the last 10 years.

Mr. Wakeham: Prices of petrol and diesel (derv) from 1972 are published in table 66 of the "Digest of United Kingdom Energy Statistics 1989". The latest monthly prices are published in "Energy Trends" (table 21).

PRIME MINISTER

Sovereignty

Q70. Mr. Rooker: To ask the Prime Minister if she has ever raised the sovereignty of the Parliaments of the member states of the European Community with the other Heads of Government.

The Prime Minister: The final work on EC decisions lies with member states in the Council of Ministers, who remain accountable to national Parliaments. The European Council in Strasbourg in December 1989 emphasised the need to ensure the proper observances of democratic control in each of the member states.

Hungary

Q136. Dr. Godman: To ask the Prime Minister what is the Government's policy towards the European Community decision to provide a loan of 1 billion ecu to Hungary to help overcome structural adjustment problems; and whether any conditions have been imposed in terms of democratisation of political institutions in that country.

The Prime Minister: In the communiqué issued at our meeting in Strasbourg on 8 and 9 December, I and fellow EC Heads of Government referred to Hungary's need for an adjustment loan of $1 billion. EC Governments are now negotiating its terms and conditions. The United Kingdom would welcome additional contributions by non-Community countries. The loan will be conditional on a firm IMF programme of economic reform and adjustment. A central principle of all our assistance to eastern Europe is the encouragement of democracy and economic reform.

Culture

Q169. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Prime Minister what recent representations she has received on the projection of British culture overseas.

The Prime Minister: The British Council is doing a splendid job projecting our culture overseas. I have received no particular representations recently, but the demands placed on the council are increasing, especially now from east European countries, and I am glad that the Government have been able to increase their grant substantially for the second successive year.

Community Charge

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list the ground rules that Ministers must observe in their use of local and regional newspaper articles when referring to the community charge; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Ministerial articles on Government policy, when issued through Government Departments, are subject to the Cabinet Office guidance and conventions on Government publicity. When written in a party political capacity they are not. A copy of the guidance and conventions is in the Library of the House.

Mexico

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Prime Minister if during her recent meeting with the President of Mexico she discussed (a) the forthcoming fourth review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty and (b) the policies being developed by Mexico as part of the Non-Aligned Group of 77 towards nuclear non-proliferation and the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

The Prime Minister: No.

Kincora Boys' Home

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Prime Minister what steps her office has taken to investigate the allegations by Mr. Colin Wallace concerning the Kincora boys' hostel.

The Prime Minister: Allegations from a variety of sources concerning the Kincora Boys' hostel have been thoroughly investigated by successive inquiries conducted by the Royal Ulster Constabulary, by Sir George Terry and by Judge Hughes. Attempts were made to persuade Mr. Wallace to co-operate with these injuries, but without success. If Mr. Wallace has allegations that he wishes to press about criminal activity or other wrongdoing in Northern Ireland, the best way for him to deal with this is to give any information in his possession to the RUC in the first instance. If this information is classified, he should first consult the Director of Army Security.

Engagements

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her engagements for Thursday 8 February.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her engagements for Thursday 8 February.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her engagements for Thursday 8 February.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her engagements for Thursday 8 February.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her engagements for Thursday 8 February.

Mr. French: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her engagements for Thursday 8 February.

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 8 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today, including one with the President-elect of Brazil.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Farming Diversification

2. Mr. Forman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what reports he has received since taking office on the extent and scope of farm diversification schemes.

Mr. Gummer: Two Government-sponsored reports published recently give, for the first time, a clear picture of farm diversification in the United Kingdom. These reports show that about one third of the farmers who responded have developed some form of farm diversified business activity. This result gives a clear demonstration of the success of the Government's policy in this area.

Scotch Whisky

15. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what subjects he expects to discuss at his next meeting with representatives of the Scotch whisky industry.

Mr. Curry: I will discuss any issues of current commercial interest to the industry.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

16. Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to review the level of compensation to farmers for the slaughter of cattle infected with bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

Mr. Maclean: I keep all aspects of my policy to deal with this disease under continuous reveiw.

33. Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received recently concerning mad cow disease; whether he is contemplating any further action; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I have received a variety of representations about bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE). The Government have introduced a comprehensive package of measures to tackle the disease and to eliminate the remote risk to public health.

54. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on progress of research into the vertical transmission of bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

Mr. Maclean: A research programme, costing about £5 million, is in hand to determine whether maternal transmission of BSE occurs. However, because of the long incubation period, results may not be available for several years.

58. Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a further statement about bovine spongiform encephalopathy containment measures and associated compensation arrangements.

Mr. Maclean: The probable cause of bovine spongiform encephalopathy was through the feeding of ruminant-derived protein. This practice was banned from July 1988. In addition, from August 1988 all cattle suspected of having BSE have been compulsorily slaughtered and their carcases burned or buried. The owners are compensated for the loss of animals at 50 per cent. of the value for cases confirmed on post mortem as BSE-infected and at 100 per cent. of the value where BSE is not confirmed.

However, the compensation element is not the mechanism designed to contain BSE or to prevent it becoming a risk to human health. The slaughter policy and removal of specific offals from all bovine animals does that.

66. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to increase research into bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

Mr. Maclean: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Chelmsford (Mr. Burns) on 9 January at columns 572-73.

75. Mr. Alton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cows have died or been destroyed as a result of bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

Mr. Maclean: From the introduction of the compulsory slaughter policy on 8 August 1988 to 31 December 1989, a total of 9,884 suspected cases of BSE were slaughtered in Great Britain.

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any further plans to discuss with agricultural interests the subject of bovine spongiform encephalopathy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I and my officials have frequent discussions on a variety of subjects, including BSE, with groups representing agricultural and food interests.

Sheepmeat Regime

17. Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the arrangements for hill farmers under the sheepmeat regime.

Mr. Gummer: The reformed sheepmeat regime offers excellent opportunities to the United Kingdom sheep sector, including hill producers many of whom will also benefit from the increased HLCA payments I announced last week.

Farming Diversification

18. Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total amount of land in England that has been put into set-aside.

Mr. Curry: About 87,000 hectares of land in England have so far been entered for the set-aside scheme.

Veterinary Service

19. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the duties of veterinaries employed by his Ministry.

Mr. Maclean: The state veterinary service has a wide range of duties including the control of animal disease of economic and public health significance, animal welfare and the import and export of live animals and their products.

They are also involved in food safety on the farm and in the slaughterhouse.

80. Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many veterinarians he employs within the state veterinary service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The state veterinary service currently employs 427 veterinary surgeons. It is likely that this number will increase particularly for food safety work including meat hygiene. This was recognised in the recent review of veterinary manpower under the chairmanship of Dr. Ewan Page.

90. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the operation of the state veterinary service.

Mr. Maclean: Since its inception in 1865 the state veterinary service has dealt successfully with many outbreaks of farm animal disease of both economic and public health significance. It continues to do so today. In addition, its responsibilities include animal welfare and the import and export of live animals and their products. It also undertakes important research and development work.

Milk Deliveries

20. Mr. Stern: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many pints of milk have been hand delivered in (a) the latest available year and (b) 10 years previously.

Mr. Curry: In the United Kingdom approximately 7 billion pints of milk were delivered to the doorstep in 1989, as opposed to 10 billion pints in 1979.

Pesticides

21. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about his review of pesticides.

Mr. Maclean: All pesticides approved prior to 1981 are to be reviewed. Approval holders are providing information relative to their products and will be required to submit full data packages covering safety for the operator, the consumer and for the environment. Where data packages are not provided within an agreed period approvals will be withdrawn. Reviews will be undertaken in an order to be determined by the Advisory Committee on Pesticides.

Intellectual Property

22. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to exploit the intellectual property of his Department to provide additional resources for research.

46. Mr. David Davis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to exploit the intellectual property of his Department to provide additional resources for research.

87. Mr. Wood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to exploit fully his Ministry's intellectual property.

Mr. Gummer: An intellectual property liaison unit has been established within my Department. Its task is to facilitate the identification, legal protection, marketing and sale of intellectual property and usage of returns therefrom.

North Sea Fish

23. Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the conservation of North sea fish stocks.

Mr. Curry: Conservation of fish stocks in the North sea is a high priority. At the December Fisheries Council we took tough decisions to have a much lower total allowable catches (TACs) in 1990 by key stocks. We have sent the Commission a paper setting out possible further technical conservation measures. We will participate strongly in the high-level working group called by the Council to intensify discussions on conservation measures in the North sea. Success has been achieved. The herring stock has recovered from the low levels of 10 years ago and exceptional measures taken by the European Community in 1989 to protect the 1987 year class of sole has meant that a considerably higher TAC is possible this year.

Dogs

24. Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to which countries dogs were exported for experimental purposes in each of the last five years.

Mr. Gummer: This information is not available.

70. Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many dogs were imported for experimental purposes each year in each of the last five years.

Mr Gummer: A total of 647 dogs were imported for research purposes during 1989. Details for earlier years are not available.

72. Mr. Lewis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food from which countries dogs were imported for experimental purposes in each of the last five years.

Mr. Gummer: Dogs were imported for research purposes only from the United States of America during 1989. Details are not available for earlier years.

Contaminated Feed

25. Mr. Robert Hicks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the current position regarding the lead-contaminated animal feed problem; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: A total of 1,512 farms in England, and a further 156 in Wales remain subject to Livestock restrictions. The Government are doing everything possible to scale down the restrictions as quickly as possible consistent with the need to ensure that the food chain remains fully protected.

34. Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce an indemnity scheme for farmers suffering financial loss as a result of lead contamination in animal feed.

55. Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to compensate farmers in full for losses resulting from the supply of lead-contaminated feeding stuffs.

67. Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consideration he has given to the need for financial help for farmers affected by lead in feed contamination.

Mr. Gummer: I have no such plans. There is no statutory provision for Government compensation in such cases. Liability is a matter for the courts to decide in the light of the contractual obligations of feed suppliers, or others, towards individual farmers. I understand that the National Farmers Union has established a co-ordinated procedure which it hopes will assist farmers wishing to pursue claims. The Milk Marketing Board has made loans available to affected milk producers pending a resolution of the issues of liability and costs of disposal. In addition I met senior representatives of the major banks towards the end of last year to explain the situation and to urge them to take a sympathetic view where farmers find themselves with immediate cash flow problems.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans the Government have to remove restrictions on movements of sheep as a result of the lead contaminated feed episode.

Mr. Curry: Under livestock release scheme II, groups of sheep which did not receive contaminated feed could be cleared from restrictions following confirmatory blood tests.

Until recently, the conditions applying to the release of animals for slaughter under livestock release scheme III had the practical effect of preventing sheep which received contaminated feed from being sold for slaughter. However, as I announced on 1 February, the results of our monitoring and research programme have enabled us to ease significantly the restrictions applying under scheme III. As a result, sheep can now be released for slaughter subject to conditions designed to ensure that liver and kidney do not go for human consumption.

We have also reintroduced scheme II which may allow the further release of groups of sheep which did not receive contaminated feed.

Our monitoring and research programme is continuing and the remaining restrictions will be removed as soon as it is safe to do so.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress he is making towards introducing a scientific programme on contaminated animals to test lead levels in offal and bones, with a view to releasing animals still under restrictions; what investigations he has made of Dutch practices in testing and with what result; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: A monitoring and research programme was begun as soon as the seriousness of the feed contamination incident became apparent in early November. The results obtained so far, which I published on 1 February, have enabled restrictions to be lifted on bone and all offal except kidney and liver. Scientific work is continuing and as soon as results show that it is safe to do so I shall remove all remaining restrictions. Close touch has been maintained with the Dutch authorities throughout this incident and information has been exchanged on a regular basis.

Exotic Animals

26. Mr. Donald Thompson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he proposes to take in response to the representations he has received on the import of parrots and other exotic animals.

Mr. Gummer: Measures were announced in a reply given to the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell) on 20 December 1989, at column 350. My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary has since written to airlines stressing the need for proper care in transporting birds, and officials have met conservation and welfare organisations. Visits by veterinary staff to major exporting countries and further meetings are being arranged. The review of post-import quarantine arrangements is continuing.

Turkeys

27. Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to protect the traditional farm fresh turkey sold uneviscerated.

Mr. Curry: We have ensured that the European Community Commission is in no doubt about the importance we attach to our right to permit farmers to market uneviscerated poultry. We shall oppose any proposal which might seek to prohibit this.

Agriculture Industry

28. Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had on the present state of the agricultural industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I have frequent discussions with a range of organisations on the state of the agricultural industry. Most recently, I met representatives of the National Farmers Union, the Scottish National Farmers Union and the Ulster Farmers Union on 30 January to discuss the state of the industry and the European Commission's price proposals.

59. Mr. Moss: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which agriculture industry leaders he has met in the last six months; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Gummer: I meet leaders of the agriculture industry frequently to discuss a wide range of issues. Most recently I met representatives of the National Farmers Union, the Scottish National Farmers Union, and the Ulster Farmers Union on 30 January to discuss the state of the industry and the European Commission's price proposals.

Irradiation

29. Mr. Irvine: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the reports he has received from independent scientific committees on the safety of food irradiation.

53. Mr. Stevens: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the reports he has received from independent scientific committees on the safety of food irradiation.

Mr. Maclean: The Government received advice from the independent Advisory Committee on Irradiated and Novel Foods (ACINF) in its report entitled "Safety and Wholesomeness of Irradiated Foods" published in 1986. Annexed to this report were reports on specific aspects of food irradiation from the National Radiological Protection Board, the standing panel on hazards from microbial contamination of food, the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment, the panel on novel foods and the Food Advisory Committee.

The Government received a second report from the ACINF in 1987 in which the committee assessed scientific comment received on matters raised in its first report.

I am also aware of a number of reports from national and international scientific bodies, among which I would particularly mention: the 1977 and 1980 reports of the joint expert committee of food irradiation, convened by the World Health Organisation and the other international bodies; the 1982 report of the board of the International Committee of Food Microbiology and Hygiene of the International Union of Microbiological Societies; the 1986 report of the European Community scientific committee for food; and a number of reports from the United States Food and Drug Administration published in the Federal Register.

Berlin

30. Mr. Ward: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last visited Berlin; what matters he discussed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I visited Berlin from 25 to 27 January. In the course of my visit I had meetings with the Ministers of Agriculture for the Federal Republic of Germany and the German Democratic Republic. Among other matters I discussed developments in eastern Europe and, with the West German Minister, German restrictions on imports of British beef imposed in connection with bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

Green Pound

31. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the current value of the green pound.

Mr. Gummer: The current level of the real monetary gaps, which represent the difference between green and market exchange rates of the pound, range from −9·566 for pigmeat to −17·990 for sheepmeat.

68. Mrs. Currie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to remove any discrepancy in the value of the green pound.

Mr. Gummer: As I have made clear to the House, I am seeking a substantial devaluation of the green pound in the current negotiations on the Commission's 1990 price proposals.

Common Agricultural Policy

32. Sir Anthony Meyer: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether in the light of the changing situation in eastern Europe and in the Soviet Union, he will review the food export policies of the common agricultural policy.

Mr. Gummer: Part of the EC's response to the remarkable changes in eastern Europe has been to agree, with commendable speed and generosity, to a very considerable package of food aid and other measures. There are at present no plans to alter in addition the existing export policies of the common agricultural policy. The best way to assist countries in eastern Europe is, of course, to encourage the development in those countries of their own economics, and in particular their own agricultural sectors. We would certainly want to avoid any action which hindered this process. The Community, together with other major exporters, will continue to monitor the situation as the consequences of the recent changes unfold.

Organic Food

35. Mr. Evennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to stimulate the development of organic food production.

65. Mr. Waller: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what support his Department is giving to the development of organic methods of cultivation in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Gummer: It is for those who produce, process or market organic produce to respond to the growing demand for organic foods and to lessen our dependence on imported supplies. However, my Department has already taken a number of steps to encourage this process while additional proposals are currently under consideration.

Of particular significance has been the setting up of the United Kingdom Register of Organic Food Standards (UKROFS) which in May 1989 launched production and processing standards for organic produce and an independent certification and inspection system. We understand that the UKROFS board has now reached an advanced stage in its discussions on registration with the organic sector bodies through which it is expected the large majority of registrations will be effected. Once the board has satisfied itself on the inspection and certification arrangements to be operated by these bodies consumers will be able with confidence to purchase British organic produce backed by the UKROFS standards and monitoring provisions.

Other steps being taken, or under consideration, by the Government include the funding of a comprehensive economic survey of organic farming; the provision of R and D and of specialised ADAS advice; the help for conversion available through the fallow option of the set-aside scheme; and the benefits available through the farm and conservation grant scheme and from assistance towards establishing co-operatives. In addition, we are proposing shortly to issue a consultation document on an organic conversion option under the EC extensification scheme.

37. Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with the Organic Farmers Association regarding organic extensification.

Mr. Gummer: I intend to consult interested parties on this subject shortly.

Horses and Ponies

36. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with his EEC counterparts about the retention of minimum values on the export of horses and ponies after 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Discussions on EC proposals on animals' welfare during transport are at an early stage. We will seek to maintain the minimum value controls or measures having similar effect.

Consumer Panel

38. Dr. Reid: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the appointees to his consumer panel.

Mr. Maclean: I hope to announce the membership of the consumer panel in the near future.

50. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects his consumer panel will meet for the first time.

Mr. Maclean: I hope to hold the first meeting in the next few weeks.

Yorkshire Dales

39. Mr. Hague: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has any plans to visit the Yorkshire Dales.

Mr. Gummer: I have at present no plans to visit the Yorkshire Dales.

Dairy Farming

40. Mr. Knox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next intends to meet the president of the National Farmers Union to discuss the dairy sector.

Mr. Gummer: I have regular meetings with the president of the National Farmers Union to discuss a wide variety of agricultural issues.

Nitrate-sensitive Areas

41. Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received regarding the nitrate-sensitive areas scheme.

Mr. Gummer: I have received representations from a wide range of interests as a result of our national and local consultations on the nitrate scheme. In general, our proposals have been welcomed.

Energy Efficiency

42. Mr. Lord: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the contribution agriculture can make to the efficient use and generation of energy.

Mr. Curry: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier to my hon. Friend the Member for Dorset, South (Mr. Bruce).

Intervention Board

43. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will be in a position to announce the future location of the Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce.

Mr. Curry: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to his question on 25 January 1990 at columns 823-24.

Hill Sheep Farmers

44. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the level of hill sheep farmers' income in (a) the last five years and (b) the next five years.

Mr. Gummer: As with all types of farm, the incomes of sheep farmers in the hill areas are influenced by a wide range of factors, including the weather, market conditions, size of enterprise and the skills of individual farmers. As a result, there have been fluctuations in income levels over the last five years, and there will no doubt be further fluctuations over the next five years. However, the outcome of the reform of the sheepmeat regime was highly satisfactory in providing increased opportunities for our sheep industry as a whole, including producers in hill areas. Producers in the high hills will also benefit from the proposed increase in the rate of hill livestock compensatory allowance for hardy breed ewes, which I announced in my statement to the House on 30 January.

Surplus Food (Fraud)

45. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many prosecutions were brought during the last four years and how many are pending in regard to fraudulent or other criminal practice on the management or storage of surplus food; and in how many cases conviction was secured.

Mr. Curry: I take it that the hon. Member is referring to the storage and management of intervention stocks. In this area one prosecution was brought during the last four years, and this resulted in a conviction. One further case is under investigation.

Fish Stocks

47. Mr. Doran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next proposes to discuss the conservation of fish stocks with the Council of Ministers.

Mr. Curry: On 27 June when the next Fisheries Council meets it should have the report it requested from the high level working party on improving conservation measures. The Commission is to submit appropriate proposals by 31 July 1990 which the Council will then need to discuss. In the meantime the prudent total allowable catches agreed in December in the interests of the conservation of fish stocks and existing technical conservation measures will be in full operation.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

48. Dr. Marek: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the environmentally sensitive areas policy.

Mr. Gummer: There are 19 environmentally sensitive areas designated in the United Kingdom covering almost 800,000 hectares of agricultural land. The concept has been widely welcomed by farmers and conservation interests and the number of management agreements is well up to expectations. Comprehensive monitoring and assessment of the schemes is in hand and will guide my decisions on future arrangements when I review the policy next year.

Food Safety

49. Mr. Fisher: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the financial resources available for food safety for 1990-91 in his Ministry.

Mr. Maclean: Following a reorganisation of the Ministry headquarters, resources have been transferred to strengthen the newly created food safety directorate. Details of the Ministry's expenditure plans for 1990-91, including those for food safety, are covered in chapter 3 (Cm. 1003) of the 1990 public expenditure White Paper which was published on 30 January. A more detailed analysis of the Ministry's expenditure plans for 1990-91 will be published in March in class III of the 1990-91 supply estimates.

57. Mr. Fishburn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what publications he has made available to the general public on the subject of chemical safety of food.

Mr. Maclean: Several publications are available, free of charge, in our "Food Sense" series including booklets on food additives, pesticides and food and food surveillance. The latter also lists the 26 individual food surveillance papers available from HMSO. A 27th entitled "Lead in Food: Progress Report" was published recently. Various reports from the Food Advisory Committee, the Veterinary Products Committee and the Advisory Committee on Pesticides are also available from HMSO.

61. Mr. Caborn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the operation of his food safety directorate.

Mr. Maclean: The food safety directorate brings together the divisions in the Department with the main responsibility for matters relating to the safe production and handling of foodstuffs and other consumer protection matters concerned with food. The directorate will report to me as Minister of food.

73. Mr. Rooker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what initiatives he has taken to improve food safety in the past three months.

Mr. Maclean: The major initiatives on food safety during the last three months have been the introduction of the Food Safety Bill and the establishment of a food safety directorate within my Department. In addition, work has continued on a large number of initiatives aimed at effective and comprehensive food safety controls.

81. Mr. Hayward: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the European Community has awarded any contracts to the Institute of Food Research for work in the field of food safety and quality.

Mr. Gummer: The European Commission has selected the six shared-cost projects listed in the table, involving the Institute of Food Research for contract negotiation in the field of food safety and quality:

1. Application of oxidoreductases for food preservation.
2. New technologies and raw materials for nutritious and attractive cereal products.
3. Investigation of the minimum level of sulphur dioxide required for optimum red wine quality.
4. Mechanisms of food intolerance: relationship between gut mucosal integrity, allergy and adverse reactions.
5. Development of computer-aided process design procedures to improve quality and safety of products with a limited shelf life.
6. Study of production and utilisation of fibres with functional qualities and beneficial nutritional properties.

Cereals

51. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what benefits will accrue to the cereals sector from the current year's grants from the European Community for the improvement of marketing and processing facilities.

Mr. Maclean: Awards made by the Commission under EC regulation 355/77 to projects aimed at improving the marketing and processing of agricultural products are announced in June and December each year. The first awards for 1990 will be announced in June. For 1989, the Commission announced awards totalling £1,714,160 to seven projects in the cereals sector in the United Kingdom.

Food Industry

52. Mr. Carrington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which food industry leaders he has met in the last six months; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Curry: During the past six months the Minister has met many leading representatives from the food industry under a variety of circumstances, both formal and informal, when discussions have covered a wide range of topics of mutual concern.

Livestock (Slaughter)

56. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many live cattle and sheep were exported from Britain for slaughter elsewhere in the European Community in the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Maclean: In 1989, a total of 358 cattle and 216,886 sheep were exported from Britain to the European Community for immediate slaughter.

60. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on live export for slaughter of United Kingdom livestock.

Mr. Gummer: Such a trade is acceptable provided exporters and hauliers comply with proper welfare standards. We will be pressing for the best possible welfare controls in negotiations on the Commission proposals for measures on protection of animals in transit.

Horticulture

62. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the benefits which will accrue to the horticultural sector from the current year's grants from the European Community for the improvement of marketing and processing facilities for agricultural commodities.

Mr. Maclean: Awards made by the Commission under EC regulation 355/77 to projects aimed at improving the marketing and processing of agricultural products are announced in June and December each year. The first awards for 1990 will be announced in June. For 1989 the Commission announced awards totaling £2,625,897 to 15 projects in the horticulture sector in the United Kingdom.

82. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on Government funding of horticultural research.

Mr. Curry: The Government are funding a substantial programme of horticultural R and D, including basic and strategic research, as well as work in the public interest.

Beef and Livestock Farmers

63. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has recently received from representatives of beef and livestock farmers.

Mr. Gummer: I am in regular contact with beef and livestock farmers' representatives. Issues that they have recently raised include BSE, lead contamination of animal feedingstuffs, support of livestock in the less-favoured areas and the Commission's proposals for the CAP price fixing.

Meat and Bone Meal

64. Mr. Pike: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has had any discussions with other European Community member-states about the export of meat and bone meal from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: My officials have had detailed discussions in the European Community's standing veterinary committee.

Fishing

69. Mr. Mans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what benefits he assesses will accrue to the fishing industry from the current year's grant from the European Community for the improvement of marketing and processing facilities.

Mr. Maclean: Awards made by the Commission under EC regulation 355/77 to projects aimed at improving the marketing and processing of agricultural and fisheries products are announced in June and December each year. The first awards for 1990 will be announced in June. For 1989, the Commission announced awards totalling £2,538,668 to 22 projects in the fisheries sector in the United Kingdom.

71. Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from, and what discussions he has had with, fishing industry representatives regarding prospects for the industry in 1990; and if he will make a statement on the outcome of these meetings.

Mr. Curry: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave on 6 February 1990 to the hon. Member for Banff and Buchan (Mr. Salmond) at column 571.

Hormones

74. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on illegal hormone use by United Kingdom livestock farmers.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave earlier to the hon. Member for Gower (Mr. Wardell).

Poultry

76. Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what grants are to be made in the current year to the poultry industry from the EC for the improvement of marketing and processing facilities.

Mr. Maclean: Awards made by the Commission under EC regulation 355/77 to projects aimed at improving the marketing and processing of agricultural products are announced in June and December each year. The first awards for 1990 will be announced in June. For 1989, the Commission announced awards totalling £1,911,009 to six projects in the eggs and poultry sector in the United Kingdom.

Coastal Protection

77. Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much Government grant has been allocated to Bournemouth borough council for coastal protection and beach replenishment work since 1979.

Mr. Curry: Our records show that grant aid paid to Bournemouth borough council since 1 April 1979 in respect of all types of coast protection work amounts to £4·6 million.

Haddock

78. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with fishing industry representatives regarding his commitment to reduce fishing effort for haddock by 30 per cent.

Mr. Curry: We issued a consultation document on 23 January and it was discussed at a meeting with industry representatives in Edinburgh on 29 January. We are considering the industry's reactions to our proposals and I hope to be able to make an announcement shortly.

Pet Food

79. Mr. Parry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the quality and safety of cat and dog food supplies.

Mr. Maclean: The safety and quality of pet food are protected by the detailed provisions of the Agriculture Act 1970 and the Feedingstuffs Regulations 1988. Manufacturers' performance in meeting these provisions is closely monitored by local trading standards officers.

Oilseed Rape

83. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give an estimate of the area of oilseed rape that will be grown in 1990.

Mr. Curry: Latest estimates suggest that between 350,000 and 360,000 hectares of oilseed rape will be grown in the United Kingdom in 1990.

Wildlife Habitats

84. Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to improve the quality of wildlife habitats.

Mr. Curry: While my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment has primary responsibility for the preservation and mangement of wildlife habitats, the environmentally sensitive areas, farm woodlands and farm and conservation grant schemes also contribute to improvements in their quality.

Third World

85. Mr. Kirkhope: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what aspects of United Kingdom agricultural and food policy are designed to assist Third world countries.

Mr. Gummer: The effect on Third world countries is one of the factors I take into account in assessment of all relevant United Kingdom agricultural and food policies. Developing countries benefit from a range of concessions on their agricultural and food exports to the United Kingdom, such as the generalised scheme of preferences and measures under the Lomé convention. I have adopted the Oxfam request that all relevant submissions to Ministers should specifically consider the effect on developing countries of the proposals being made.

Food Labelling

86. Dr. Twinn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what initiatives he is taking to promote British food via the use of labelling.

Mr. Curry: The Government support Food from Britain whose promotional activities include quality assurance schemes for a range of quality British products. Under these schemes, which are monitored by FFB's quality council, companies which meet the standards set may display an appropriate symbol. The latest of the quality council schemes to be launched concerns British extra fresh eggs. I am pleased to see that as a result of this and other Food from Britain initiatives there is a move by producers and retailers alike to make clear their British origin so that consumers can make an informed choice.

Hill Farmers

88. Mr. Amos: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on Government assistance to hill farmers in less-favoured areas.

Mr. Gummer: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement I made to the House on 30 January 1990 (Official Report columns 159-70).

Food Marketing

89. Mr. Burt: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what contribution his Department is making to improve the marketing of British-produced food in 1990.

Mr. Curry: Food From Britain was set up in 1983 by my Department to improve the marketing of British food and drink both at home and abroad. In each of 1989-90 and 1990-91 the Government will provide FFB with £3·5 million for its establishment costs plus up to a further £1 million dependent on the level of industry funding. In addition agricultural and horticultural marketing co-operatives may be eligible for grant under the agricultural and horticultural co-operation scheme.

Cereal Sector

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the current state of the cereal sector.

Mr. Curry: The 1989 cereals harvest in the United Kingdom was 22·4 million tonnes, the fourth largest on record. About 5 million tonnes of this is surplus to domestic demand: I expect that this will find an export market elsewhere in the Community or be exported with Community export refunds to third countries. There is a good supply of milling wheat on the home market, and imports are likely to contribute no more than about 15 per cent. of United Kingdom millers' requirements. Intervention stocks are at lower levels than in recent years. Prices of cereals are generally above last season's levels, except for breadmaking wheat, on which premiums have narrowed. The Commission's proposals for the 1990 price fixing provide for further devaluation of the green pound. We shall be pressing for a devaluation which keeps us on course for the elimination of all monetary gaps by the end of 1992. Information on farm incomes from cereals is to be found on pages 66 and 68 of "Agriculture in the United Kingdom: 1989", which was published on 6 February.

Rain Forest Species

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what actions he has taken on the international trade in rain forest birds and reptiles since the Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Penrith and The Border (Mr. Maclean), answered the Consolidated Fund debate of the hon. Member for Linlithgow, Official Report, 20 December 1989, column 267.

Mr. Maclean: I refer to the answer given to the hon. Member on 29 January—Official Report, column 75. Officials from my Ministry and the Department of the Environment met conservation and welfare organisations on 30 January.

Nuclear Attack

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice he currently gives to farmers to protect their cattle in the event of a nuclear attack.

Mr. Maclean: The booklet, "Civil Defence and the Farmer", which was published in 1985, and is available in the Library of the House, contains advice on measures farmers might take to protect themselves and their livestock in the event of a nuclear attack.

School Milk

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he expects changes in the milk co-responsibility levy to affect the provision of milk in schools.

Mr. Curry: The school milk subsidy is provided for in EC regulations and is wholly financed by the Community. The EC Commission allocates part of the receipts from the milk co-responsibility levy to offset the cost of this and a number of other subsidies in the milk sector. I understand that the Commission intends to use co-responsibility levy receipts to offset the cost of the school milk subsidy by 117 mecu in 1990-91—the same amount as in 1989-90. It would be for the Commission and the Council of Ministers to determine whether any future reductions in milk co-responsibility levy receipts should be reflected in the arrangements for the school milk subsidy.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Stephens Inquiry (Fire)

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the progress of the inquiry into the cause of the fire at the Stephens inquiry team office.

Mr. Cope: I understand that the forensic scientists have now concluded their investigation and have reported that the most probable cause of the fire was an accident.

Coleraine, Ballymoney and Moyle Acute Hospital

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the latest option appraisal for the acute hospital for Coleraine, Ballymoney and Moyle district will be the final one; if he will accept the findings of the option appraisal and proceed immediately to build on the basis of its conclusion; whether the currently available £20 million will be available to start building and at what date; and what will be the target for completion.

Mr. Needham: The option appraisal is being undertaken by the Northern health and social services board. Provided that it is carried out to the standards required under the Government's guidelines, the appraisal should lead to a final decision on the future provision of acute hospital services in the Coleraine, Ballymoney and Moyle area. It is not possible to give a definitive timescale for implementing the preferred option. The board has been informed that funds have been reserved provisionally for a phased redevelopment of the Coleraine hospital site starting in 1993. The substantial but so far unquantified additional resources required for a completely new hospital are unlikely to be available before 1997 at the earliest.

Firearms

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many firearms, listed by the category under which they are identified by the Royal Ulster Constabulary, are believed to have been stolen by terrorist organisations from (a) civilians, (b) Royal Ulster Constabulary, (c) Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve (d) the Ulster Defence Regiment, (e) the regular Army and (f) prison officers in each of the last five years for which figures are available;

(2) how many firearms, listed by the category under which they are identified by the Royal Ulster Constabulary, have been stolen from (a) civilians, (b) the Royal Ulster Constabulary, (c) the Royal Ulster Constabulary Reserve, (d) Ulster Defence Regiment, (e) the regular Army and (f) prison officers in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and how many such firearms, and of which category were later recovered, or as much of such information as is available to him.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 9 January 1990]: Readily available information is as follows:

During 1989, a total of 246 firearms were found in Northern Ireland. Of these, 40 were recorded as having been stolen in Northern Ireland in previous years. Of these 40 stolen firearms, 25 were bullet firing and 15 were shotguns. Further information and details of weapons stolen by terrorist organisations are not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Lough Mann (Development)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for South Down of 11 December 1989, Official Report, column 450, what action was taken by the Department of Environment town and country planning service to stop the development at the Shorts site at Lough Mann situated on the Downpatrick-Ballynahinch Road following the inspections which took place in May and September 1989.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 6 February 1990]: None. On 15 January 1990, Down district council was consulted by the Department of the Environment (NI) with an opinion to approve the planning application referred to in my written reply. The council agreed with the Department's opinion.

Fair Employment Commission

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table in the Official Report to show (a) the number of employees of the Fair Employment Commission, (b) the number in each grade, Department and category and their religious affiliation, (c) the catchment area of the employees, (d) the religious composition by percentage of (i) the total population and (ii) the population of working age in the catchment area, (e) the number of employees born outside the United Kingdom and (f) the number of employees born in Great Britain.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 6 February 1990]: At 2 February 1990, the Fair Employment Commission had 35 employees, including the chairman. Under the control of the chief executive, staff are distributed as follows:—

Fair Employment Commission (FEC) Departments

NICS Grade Equivalents	Administration	Advice and Information	Complaints	General Operations
Principal	Solicitor and Secretary to FEC (1)	Director (1)	Director (1)	Director (1)

Executive Officer (Grade 2)	—	—	—	—
Total	9	8	8	8

The commission is currently in the process of recruiting employees and will be submitting a monitoring return in accordance with section 27 of the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1989. Once the final staffing complement has been reached the commission intends to publish detailed information on the religious composition of its staff and the progress of its affirmative action programme as a follow-up to the information published on 22 February 1989.

Mr. Colin Wallace

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he has taken to investigate the files of the Northern Ireland Office in Northern Ireland and in London to discover whether information about the activities engaged in by Mr. Colin Wallace and his section is recorded in those files.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 6 February 1990]: A detailed study has recently been made of all relevant Northern Ireland Office files.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Agriculture Colleges

93. Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many students were attending full-time courses in agricultural colleges in 1989; and what was the comparable figure for 1984.

Mr. Jackson: Available figures for full-time students attending agricultural colleges in England which were local education authority maintained or assisted or in receipt of direct grant from the Department of Education and Science are as follows:

	Number
November 1984	8,700
November 1988[1]	8,200

[1] Provisional.

Statistics for colleges in other parts of the United Kingdom are the responsibility of the respective Secretaries of State.

Further Education

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are the numbers of 16 to 18-year-olds staying on in full-time education in (a) school and (b) further education colleges in 1988-89; and the target numbers for 1992-93 in (i) school and (ii) further education colleges.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The information requested is as follows:

16 to 18-year-olds in full-time education

England (000s)

	1988-89 (provisional)	1992-93 (projected)
Schools	389	343
Further education	261	227

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what were the numbers of 16-year olds in full-time education in 1987-88 and 1988-89.

Mr. Alan Howarth: There were 336,000 full-time students in England attending schools and colleges of further education in 1987-88 and the same number in 1988-89.

Primary School Teachers

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make it his policy that all primary school teachers enjoy a minimum of 10 per cent. non-contract time during their working day.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The organisation of the school day and the duties to be undertaken by teachers in their 1,265 hours of directed time are matters for head teachers.

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on teachers' pay.

Mr. Alan Howarth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Ludlow (Mr. Gill) on 1 February, Official Report columns 287-89.

Goldsmiths Youth Orchestra

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received seeking funding for the Goldsmiths youth orchestra; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: My right hon. Friend has received no representation about this matter which is for Goldsmiths college to decide.

Expenditure

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list all shire counties in England in rank order of expenditure per secondary pupil per year, starting with the highest spending authority, together with their position in the table of examination results for school leavers achieving grades A to C at GCSE in the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The table gives the net institutional expenditure per secondary school pupil in shire counties in England in the financial year 1987-88, and averaged examination results for the three years 1985-86 to 1987-88. The purpose of averaging is to reduce sampling error within the derived percentages.

[1] The figures in the table have not been adjusted to take account of variations in LEA's socio-economic circumstances.
[2] Net institutional expenditure includes the cost of salaries and wages, premises, and certain supplies and services. It does not include the cost of school meals, central administration and inspection, debt charges or revenue contributions to capital outlay.
[3] The unit spending figures are based on LEA expenditure returns to the Department of the Environment for the financial year 1987-88, and pupil number returns to DES.
[4] The examination data are aggregated from the results of a sample survey for the academic years 1985-86, 1986-87 and 1987-88. The survey is based on a 10 per cent. sample of pupils in maintained and independent schools (excluding special schools) who have reached the minimum school leaving age. The percentages quoted do not reflect the achievements of pupils at O-level, CSE or GCSE after leaving school; nor their attainments in examinations leading to vocational or other qualifications at school or elsewhere.
[5] Includes grades A-C at O-level and CSE grade 1.

Higher Education

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many students have been enrolled in higher education in the current academic year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: The table sets out the relevant figures with a comparison with those for 1988-89:—

	Thousands of students
	1988-89 Final actual	1989-90 Provisional estimate
1. Home full-time and sandwich courses
(a) Initial entrants (excluding postgraduates)
Universities (GB)	76	82
Polytechnics and colleges funding council (PCFC) sector	85	95
Other	3	3
(b) Total (including postgraduates)
Universities (GB)	[1]271	283
PCFC funding sector	[1]239	261
Other	6	6
2. Overseas full-time and sandwich courses	63	66
3. Part-time (including Open University)	344	358
4. Total full-time and part-time (FTE)	700	741
5. Age participation index (GB)	15·2	16·8

[1] These figures have been adjusted to include students at Bulmershe College in the universities figure so as to allow direct comparison with the 1989-80 figures following the College's merger with the University of Reading.

Note:

The number of home full-time and sandwich course students entering universities and the PCFC sector increased this academic year by 8 per cent. and 12 per cent. respectively. I congratulate universities, polytechnics and colleges for promoting their courses and for their readiness to respond to the increase in demand. This welcome expansion reflects the success of the Government's policies in schools as well as in further and higher education. One in six of all young people now enter higher education compared with one in eight in 1979-80. This will bring benefits both for individual students and for the nation's prosperity.

City Technology Colleges

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will update the table given in answer to the hon. Member for Blackburn, Official Report, 29 June 1989, columns 533-36, giving the latest available information in respect of each city technology college or proposed or planned city technology college.

Mr. MacGregor [holding answer 6 February 1990]: The table covers the agreed and announced CTCs in England.

Euro-Science

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was his assessment of the validity of the European Commission's calculation that Euro-Science needs at least 7·7 billion ecu over the next five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have been asked to reply.

I represent Her Majesty's Government at the Council of Ministers (Research). Having given full consideration to the European Commission's proposal, the Research Council agreed on 15 December to a total budget of 5·7 becu (£4·2 billion) for a new framework programme for research and technological development, from 1990 to 1994 (I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave on 17 January, Hansard column 318 and 24 January, Hansard column 699).

As I said in my answer of 17 January, we consider that this was a very satisfactory outcome.

WALES

Radon

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list those towns and villages in Wales in which there may be significant effects on houses arising from radon; and if he will issue guidance as to what step householders in these locations should take to minimise any dangers.

Mr. Grist: The Welsh Office commissioned survey and that carried out by the National Radiological Protection Board to date have not revealed any towns and villages in which here may be significant effect on houses arising from radon. The surveys have demonstrated levels of radon above the action levels in very few houses but these have been included in the second phase of the NRPB survey where measurements are being taken over a period of 12 months. It is not possible to anticipate the findings of the second part of the survey the result of which should be available towards the end of the year.

Two free advice booklets "Radon in Houses" and "The Householder's Guide to Radon" have been distributed to homeowners in the surveys and are available on request.

Computer Security

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps his Department has taken and is taking to improve the security of its computer systems.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The Department follows CCTA guidance which covers all aspects of information technology security, and keeps its application of this advice under continuous review.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to increase the hill livestock compensatory allowance for cattle.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet the farmers' unions in Wales to discuss their call for an increase in allowances for cows and ewes, other than those classified as hardy.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The views and priorities of the farmers' unions in Wales were fully taken into account in the recent autumn review of hill livestock compensatory allowances.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will increase the hardy ewes allowance on the higher hills in line with inflation since 1986; what would be the cost; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No. Hill livestock compensatory allowances are set annually after all economic conditions affecting upland farmers' incomes have been taken into account.

Dyslexia

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the measures he has taken since 1979, and the initiatives he intends to take, to assist dyslexic children in Wales.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The Education Act 1981 imposes duties on all local education authorities to identify, assess and make appropriate provision for all children with special educational needs, including dyslexics. Under the Education Reform Act 1988 all children, including those with special educational needs, will follow the national curriculum as far as is practicable.

Local Government Legislation

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the subsidiary legislation having effect in Wales that is planned subsequent to the passage of the Local Government Act 1989, and if he will indicate (a) when he hopes to publish each item of subsidiary legislation and (b) when he intends that each should take effect.

Mr. Grist: The following regulations have so far been made under the Local Government and Housing Act 1989:

The Charging Authorities (Population for Precepts) (Wales) Regulations (SI 1989/12268)

The Charging Authorities (Notification of Precept Population) (Wales) Regulations (SI 1989/12305)

The Local Government (Politically Restricted Posts) Regulations 1990 (SI 1990/42)

Further secondary legislation will be introduced as required to ensure the progressive implementation of the Act. The Government's policy will be to ensure, whenever possible, that all interested parties will have an opportunity to comment.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will make it his policy to ensure that adequate time is given between publication of subordinate legislation relative to Wales subsequent to the passing of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 and the implementation of the Act.

Mr. Grist: The Government will continue to give as much time as practicable.

Community Care

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidance he has offered to local authorities in Wales on the contribution he expects them to make towards the provision of suitable homes for (a) disabled people and (b) elderly and very elderly people as part of the implementation of community care policies outlined in his recent White Paper.

Mr. Grist: I fully recognise the importance of housing in relation to community care. This has been clearly reflected both in the Welsh chapter of the recently published White Paper, and in the draft planning guidance on the development of social care plans for the relevant client groups in Wales, which issued for consultation on 26 January. This covered the involvement of housing associations and local authorities. I await the result of the consultation exercise with interest.

Companies (Local Authority Interests)

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is now his proposed implementation date for the parts of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 relating to companies in which local authorities have an interest.

Mr. Grist: The proposed implementation date is 1 April 1990.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he intends to publish a revised version of his draft circular regarding companies in which local authorities have interests dated 27 October 1989 in the light of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989.

Mr. Grist: The revised circular will be published when the provisions of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 regulating local authority companies come into force. I will provide local authority associations in Wales with an advance draft of the order bringing into effect the regulations on companies, for comment.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many civil servants in his Department, and at what cost, have been involved in production and dissemination of articles for newspapers in Wales concerning the revenue support grant and the community charge, and if he will make a statement;

(2) what is the individual and total cost of his articles in each of the local and regional newspapers of Wales concerning the revenue support grant for Wales and the community charge; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Articles published under my right hon. Friend's name may or may not be based on a corpus of information provided in the normal way by civil servants. It is not possible to attribute to the Department the cost of such information. Articles disseminated by the Department are given free of charge to newspapers and the costs incurred are de minimis.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether his Department made any payment to the Chester Chronicle in relation to the publication of his article on the revenue support grant for Wales and the community charge in the Chester Chronicle, Deeside edition of 2 February.

Mr. Grist: No.

Waste Sites

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a survey in Wales of waste sites which might pollute water supplies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: A survey of contaminated land in Wales which included abandoned waste disposal sites was undertaken in Wales in 1982 and updated in 1988. The results of the survey have been widely publicised and a copy of the survey has been placed on the Library of the House. Current sites are licensed by district councils in Wales who are under a duty to ensure that waste disposal sites do not cause pollution of water.

Stroke Victims (Therapy)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he intends to introduce to help stroke victims in need of (a) physiotherapy and (b) speech therapy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The level of provision of physiotherapy and speech therapy services for stroke victims is a matter for district health authorities in the light of their assessment of local need and competing demands for resources. From April 1991 we shall expect the social care needs of such patients to be included in the joint social care plans prepared by social services authorities in co-operation with health authorities and others.

Radioactive Waste Incinerator (Trawsfynydd)

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the proposal to build a new radioactive waste incinerator at Trawsfynydd nuclear power station.

Mr. Baldry: I have been asked to reply.

This is a matter for Nuclear Electric. I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

ENVIRONMENT

Contaminated Land

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce a grant regime to provide financial assistance specifically for contaminated land.

Mr. Trippier: There is already extensive grant aid for dealing with contaminated derelict land. The Government are currently considering the report of the Environment Select Committee on contaminated land which recommends that existing grant systems should give greater priority to sites which are contaminated or polluting and that separate financial support should be given for demonstration projects for cleaning up contaminated land.

Private Tenants

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what redress is available to private tenants who at present pay combined rates and rent and who find that their landlords are not taking account of the abolition of domestic rates in April 1990.

Mr. Chope: Redress available to private tenants who at present pay combined rent and rates depends on the type and terms of the tenancy agreement they have. A substantial majority are covered by the Rent Act 1977 and can have a fair rent registered which will be exclusive of rates. Many new assured tenants under the Housing Act 1988 will have covered the issue in their tenancy agreements. Assured shorthold tenants, who make up a significant proportion of new tenants, have the right to apply to the rent assessment committee for a rates exclusive market rent to be registered during the initial fixed term of their tenancies. The Department will shortly be issuing a leaflet explaining the position.

Search Fees

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to collect information on the varying levels of local authority search fees and issue guidance on standardisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The Lord Chancellor sets a standard fee for statutory searches of local land charges registers. In addition, local authorities supply answers to supplementary inquiries, under a voluntary agreement between the local authority associations and the Law Society. It is for authorities themselves to decide what fees to charge for this service. Information about the fees charged for processing supplementary inquiries is available from the Law Society, which publishes details from time to time in its gazette.

Radioactive Waste

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the inquiries made by his Department into the decrease in the amounts of radioactive material being sent for disposal to the official low-level waste site at Drigg, Cumbria.

Mr. Trippier: My Department is making no such inquiries, but I am advised that the radioactive waste management advisory committee is reviewing the general question of low-level waste disposal.

Trees, Leicestershire

Mr. Ashby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the level of tree coverage in Leicestershire; and what plans he has to improve this aspect of the environment in Leicestershire.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The census of woodlands and trees carried out by the Forestry Commission in 1980 revealed that there were nearly 8,000 hectares of woodland in Leicestershire—some 3 per cent. of the total area of the county—and, in addition, more than 1 million other trees. Currently sites in Leicestershire are among a number that the Countryside Commission is considering as a possible location for its proposed new national forest in the Midlands: a consultation paper issued by the Commission in November gave further details and carried a foreword by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. The Government are also promoting planting of trees through their existing schemes of aid, and the Forestry Commission is co-operating with the county council in planning further planting on reclaimed mineral workings.

Lead Pollution

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when pollution report No. 28 on lead will be published.

Mr. Trippier: Pollution report No. 28, "UK Blood Lead Monitoring Programme 1984-1987: Results for 1987" will be published in the spring. Summary results from the 1987 survey were published in "Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics No. 11" last year and detailed tables for 1987 will be published as additional tables to digest No. 12.

Arpley Meadows

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the provenance of the low-level radioactive wastes to be disposed of at the Arpley Meadows site; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The wastes originate at the Royal Liverpool hospital and Liverpool university.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what level of radioactive dosage would be received per year by local residents consequent upon the dumping of solid radioactive wastes at Arpley Meadows domestic landfill site.

Mr. Trippier: The radiological impact of the proposed disposals will be less than one thousandth of the average radiation dose received from natural background radiation.

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what notification he has received as to the cubic volume of low-level solid radioactive wastes to be dumped at the Arpley Meadows domestic landfill site.

Mr. Trippier: It is proposed that some 12 to 24 cu m of clinical and laboratory waste will be disposed of at Walton Arpley.

Housing, Bradford

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Bradford, West of 19 January, Official Report, column 443, when he expects to announce his decisions on city grant and estate action grant applications in respect of new homes to rent and for sale on the Lower Grange estate in Bradford.

Mr. Chope: My hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and Inner Cities hopes to be in a position to make final decisions on Lower Grange shortly.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received concerning proposals to establish a certificate of competence for waste handlers and carriers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Environmental Protection Bill includes a power for the Secretary of State to prescribe qualifications and experience for applicants for waste management licences to demonstrate that they are fit and proper persons to hold a licence. Of the few representations received on this proposal, none opposed it in principle. A certificate of competence is now being devised by the recently formed waste management industry training and advisory board. When this certificate is available it is intended that it should be suitable for prescription by regulations under the Bill as evidence of technical competence.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much was raised by domestic rates in 1988-89 and 1989-90; and what is the amount that should be raised if councils spend at SSA levels, and the amount he anticipates that councils will charge.

Mr. Chope: I estimate from local authority budgets that the following amounts were raised by domestic rates in 1988-89 and 1989-90:

	Before rate rebates £ million	After rate rebates £ million
1988-89	8,847	7,674
1989-90	9,754	8,499

If local authority spending in 1990-91 is equal to total standard spending, £9·7 billion will be raised from charge payers before benefits and £7·55 billion after community charge benefit and income support. I expect local authorities to make every effort to keep their spending within the Government's assumptions. Figures are not directly comparable between years because of changes in local authority functions

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of local authority expenditure in 1990-91 he estimates will be met by community charge payers.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 5 February 1990]: Taking account of community charge benefit (including income support) and transitional relief, I estimate that if local authorities in England spend at the level of total standard spending in 1990-91, 23 per cent. of that expenditure will be met by community charge payers.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will amend poll tax regulations to extend exemption to those single persons serving short custodial sentences and defendants remanded in custody, in order that local authorities will not consider them eligible for payment for unoccupied premises before the passing of 52 weeks in custody.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 6 February 1990]: Guidance already issued by the Department has suggested that local authorities should use the wide discretion available to them to specify this class of circumstance as one where the standard community charge multiplier is zero.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce a provision that every person who pays poll tax is entitled to his own dustbin.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 6 February 1990]: No.

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance his Department has issued to local authority community charges registration officers in relation to nursing students registering for the poll tax.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 7 February 1990]: Guidance on the eligibility of student nurses for the student relief is contained in "The Community Charge: Students and the Community Charge" (community charge practice note No. 23) which has been sent to all community charge registration officers. A copy is in the Library of the House.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice his Department is giving to rating authorities about making available photocopies of the non-domestic rating list to members of the public, under the Local Government Finance Act 1988 and the Local Government and Housing Act 1989.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 7 February 1990]: My right hon. Friend has not given any advice to charging authorities on this matter. The provisions for inspection of non-domestic rating lists are contained in paragraph 8 of schedule 9 to the Local Government Finance Act 1988, inserted by paragraph 48 of schedule 5 to the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. Under this provision members of the public have a right to require the authority to provide a photograhic copy of the list, or an extract from it. Authorities may make a reasonable charge for doing so.

Housing, Leicester

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money will be allocated to Leicester city council housing department in the coming financial year; and how much will be allocated for new build programmes.

Mr. Chope: Leicester city council was informed on 21 December 1989 that its housing investment programme (HIP) allocation for 1990-91 was £18·32 million. This compares favourably with allocations to other authorities of a similar size. In addition, up to a further £2·5 million is available for new Estate Action schemes. It is for the council to decide how much of its HIP allocation should be spent on a new build programme.

Right to Buy

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to bring into force section 164 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989.

Mr. Chope: On 1 March. From that date housing particularly suitable for people of pensionable age, other than sheltered housing, first let before 1 January 1990 will be excluded from the right to buy only if the Secretary of State so determines on the application of the landlord; and a house or flat first let on or after 1 January will no longer be excluded as elderly persons' housing unless it forms part of a sheltered scheme.

These changes will be good news for elderly and disabled people who feel they have been unfairly denied the right to buy on the ground that their home is particularly suitable for elderly people. They may wish to apply again from 1 March.

Housing Repairs

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the numbers of tenants who have (a) applied for and (b) received payment for repairs carried out under the right to repairs scheme introduced under the Housing and Building Control Act 1984 in (i) 1986, (ii) 1987, (iii) 1988 and (iv) 1989; what is the total cost of payments made under this scheme in each of these years; and what has been the cost to the Government and local authorities in introducing and administering this scheme.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 29 January 1990]: The number of claims received and agreed in each of these years is shown in the table, together with the total amount agreed. The Department has incurred total costs of some £40,000 in informing tenants of the scheme and on training them; administrative costs for the scheme are not identified separately. Information on local authorities' costs other than on meeting claims is not collected by the Department.

England	Total number of claims received for payment	Total number of claims agreed[1] for payment	Total amount agreed[1] £

Landfill Sites

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many landfill sites he considers it necessary for Her Majesty's inspectors of pollution to visit each year in order to establish that waste disposal authorities are complying with their statutory duties.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 6 February 1990]: The number of landfills visited in the course of an audit will vary between waste disposal authorities. The inspectorate anticipates that in the course of a complete full year's audit programme, up to 500 licensed facilities will be visited. This, together with the other information obtained during the audits, will permit the inspectorate to take a view on the overall standard of waste regulation.

Car Pollution

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to fund a research project into ways of reducing car pollution along the lines of that being financed by the French Government.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have been asked to reply.

The Department has allocated £2·3 million to support a three-year collaborative research programme with industry of 11 projects on diesel and petrol vehicle engine emissions. The work is being carried out by a consortium of diesel and petrol engine manufacturers, component and oil and fuel additive suppliers. The programme supplements work already being done by the industrial members of the consortium as part of their own R and D programmes.

SCOTLAND

Forestry

91. Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the proportion of land in the United Kingdom given over to forestry.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: About 10 per cent.

Psychiatric Nurses

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he intends to introduce regulations regarding the training of community psychiatric nurses; and if he will make a statement on the current situation.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Standards of training are laid down and monitored by the United Kingdom central council for nursing, midwifery and health visiting and the national board for nursing, midwifery and health visiting for Scotland. The skills and knowledge required by these nurses may vary from post to post, and it is a matter for individual health boards as employers to determine what post-registration training individual community psychiatric nurses may require.

Electricity Board Reports

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if, pursuant to his answer of 20 December 1989, Official Report, column 292, he will now publish in the Official Report the dates on which the annual reports of the North of Scotland Hydro-Electric Board and the South of Scotland Electricity Board have been published in each year since nationalisation, either for existing or predecessor corporations.

Mr. Rifkind: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given on 20 December 1989. Annual reports published by the North of Scotland Hydro-Electric Board and South of Scotland Electricity Board are available in the Library of the House. I received the annual reports for 1988-89 on 21 December 1989.

Cervical Smear Tests

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he will reconsider the system of bonus payments to general practitioners for cervical smear tests.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Incentives to general practitioners to provide full preventive cover are an important feature of the Government's plans for improving general medical services.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has decided the amount of fee remission grant to allocate to schools participating in the assisted places scheme in respect of session 1990-91.

Mr. Lang: The allocations of fee remission grant for 1990-91 are shown in the table. As in 1989-90, 59 schools will participate in the scheme and overall these allocations should increase the number of pupils benefiting from the current level of about 2,800 to about 2,900. Further expansion is planned for the 1991-92 academic session which will extend to more families the option of education in the independent sector.

Self-employed People

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many self-employed people there were in Scotland in every year since 1979; and how this figure is calculated.

Mr. Lang: The table shows the estimated number of self-employed people in Scotland in September of each year from 1979 to 1989, the latest date for which estimates are available. Self-employment in Scotland is estimated to have increased by over 40 per cent. in the past 10 years.

Estimates of the self-employed in Scotland up to mid-1988 are based on the 1981 census of population and the results of the labour force surveys carried out between 1981 and 1988. The provisional estimates for dates after June 1988 have been made on the assumption that the average annual rate of growth in self-employment in Scotland between June 1981 and June 1988, as shown by the labour force survey, has continued.

South of Scotland Electricity Board

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will call for a report from the South of Scotland Electricity Board as to how much it has paid British Nuclear Fuels plc for (a) reprocessing and (b) decommissioning for each year from 1985 to 1989.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 31 January 1990]: I am informed by the South of Scotland Electricity Board that the amounts paid to British Nuclear Fuels by the board for reprocessing and decommissioning for each of the years specified are as follows:

	Reprocessing £'000	Decommissioning[1] £'000
1984-85	21,415	1,135
1985-86	45,117	983

HEALTH

Consultants

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether concessions on financial status given to whole-time medical consultants in the National Health Service on percentage allowances for private practice have altered the numbers of National Health Service only consultants.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Since 1979-80 whole-time NHS consultants have been permitted to undertake a limited amount of private practice. In 1980 44 per cent. of all medical consultants in England and Wales had whole-time contracts. This figure had risen to 49 per cent. by 1988.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether full-time contracts are to be continued to be offered to National Health Service consultant candidates; and whether any reductions in numbers of National Health Service whole-time consultants have been recorded in the regions.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Yes. Health authorities will continue to offer whole-time contracts to consultants.

Between 1979 and 1988 all regions in England have recorded an increase in whole-time consultant numbers.

Helicopters

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which ambulance authorities own and operate a helicopter.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Helicopter ambulances at present in service within the National Health Service are not owned by health authorities; they are funded in several different ways, including sponsorship, and operated by commercial helicopter operating companies.

Dentistry

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will collect centrally DMF levels.

Mr. Freeman: Decennial surveys of the dental health of children and adults in the United Kingdom are conducted on behalf of the Department by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys. The results of the adult dental health survey which has recently been carried out are due to be published later this year. The next survey of children's dental health is proposed for 1993.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will commission a dental health education project to assess tooth decay in north Staffordshire.

Mr. Freeman: Health authorities are responsible for monitoring the dental health of all age groups in the population of their areas and for providing dental health education and preventive programmes. I refer the hon. Member to the North Staffordshire health authority for the information she requires.

Hospital Operations (Cancellations)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the main factors according to the information available to his Department for the cancellation of operations in hospitals.

Mr. Freeman: Statistical information on reasons for the cancellation of operations is not held centrally. A study of 12 hospitals carried out in 1988 by the Department's value for money unit showed that planned levels of theatre utilisation were affected by factors including: patients not attending; absence of medical staff; emergency procedures; equipment breakdown; and unavailability of technicians. In many cases it is possible to reallocate sessions. The Department is currently consulting health authorities and others about guidance following the recommendations made in the study report. These include a suggested 90 per cent. target level for operating theatre utilisation. Copies of the report have been placed in the Library.

Nurses

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by district health authority in the north-west region (a) the current nursing staff establishment, (b) the number in post at the last available date and (c) the number who have left the service of the National Health Service in the past year.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The numbers of nursing and midwifery staff in post by district health authority in the North-Western region are set out in the table.

Current nursing establishments in each district health authority in the north-western region are not available centrally. Data on the number of nursing and midwifery staff who have left the National Health Service in the 1988-89 year are not yet available.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by district health authorities in the north-west region the number of people on waiting lists for urgent and non-urgent operations for each year since 1985.

Mr. Freeman: The available information is given in the table. Following the implementation of the recommendations of the steering group on health services information (the Korner committee) starting in April 1987, no distinction is now made between urgent and non-urgent cases since the committee regarded such distinctions as unreliable. Between 1985 and 1989 the number of inpatient cases treated in the north-west region increased by 4 per cent. from 617,600 to 640,500.

Breast Screening

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial resources have been made available for consultant surgeons at Arrowe park hospital participating in the assessment and treatment stages of the Wirral breast screening programme scheduled to start on 19 February; what assessment has been made of the adequacy of these resources; and if he will make a statement on the extent, coverage and date of operation of the breast screening programme in the Wirral.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department has allocated resources for the breast screening programme to regions. It is for each regional health authority to decide how funds are allocated to screening services within the region. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of the Mersey regional health authority.

Welfare Milk

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children in the east midlands are in receipt of the welfare milk token scheme; and what was the comparable figure for 1979.

Mr. Freeman: Information about the number of welfare milk beneficiaries by area is not available, but overall the Government are spending £80 million per annum on welfare milk which goes to some 800,000 beneficiaries.

Disablement Services Authority

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average waiting time for an artificial limb prior to the Disablement Services Authority being set up.

Mr. Freeman: The specific information requested is not available, but one of the reasons for setting up the DSA was to streamline the procedures and we are monitoring the situation.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has any plans to develop quality of service objectives in respect of the Disablement Services Authority.

Mr. Freeman: This is a matter for the Disablement Services Authority which includes the development of quality of service in its aims and objectives. Details of the work it has undertaken in this area can be found in its annual report for 1988-89, a copy of which is in the Library.

Community Care

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people have been released into the community under the community care programme;

(2) how many people released into the community under the community care programme have (a) committed suicide, (b) been arrested, (c) died as a result of an accident and (d) been seriously injured as a result of an accident.

Mr. Freeman: Figures are not collected centrally on the number of inpatients who have been discharged under the community care programme, nor the outcome of those people once in the community.

However, during 1986, the latest year for which reliable figures are available, 1,082 inpatients of mental illness hospitals and units in England were discharged (excluding deaths and tranfers to other hospitals) after a stay of five years or more. The comparable figure for mental handicap patients was 1,951.

Macfarlane Trust

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many haemophiliacs who have contracted AIDS through contaminated blood transfusions are expected to qualify for the £20,000 payments allocated through the Macfarlane (Special Payments) Trust; and what steps are being taken to ensure that all those who qualify apply.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The payments from the Macfarlane (Special Payments) Trust are available to haemophiliacs infected with HIV as the result of treatment with blood products in the United Kingdom, or the dependant or beneficiary of such a person who has died. We estimate that around 1,200 people may qualify. Some 1,150 cases are already known to the trust and through the haemophilia treatment centres it is trying to ensure that any other haemophiliacs who may be eligible know of the payments.

Disabled People

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if general practitioners will be expected to take disabled people on to their lists under the new arrangements for the National Health Service;

(2) whether there will be an appeals procedure for disabled people if a general practitioner refuses to accept a patient on to his list.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Any person may ask a doctor who has contracted to provide general medical services under the National Health Service to be accepted as a patient. Under the terms of their contract, doctors are not obliged to meet such a request. They are obliged to accept a patient when allocated by the local family practitioner committee. Any patient unable to find a suitable doctor should approach the family practitioner committee accordingly.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision will be made in his new arrangements for community care for disabled people to appeal against an assessment decision.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: As announced in the White Paper "Caring for People" all local social services authorities will be expected to set up and publicise procedures for receiving and responding to complaints from users of services, including disabled people. Any user, or carer, who is dissatisfied with an assessment decision will be able to make representations through these procedures.

We will be issuing guidelines to local authorities about these procedures, backed up with Secretary of State directions where appropriate.

Patients' Records

Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average time being taken by family practitioner committees in transferring records from one general practitioner to another when patients change their doctor.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not held centrally. The time taken will vary with the circumstances and, in particular, will depend on whether or not the patient moves to a different family practitioner committee area and, if so, on how long is taken to register with a new doctor.

Doctors' Hours

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how long after its completion the Dowie report on doctors' hours was published; and what were the reasons for the time taken.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The interim report was sent to the Department in September 1989. We have been studying the report's findings and considering whether publication in advance of the full report, expected later this year, would be appropriate.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hours a week, on average, junior doctors now work.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Dowie report into junior doctors' hours quotes an average of 58 hours of work each week.

Information on junior doctors' hours of work is not available centrally. The latest available information shows that the average weekly number of contracted hours of duty of junior hospital doctors in England and Wales was 82 on 30 September 1988. A survey in 1985 showed that the average weekly number of hours actually worked as against on duty was 57.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library evidence collected by his Department's working parties into junior doctors' hours.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The reports from regional health authorities on the June 1988 initiative to reduce junior doctors' hours, and from those district health authorities which undertook pilot studies into a 72-hour week, are being placed in the Library.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if his Department has estimated how many more consultants would be needed for the abolition of one in three shifts and a maximum working week for junior doctors of 72 hours.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The achievement of a 72-hour working week for junior doctors will require a variety of solutions which need to be agreed locally. These may include changes in training requirements, in the working practiees of both consultants and juniors, and a changed pattern of service delivery. It remains our long-term aim to reduce the average hours of duty to 72 per week.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what new evidence his Department has received about the hours now worked by junior doctors since it first received the Dowie report;

(2) why evidence from the Dowie report was not submitted to the pay review body.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Evidence is submitted in confidence to the doctors' and dentists' review body. The DDRB was informed that we wished first to analyse the reports from health authorities on two initiatives launched after the fieldwork for the Dowie report was completed.

The first, which started in June 1988, asked health authorities to continue to work towards the elimination of rotas more onerous than one in three for practitioners first on call in the hard-pressed specialties.

The second, begun in July 1989, asked a small number of authorities to conduct pilot studies into whether an average 72-hour week was possible within existing manpower constraints. Reports on both initiatives have been received.

We will be keeping the DDRB informed of developments in this area.

NHS Patients

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the numbers of parents diagnosed or treated in National Health Service hospitals for each year since 1979.

Mr. Freeman: Information about patients treated in National Health Service hospitals in England from 1979 to 1988-89 has been published in the Department of Health statistical bulletin 2/1/90. The bulletin provides tables showing the numbers of inpatient cases, day case admissions, outpatient attendances, ward attenders and accident and emergency cases treated. Copies of the bulletin have been placed in the Library.

Hospices

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he gives to regional and district health authorities on the distribution of Government funds to the voluntary hospice movement; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We shall shortly be notifying health authorities of the allocations they will receive for this purpose, and giving guidance on its distribution.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he has given to the Five Towns Plus hospice organisation as to how to obtain contributions from Government funds to help maintain the Five Towns hospice; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The funding of individual projects is a matter for discussion between the health authorities and the organisations concerned.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what amount from Government funds has been allocated to help the voluntary hospice movement in the Wakefield and Pontefract areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Allocations will be made to regional health authorities. The funding of individual projects is a matter for discussion between the health authorities and the organisations concerned.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects the contribution from Government funds to match that of voluntary giving to the hospice movement; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We intend to monitor health authorities' progress and plans in relation to this objective. No date has been specified.

Erythropoetin

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether erythropoetin has been licensed by the safety of drugs committee; what has been the length of time it has been under consideration by the Committee; what information he has on the length of time it has taken to approve the medicine in other European Economic Community countries; and what information he has on the reasons for the time required for approval in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 5 February 1990]: No product licence for erythropoetin (EPO) has been granted in the United Kingdom. In general terms the time needed to obtain marketing authorisation in the United Kingdom for a medicinal product containing a new active substance (NAS) produced by biotechnology, such as EPO, will depend on a number of factors. Such an application must be made through the European Community's concertation procedure, introduced under directive 87/22/EEC. This involves the Community's committee for proprietary medicinal products (CPMP) in giving a non-binding opinion which must be taken into account by national regulatory authorities when making decisions for marketing in their own territories—for which they alone are responsible. In the light of advice from the CPMP and any national advisory committee, for example the Committee on Safety of Medicines in the UK, each authority must decide for itself whether any additional information is needed from the applicant company before reaching its own independent decision. The CPMP opinion is often written in rather general terms and hence important additional data may have to be supplied by the company before individual national licensing authorities can be reassured as to the safety, quality and efficacy of the product. Only when the reassurance has been provided can the licence be granted. On occasions further time may also be required before the application can be cleared if an applicant company decides to exercise its appeal rights. The Department does not hold information relating to the time taken by other regulatory authorities within the European Community to grant marketing authorisations.

AIDS

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his reply of 1 February, if he will now provide information on the employment prospects, insurance and mortgage status of people who acquired AIDS from blood transfusions under the National Health Service.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 6 February 1990]: In my reply of 18 January 1990 to the right hon. Member at column 405 I pointed out that haemophiliacs are a group of people who by virtue of their haemophilia are already disadvantaged in respect of their employment prospects and their ability to obtain mortgages and life insurance. We have no evidence to suggest that those people who have become infected with HIV via blood transfusion were similarly disadvantaged before the illness or accident leading to the need for transfusion.

Stroboscopic Lights

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what current advice his Department has concerning the use of the stroboscopic light sources in discotheques and other places of entertainments.

Mr. Nicholls: I have been asked to reply.

The current guidance from the Health and Safety Executive recommends a flicker rate of below five flickers per second.

Food Poisoning

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of recent trends and likely future trends in respect of the number of food poisoning cases in the United Kingdom and in identifying the causes of those trends.

Mr. Freeman: The principal micro-organisms that are identified as responsible for food poisoning in the United Kingdom are salmonella, Clostridium perfringens, Staphylococcus aureus and Bacillus cereus. Laboratory reports for 1989 on these organisms to the PHLS communicable disease surveillance centre are given in the table.

Reports of identifications by laboratories—1989 (provisional approximate figures)

	1989
Salmonella	26,000
Clostridium perfringens	300
Staphylococcus aureus	10
Bacillus cereus	20

In recent years, there has been an increase in food poisoning notifications, partly due to an increase in food poisoning but partly as a consequence of better monitoring and public awareness.

Since 1986 the biggest single cause for the increasing burden of food poisoning in this country can be ascribed to the rise in infections with salmonella enteritidis phage type 4, associated predominantly with poultry meat and eggs. The latest figures from the public health laboratory service for human isolations of this organism indicate, however, a levelling off in this particular problem for 1989. These figures show that in 1989 a total of about 13,000 isolates of salmonella enteritidis phage type 4 were recorded. This is around a 3 per cent. rise on the 1988 figure of about 12,500 isolates, but represents a significant change in the trends noted for 1988 and 1987 when the percentage increases in this organism were respectively 152 and 67 per cent.

Foodborne illness due to organisms such as Staphylococcus aureus, Clostridium perfringens and Bacillus cereus has not shown any particular trend over the years.

However, the PHLS communicable disease surveillance centre also records information on cases of gastro-enteritis (which may not necessarily be foodborne in all cases). These figures show that there has been a marked upward trend in illness due not only to salmonella but also to campylobacter. In 1988, about 29,000 reports of campylobacter were made. The provisional figure for 1989 is approximately 33,000. Campylobacter can be found in water (but not chlorinated public water supplies), unpasteurised milk and chicken (where a survey isolated the organism from over 40 per cent. of raw chicken carcases examined). The organism is usually responsible for sporadic cases of illness and rarely causes outbreaks. The widely held view is that much sporadic human campylobacter is probably attributable to cross contamination from poultry and to eating under-cooked chicken; but more information on the sources of contamination of food with this organism is needed before it will be possible to devise appropriate methods of control.

DEFENCE

General Dynamics

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contractual payments are made by the United Kingdom Government to General Dynamics for products or services related to the potential acquisition of main battle tanks.

Mr. Alan Clark: Details of all and any of our contractual arrangements with General Dynamics are commercial in confidence.

Kirkcudbright Firing Range

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for development of the Ministry of Defence firing range at Kirkcudbright; what costs are involved; what role SERCO currently plays in these processes and what plans he has for developing this; and what is the chain of responsibility for the operation and development of the range.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 1 February 1990]: We have plans to modernise part of the Kirkcudbright firing range facility over the next few years. Essentially, modernisation will comprise a new range safety radar system and a facility in support of electromagnetic launcher technology. Key features will be the reliability and safety of the facility.

It is not our practice to reveal costs, since these are commercially sensitive.

SERCO currently provides 84 staff for the day-to-day running of the range and its activities, as the result of winning competitive contracts. It is this Government's policy that tasks should be carried out in the most cost-effective and efficient manner, and that contractors, selected by competition, should be used where it makes sense to do so.

The ranges are headed by a Lieutenant Colonel who is responsible to the director of the Royal Armament Research and Development Establishment (RARDE).

Research Contracts

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how long is the present contract with the department of animal husbandry at Bristol university.

Mr. Neubert: It is not our policy to provide details of individual research arrangements.

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many research contracts or agreements the chemical defence establishment has placed in universities and other institutions of higher education in each financial year since 1979; and what was their total financial value in each year since 1979;

(2) how many research contracts or agreements the chemical defence establishment is currently funding in universities and other institutions of higher education; what is their total value; how many universities and other institutions of higher education are currently receiving research contracts or agreements from the chemical defence establishment; and if he will give a full list of them.

Mr. Neubert: It is not our practice to provide historical data. There are 94 extant agreements to a total value of £11·8 million placed by CDE with 49 universities and other institutions of higher education but it is not departmental policy to provide details of these arrangements.

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will obtain for his departmental library a recording of the Channel 4 programme, "Dispatches", 10 January, concerning military funding of research in universities and other institutions of higher education.

Mr. Neubert: A copy of this programme is held in the defence press office.

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's policy on the level of funding of research in universities and other institutions of higher education; and what are the reasons behind this policy.

Mr. Neubert: The MOD has funds available for research in support of the defence research programme, including extramural research at higher education institutions. Such work is placed there when considered appropriate to do so and if value for money procurement policies are satisfied.

Chemical and Biological Weapons

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many contracts or agreements exist between his Department and universities and other institutions of higher education in the field of genetic engineering;

(2) how many contracts or agreements exist between his Department and universities and other institutions of higher education for research related to the production or application of monoclonal antibodies;

(3) how many projects in the field of aerobiology are currently funded by his Department; and whether there are any negotiations to fund further projects;

(4) what contracts and agreements exist between his Department and universities and other institutions of higher education for research related to nerve gases;

(5) what contracts or agreements currently exist between his Department and universities and other institutions of higher education concerning research into biological or chemical weapons;

(6) what research contracts and agreements exist between his Department and universities and other institutions of higher education for research related to anthrax;

(7) what research his Department is sponsoring into the viability and infectivity of Klebsiella pneumonia; and if he will make a statement;

(8) whether his Department monitors the potential for offensive use of research it supports in the area of aerobiology by foreign or third parties.

Mr. Neubert: As we have repeatedly made clear, the United Kingdom has no chemical or biological weapons and no plans to acquire any. All research undertaken by or commissioned by the MOD in the chemical and biological field is defensive in nature and is to provide information which assists in the provision of effective protective measures against the threat that chemical and biological weapons might be used against the United Kingdom armed forces.

This research includes a number of agreements with universities and institutes of higher education in a range of research areas such as genetic engineering and monoclonal antibodies. It is not our policy to go into details of specific research areas.

Classified Research

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many members of staff in universities and other institutions of higher education working on research contracts or agreements currently funded by his Department are required to have security clearance;

(2) how many research contracts or agreements which are currently being funded by his Department are classified;

(3) if researchers accepting funding from his Department are advised whether to discuss their work and its objectives with colleagues or the media;

(4) what is his Department's definition of classified research;

(5) what measures his Department takes to prevent the misuse of results of research funded by the Ministry of Defence by foreign or third parties;

(6) what proportion of the results published from projects funded by his Department outside its own establishments is classified;

(7) whether classified research in universities and other institutions of higher education is funded by his Department.

Mr. Neubert: The great majority of work commissioned by MOD with universities is unclassified. There are four extant contracts/agreements with universities and other institutions of higher education classified as restricted or above. The disclosure and publication of the results of classified research is subject to the provisions of the Official Secrets Act. For research which is not classified, while the MOD generally encourages publication of results, the academic institution is required to consult the MOD before any unrestricted disclosures, including any lecture, demonstration, publication or the submission of any thesis to an examining body. This would not preclude informal academic exchanges with immediate colleagues. Finally, it is not the Government's practice to give detailed information about security vetting of individuals.

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many research contracts or agreements funded by his Department have been cancelled in the last five years; and for what reasons;

(2) how many research contracts or agreements his Department is currently funding in universities and other institutions of higher education; and what is their total value.

Mr. Neubert: The Ministry of Defence has currently 745 research agreements and 106 research contracts placed with a wide range of United Kingdom universities and other institutions of higher education to a total value of about £65 million. Some 20 agreements have been terminated early during the past five years, the great majority of which were due to administrative difficulties encountered by universities.

Captain Fred Holroyd

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps have been taken by the military authorities to question Mr. F. Holroyd about his knowledge of events at the Kincora boys' hostel.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Investigation of illegal activities at the Kincora boys' home is the responsibility of the RUC. The Royal Military Police assisted the RUC with their earlier inquiries by interviewing Mr. Holroyd on 22 May 1982.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date a non-adverse report was raised on Captain Fred Holroyd (retired), by his commanding officer as referred to in his reply to the Adjournment debate on 29 November 1989, Official Report, columns 812-20.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 15 January 1990]: The special confidential report on Captain Holroyd was signed by his commanding officer on 5 June 1975.

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the nature of assistance given by the Royal Military Police into the allegations of Captain Fred Holroyd (retired), referred to in his reply to the Adjournment debate on 29 November 1989, Official Report, column 817.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 15 January 1990]: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given to his earlier questions on this subject (Official Report, 28 March 1988, column 362). It has not proved possible from currently available records to define in greater detail the precise nature and extent of the assistance given by the RMP to the RUC in support of its investigations.

EMPLOYMENT

Gangers

92. Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many accidents on farms have been reported to his Department involving the supply and use of unskilled, unregistered labourers by gangers.

Mr. Nicholls: This information is not available.

Employment Training

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of those referred by the employment service to ET complete their assessment with a training agent; what percentage of those who complete their assessment stay six days with a training manager; and what percentage of those originally referred by the employment service stay six days with a training manager.

Mr. Nicholls: It is estimated that 54 per cent. of those people referred by the employment service to training agents complete their assessment; 61 per cent. of people completing an assessment stay one week with a training manager; 33 per cent. of all those originally referred by the employment service stay one week or more with a training manager.

Sheltered Placement Scheme

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what level of ceiling grant the Government intend to give the sponsors of the sheltered placement scheme for the coming financial year.

Mr. Eggar: I am not yet ready to announce a decision on the grant ceiling for 1990-91. I am aware of the need to take a decision as soon as possible and I expect to make an announcement shortly.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he intends taking to ensure that more disabled people can be placed in employment within the sheltered placement scheme.

Mr. Eggar: It remains the Department's policy to expand provision within the sheltered placement scheme as the resources available allow.

Ceiling Grant

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what the level of ceiling grant would have to be for the coming financial year for it to keep its value abreast of inflation including the making up of the shortfall in real terms resulting from this financial year's increase.

Mr. Eggar: The grant ceiling is adjusted to take account of changes in the average costs actually incurred by sponsors in providing places in both sheltered workshops and the sheltered placement scheme. It is not the intention of the grant to match specific movements in inflation, and in recent years average costs have risen at less than the rate of inflation. However, the effects of inflation are reflected in the information on costs on which the calculations are based.

Preventable Loss

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment he has made of the extent of preventable loss arising from theft or misappropriation in his Department.

Mr. Eggar: The Employment Department group keeps under constant review measures to safeguard cash and assets from misappropriation and theft.

European Information Centres

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if his Department has any plans to fund the European information centres when European Commission funding is terminated in June 1990.

Mr. Eggar: No. A network of European information centres is being set up by the European Commission. The Commission provides an initial financial contribution on the understanding that the centres will be financially independent after three years. The first four centres in the United Kingdom were established in 1987; a further 16 were approved in October 1989 and will be operational by April this year. All the centres chosen by the Commission were already involved in related activities.

The centres provide information to businesses on European matters, particularly issues concerning the single European market. They receive all the relevant EC documentation, have direct computer-linked access to Brussels for answers to specific queries and are able to signpost inquirers to both the United Kingdom and EC single market specialists.

Disabled People

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what account is being taken in his Department's review of employment services for disabled people of demographic changes and their effect on developing equal opportunities in employment for disabled people.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 7 February 1990]: This Department's internal review of services to people with disabilities is taking careful account of the likely effects of demographic changes on the employment of people with disabilities. The shortage of young people in the 1990s means that employers will have to make better use of their workers and seek new sources of recruitment, including people with disabilities.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what consideration his Department's internal review of employment services for disabled people is giving to a quota-levy system requiring employers to pay a levy according to the number of unfilled quota places.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 7 February 1990]: The operation of quota-levy systems is among the subjects being carefully considered as part of this Department's internal review of services to people with disabilities.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what consideration his Department's review of employment services to disabled people is giving to the introduction of legislation to prevent unjustifiable discrimination on the grounds of disability.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 7 February 1990]: Successive Governments have judged that education and persuasion of employers is the most effective approach to improving employment opportunities for people with disabilities. The role of legislation is being carefully considered as part of this Department's internal review of services to people with disabilities.

Local Offices, Doncaster and Mexborough

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the current establishment at each grade at the unemployment benefit offices at (a) Doncaster and (b) Mexborough; how many deal directly with interviewing of new claimants; and what representations he has received concerning the lack of staff to deal with claimants.

Mr. Nicholls [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 1990, c. 59-60]: I regret that the information given in the table in my reply of 15 January was incorrect due to the omission of four executive officers from one column. The correct information is as follows:

A graded breakdown of the staff employed at Doncaster and Mexborough unemployment benefit offices is given at table 1.

New claimants are normally interviewed by an executive officer (new client adviser). In each of the Doncaster unemployment benefit offices four executive officers are directly involved with interviewing and counselling new claimants. In Mexborough unemployment benefit office three executive officers interview and counsel new clients.

Additionally in each office two clerical staff provide support services for the new client advisers, which includes making appointments for unemployed people to make their claims.

No formal representations have been made to local management about staffing levels in these offices.

TRANSPORT

British Rail

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent meetings he has had with British Rail; and what items were discussed.

Mr. Portillo: My right hon. Friend regularly meets the chairman of British Rail and his colleagues to discuss a variety of railway issues.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what amounts of (a) low-level, (b) intermediate-level and (c) high-level nuclear waste have been transported by train in each year since 1979.

Mr. Portillo: I understand the only movements of waste were of intermediate level and were as follows:

	Tonnes
1980	599
1981	58
1982	263

Less than 10 per cent. of these weights were actual waste, the remainder being packaging and shielding.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the current arrangements for dealing with accidents involving trains transporting nuclear material in London; and when they were last reviewed.

Mr. Portillo: There is a comprehensive emergency plan administered by CEGB/Nuclear Electric to deal with incidents involving irradiated nuclear fuel flasks in transit. This was last reviewed towards the end of 1989.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information his Department has about plans to increase the transport by train of nuclear waste through London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: I understand that there are no plans to transport nuclear waste through London before 2005

Cycle Proficiency Test

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many children in England and Wales have the opportunity to take a cycle proficiency test through their school; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: Some 275,000 children took part in RoSPA's cycle proficiency training and testing scheme in 1989. This is administered locally by local authority road safety officers with the training taking place mainly in schools, by agreement with head teachers. RoSPA publishes and distributes the teacher materials and the Department supplies each child with a free copy of the "Highway Code for Young Road Users".

Driving Test Examiners

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many female driving test examiners there are in the United Kingdom, by region; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The information for Great Britain is as follows:

	Number
North Eastern	14
North Western	11
West Midland	10

	Number
Eastern	16
Western	9
South Eastern	11
Metropolitan	26
Scotland	6
Total	103

In addition two female examiners are instructors at the Department's driving examiner training establishment at Cardington.

Applicants for examiner posts are assessed on the basis of qualifications, relevant knowledge, experience and personal qualities. There has been a welcome recent rise in the number of women candidates coming forward, and 20 of the 47 interviewed for appointment last year were successful compared with 137 of the 283 male applicants.

Driving Test

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people have passed their driving tests for each of the last 10 years at (a) their first attempt, (b) their second attempt, (c) their third attempt and (d) more than fifth attempt; what percentage of each were female; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The number of L tests conducted in the years 1980-89, together with the percentage of candidates who passed, were as follows:

	Tests conducted			Pass rate (percentage)
	Men	Women	Total	Men	Women	All
1980	990,631	971,403	1,962,034	53·0	41·5	47·3
1981	1,032,454	998,871	2,031,325	52·9	42·1	47·6
1982	1,028,798	976,498	2,005,296	53·1	42·9	48·1
1983	930,977	961,338	1,892,315	53·8	43·7	48·7
1984	861,712	922,400	1,784,112	54·3	44·2	49·1
1985	863,403	978,388	1,841,791	54·2	43·7	48·6
1986	930,663	1,069,075	1,999,738	54·1	43·8	48·6
1987	909,732	1,071,284	1,981,016	55·6	46·1	49·7
1988	965,144	1,107,824	2,072,968	57·9	47·2	51·7
1989	914,456	1,080,956	1,995,412	58·0	47·5	52·3

Comprehensive information is not available on candidates' pass rates on each attempt. Surveys in 1980 and 1985 indicated that the pass rates for candidates taking their test for the first time, and taking it for the second or subsequent attempt, were as follows:

	First attempt			Subsequent attempts
	Men	Women	All	Men	Women	All
1980	51	37	45	55	46	50
1985	51	39	45	56	49	52

Child Cyclists (Helmets)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to make helmet-wearing for children, whilst riding a bicycle, compulsory; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: Head injuries are a major cause of death and serious casualties in cycle accidents, so it makes sense for riders to have head protection. We encourage people to wear helmets but there are no present plans to make this obligatory.

Preventable Loss

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the extent of preventable loss arising from theft or misappropriation in his Department.

Mr. Atkins: Losses detected in 1988 amounted to no more than £2,000.

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will list the number of professionally qualified loss-prevention staff employed by his Department and the qualifications held by such staff, excluding qualifications obtained during police or military service.

Mr. Atkins: The prevention of loss in the Department is primarily the responsibility of management at all levels. Management's responsibility is buttressed by systems of checks and controls, and these are audited regularly by the Department's internal audit division, comprising 13 staff trained to the basic audit training standard. Six of these are members of the Institute of Internal Auditors. A further 11 staff are under training.

ScotRail (Investment)

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on British Rail's investment plans for the ScotRail network over the next three financial years.

Mr. Portillo: The table sets out BR's proposed infrastructure investment (capital and revenue) in Scotland over the next three years.

1989-90 prices

£ million

	1990-91	1991-92	1992-93
InterCity	7·1	3·1	1·6
Provincial	12·2	12·6	13·1
Freight	3·9	2·8	4·8
Parcels	0·1	0·2	0·2
Total	23·3	18·7	19·7

Rolling stock investment cannot be attributed to particular areas of Great Britain.

Foreign Ships

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the number and proportion of foreign vessles visiting British ports in each calendar year from 1979 to have been (a) inspected, (b) found to have serious defects, (c) other defects and (d) pollution defects; what is his target for inspections; the reasons for any deviation from this target; and what proportion of vessels is inspected in the United States of America, France and Holland.

Mr. McLoughlin: The port state control inspection figures for the years 1983 to 1989 are as follows: data for earlier years are not available.

	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987-88[2]	1988-89[2]
Ships visiting UK ports	6,445	6,463	6,579	[1]6,500	6,425	6,158
Ships inspected	2,557	2,529	2,532	2,788	2,188	1,830
Per cent. inspected	39·7	39·1	38·5	—	34·0	29·7

[1] Estimated.
[2] Financial year.

The Department's records do not differentiate between ships with serious defects and others. In 1988-89, of the 1,830 ships inspected 900 were found to have defects of which 87 were pollution related. Information for other years is not readily available.

Under the memorandum of understanding on port state control the target inspection rate is 25 per cent. of individual ships visiting a signatory's ports. The United Kingdom has always exceeded the target figure. Port state control inspection figures are circulated to signatories of the memorandum but on a confidential basis. All signatories aim to achieve the same 25 per cent. target.

No information is available for the United States of America.

United States Transportation Secretary

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he next plans to meet the United States of America's Secretary of Transportation; and what matters he intends to discuss.

Mr. McLoughlin: A date for what we hope will be a wide-ranging meeting has yet to be settled.

Jubilee Line

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport over what period he expects the contribution to the extension of the Jubilee line by Messrs. Olympia and York of £400 million to be paid; what conditions have been attached to this payment; and what is its expected value likely to be in 1989 prices.

Mr. Portillo: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Lewisham, Deptford (Ms. Ruddock) on 6 February at column 566.

Transport (London)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what charges he expects to be made on the public expenditure reserve fund for transport investment in London, other than that already approved for the Jubilee line extension; and from what vote he expects capital expenditure to be dispersed for either the proposed main line crossrail and proposed Hackney to Chelsea tube line, respectively.

Mr. Portillo: The Jubilee line extension is the only public transport project in London for which provision has been made from the reserve. No decision has yet been taken on the funding arrangements for any other new line.

Disabled People

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans his Department has to improve transport facilities for the disabled.

Mr. Atkins: Our current programme of initiatives to promote mobility for people with disabilities is set out in our document "Transport and Disability—a Statement of Aims and Priorities". One major priority is to improve the accessibility of public transport including the development of wheelchair-accessible coaches and buses. We are also working with vehicle designers and manufacturers to influence car design and control modifications, to increase opportunities for personal mobility for even the most severely disabled people. We are also developing guidelines on design for pedestrian areas to help elderly and disabled people.

Driving Licences

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he proposes to take in response to recent proposals to remove, from 1 June 1990, the entitlement to drive large non-commercial passenger carrying vehicles on an ordinary driving licence.

Mr. Atkins: I am aware of the responses to the recent consulation exercise on changes to the regulations governing the driving of cars and motorcycles. While few people dispute the principle that large buses should be driven only by someone who holds a PSV licence, the proposed timing for removing the entitlement to drive a large bus on an ordinary driving licence would have caused practical difficulties. I have therefore decided to defer the implementation of this measure for at least six months. A further announcement will be made about exactly when and how the entitlement is to be removed.

Vehicle Operator Licensing

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has reached a decision on future changes to passenger and goods vehicle operator licensing, following the recent review; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The review has now been completed. In the light of consultations, I have today announced decisions on a number of steps to improve the licensing system. Details of these are set out in a press notice, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Merseytravel

Mr. Heffer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will be in a position to respond to the case submitted by Merseytravel by 14 February.

Mr. Atkins: I hope so.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Appeals

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he has any plans to repeal or amend regulation 72, Social Security Adjudication Regulations 1986, S.I. 1986 2218; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Social Security (Miscellaneous Provisions) Amendment Regulations 1990, which will be laid before Parliament shortly, contain an amendment to regulation 72. The amendment provides that the amount of arrears of benefit on review made as a consequence of a reinterpretation of the law by a decision of a social security commissioner or the courts is paid from the date of that decision.

Social Fund

Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will widen the scope of the social fund to enable loans to be made to those who have obtained employment but need funds to pay for suitable clothing and transport for the period before their first wages are paid.

Mr. Scott: We believe it is reasonable to expect good employers to help with the cost of necessary clothing and travel for their employees, for example through an advance of salary. Where a person does not have enough money to live on until his first pay day, a crisis loan can be considered.

Correspondence

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he is in a position to reply to both the letters from the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East dated 15 January and the question raised in column 183 of the Official Report on 30 January, on Mr. Melvin Wall's loss of entitlement to mobility allowance.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: My noble Friend Lord Henley replied to the hon. Member's letter concerning Mr. Wall today.

Students (Transitional Payments)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will reintroduce transitional payments for students in full-time further education who have been receiving income support under I/S regulation 132(c) and 2(d), so they may continue their studies to their completion beyond their 19th birthday without the present loss of benefit.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We are aware that a small number of young people are experiencing difficulties. Although financial assistance can be provided by local education authorities, we are keeping the benefit rules under review.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Anglo-Japanese Trade

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish in the Official Report the extent in cash terms of export trade from the United Kingdom to the empire of Japan and the extent in cash terms of import trade from the empire of Japan to the United Kingdom; and if he will publish figures for both for each year since 1979.

Mr. Redwood: There are at least 800 industrial and commercial organisations in the United Kingdom owned by commercial interests resident in Japan. I have placed a list, prepared by the Anglo-Japanese Economic Institute, in the Library of the House.

Balance of Trade

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list those European countries which have a trade surplus with the United Kingdom, whose trade deficit is a higher proportion of gross domestic product than the United Kingdom's.

Mr. Redwood: In 1988 Portugal, Greece and Spain had higher trade deficits as a percentage of GDP than the United Kingdom. Of these, Portugal was in surplus in trade with the United Kingdom.

Preventable Loss

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the extent of preventable loss arising from theft or misappropriation in his Department.

Mr. Forth: A central record is maintained of the amounts and details of such losses and an annual return is made to the Treasury.

Monopolies and Mergers Commission

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to abolish the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Mr. Redwood: No.

European Single Market

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet the European Commission to discuss the implications of 1992 for British industry.

Mr. Redwood: I continue to keep in close contact with the EC Commission across a broad range of issues.

Post Office

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will list those Post Office sorting offices where the catering facilities are provided (a) by direct labour and (b) by independent contractors;

(2) if he will list those Post Office sorting offices with catering facilities.

Mr. Forth: The provision of catering facilities is a matter for the Post Office. I understand that there are 1,600 Post Office sorting offices, all of which have some form of catering facility. In many cases this is limited to facilities for staff to prepare food for themselves. I have placed a full list of sorting offices in the Library. Catering services, which in all cases are provided by the Post Office's in-house catering organisation, Quadrant, are provided in the following sorting offices:

Export Credits

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the projected future costs of export credit and financing support provided for project exports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: ECGD charges premium to cover administration costs and expected future net losses. The historical results of these operations are published in ECGD's annual trading account.

The latest available projections of the cost of interest rate support for exports insured by ECGD are those published in the 1990 public expenditure White Paper for the next three years from 1990-91.

The forecast cost of interest rate support is £259 million in 1990-91, £90 million in 1991-92, and £10 million in 1992-93. These figures are calculated using certain assumptions about future interest rates which are standard throughout Government and actual expenditure will vary in line with fluctuations in these rates.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it a requirement of the privatisation of the insurance services group of the Export Credits Guarantee Department that existing staff in that Department transferring to the private company be given the right of returning to the Civil Service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 7 February 1990]: The terms will be decided in due course. It is premature to make a statement.

Consumer Guarantees

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the representations he has received for or against the Consumer Guarantees Bill.

Mr. Forth: There have been numerous representations both for and against various aspects of the proposal. Unless agreed otherwise with the parties concerned, these representations have been made in confidence and it would be inappropriate to list them.

Timeshare

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretry of State for Trade and Industry whether he has received any representations about business practices in the timeshare industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: I receive a steady flow of complaints about timeshare problems, mainly criticising the sales techniques of some companies. My hon. Friend will be aware that I asked the Director General of Fair Trading in June 1989 to conduct a review of the whole range of timeshare problems and to report in the early part of this year.

South Africa

Mr. Grylls: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will review the facilities available to exporters seeking entry to the South African market, following the political developments in that country.

Mr. Ridley: Within the limits of our international obligations, the full range of DTI services is already available to United Kingdom exporters seeking entry to the South African market. We do not at present offer financial support for firms wishing to participate in trade missions to or trade fairs in South Africa. Recent announcements by President de Klerk are to be welcomed and we will consider what more can be done to help exporters in the light of future developments.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Blue Coat School, Liverpool

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) when he expects to make an announcement on the proposal to turn the Blue Coat school, Liverpool, into a four-term entry school;

(2) when he received the submission to alter the size of the Blue Coat school, Liverpool; what was the last date for objection; and what is the average length of time it takes to process an application.

Mr. Alan Howarth: My right hon. Friend will come to a decision on this proposal as quickly as is compatible with a full and careful consideration of all the issues involved.

My right hon. Friend received the governors' submission on 20 July 1989. The period of statutory objection to the proposals ended on 18 September 1989. The current average length of time for the consideration of statutory proposals is about six months.

Nursery Education

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list the 10 authorities which have the highest number of children in nursery education.

Mr. Alan Howarth: In January 1989 the 10 local education authorities which had the highest percentage of children under five in nursery education were as follows:

	Number of children under five in nursery schools and classes	Per cent. of estimated 3 and 4-year-old population
Hounslow	3,786	65
Walsall	4,148	58
Wolverhampton	3,860	58
Newham	4,086	55
Manchester	7,154	55
Cleveland	8,847	54
North Tyneside	2,505	53
Salford	3,140	52
South Tyneside	1,986	51
Liverpool	6,190	49

Teachers' Pay

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether the remit he has given to the interim advisory committee regarding the total cost of recommendations on school teachers' pay and allowances has been reflected in the education components of standard spending assessments for 1990-91; if he will make a statement on the distribution of the relevant provision between (a) London and south-east England, (b) all other regions of England and (c) Wales; what amount and proportion of relevant provision has been allocated to each of (a), (b) and (c) above; and what percentage increase this represents in each case.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Education standard spending for England for 1990-91 allows in full for the remit given in September to the interim advisory committee, the English element of which was £563 million. Education standard spending, net of specific grants, is distributed between authorities on the basis of client numbers adjusted by factors which allow for local circumstances. These factors include an area cost adjustment which takes account of differential labour costs as between inner London, outer London, south-eastern counties and the rest of England. The area cost adjustment factors are set out in annex F of the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England). The basis of the standard spending assessment in Wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Schools (Local Management)

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will list those local education authorities whose schemes for local management of schools have been (a) approved, (b) rejected and (c) upon which no decision has been made.

Mrs. Rumbold: We have announced our approval decisions on all 97 local education authorities' LMS schemes which were submitted last autumn. The following local education authorities have either received formal approval for their schemes or are being consulted on modifications prior to approval for implementation in April 1990:

Mummified Relics

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will publish a table showing (a) the universities which have mummified aboriginal or Maori relics in their collections and (b) the number of such relics in each collection.

Mr. Jackson: This information is not collected centrally.

Arts and Science Courses

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what percentage of undergraduates following first degree courses in the arts and science faculties at Scottish universities take a four-year course; and what is the comparable figure for England and Wales.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 22 January 1990]: The Universities' Statistical Record shows that, for the academic year 1988-89, 77 per cent. of full-time and sandwich students pursuing first degrees in arts and science subjects at Scottish universities were on four-year courses. The comparable figure for England and Wales was 22 per cent.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Plastic Bullets

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many times plastic bullets were used in the first six months of 1989; what were the circumstances of each incident; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: I am writing to the hon. and learned Member with the details for the first six months of 1989, in which 235 plastic baton rounds were fired. I shall place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Red Book Prisoners

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the status of a red book prisoner in terms of parole and review procedures; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: In Northern Ireland, top risk (commonly known as "red book") prisoners are those who are considered to have the greatest escape potential and who, if at large, would pose the greatest threat to society and the security forces.

There is no system of parole in Northern Ireland but there is provision for compassionate home leave, pre-release home leave and Christmas and summer home leave. All prisoners, including those in the top risk category, are eligible to apply for compassionate home leave in the event of the death or critical illness of a member of the immediate family; each case is considered on its merits. Applications from all fixed-term prisoners, including those in the top risk category, for pre-release home leave or Christmas home leave are also considered on their merits. Top risk prisoners were, however, excluded from the 1989 Christmas home leave scheme for indeterminate sentence prisoners who had served 13 years in custody because they had not made satisfactory progress towards release.

The cases of all indeterminate sentence prisoners are reviewed at regular stages throughout sentence. At each review all the relevant factors pertaining to the prisoner, including his security categorisation, are taken into account in deciding whether to recommend release or to set the date of the next review.

All top risk prisoners have their cases reviewed regularly to see if they can be downgraded to a lower security category.

Western Education and Library Service

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what increases in staff are presently proposed by the Western education and library board for or during the present or next financial year; what are the grades and salaries of such staff; and whether they are to be funded by an increase in the sums allocated by his Department or from the presently existing level of funds.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 23 January 1990]: Staffing complements and structures are primarily a matter for each education and library board to determine. Information about lower graded staff outside headquarters is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, the Western education and library board has provided the following information about its additional headquarters staffing proposals:

Grade	1989-90	1990-91	Salary scale £
Adviser	—	5	23,679-25,389
Senior administration officer	—	2	16,743-18,225

The Department of Education has made additional funds available to education and library boards for a number of new initiatives. The above posts will be funded by the Western education and library board from these funds and from the board's enhanced block grant allocation. The Western board will also consider the appointment of further staff in 1990-91 but decisions have not yet been taken about the number of grades of such additional staff.

In addition, 10 field officers (teachers on short-term secondments) have been appointed to the Western board's advisory and support service in 1989-90; their salaries will continue to be paid directly by the Department.

ENERGY

Southern Electricity

Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he will announce the names of the chairman and members of the Southern Electricity consumers committee.

Mr. Baldry: The appointment of the chairman of the electricity consumers committee for the Southern region is a matter for the Director General of Electricity Supply in consultation with the Secretary of State and an announcement is expected shortly. The consumers committee members will be appointed by the director general in consultation with the chairman.

Licensed Mines

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretry of State for Energy when British Coal's annual report on developments in licensed mines will be made available.

Mr. Wakeham: The first of British Coal's annual reports on developments in licensed mines has been received, and copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

PRIME MINISTER

"British Briefing"

Mr. Madden: To ask the Prime Minister what correspondence she or her officials have had concerning the publication "British Briefing"; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: None, so far as I am aware.

Correspondence

Mr. Madden: To ask the Prime Minister what correspondence she or her officials have had with (a) Mr. David Hart and (b) Mr. Charles Powell; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to the reply that I gave the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) on 21 December 1989 at column 365.

"Codename Badger"

Mr. Allason: To ask the Prime Minister whether her authorisation was sought prior to the publication in America of "Codename Badger" by John Cottell.

The Prime Minister: No.

Mr. Colin Wallace

Mr. Madden: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list by name and post all former or current Crown servants referred to in the material passed to her by Mr. Colin Wallace; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list by name and post all those former or current Crown servants who were in any way responsible for supervising the activities of Mr. Colin Wallace whilst he served with Army Intelligence in Northern Ireland or at any other time; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: No.

Drugs

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg: To ask the Prime Minister if she has any proposals to improve inter-departmental co-operation in the field of drugs; and if the Government will now ratify the 1988 United Nations convention against drugs.

The Prime Minister: Government policy for tackling drug misuse and trafficking is co-ordinated through the ministerial group on the misuse of drugs, chaired by the Minister of State, Home Office, my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Putney (Mr. Mellor).

Provisions have been introduced in the Criminal Justice (International Co-operation) Bill to enable us to ratify the 1988 United Nations convention against the illicit traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances.

ENVIRONMENT

Domestic and Special Waste

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, by name and location, mineshafts currently in use as dumps for domestic waste and special waste.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 7 February 1990]: My Department has records of six mineshafts in England and Wales being used to accept controlled waste. These are listed in the table. None of these facilities accepts domestic wastes, and only some may accept special waste. The local waste disposal authority can advise as to the current status of each facility:

Rebates and Housing Benefit

Sir Peter Hordern: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the total cost of rent and rate rebate, and of housing benefit, in each of the last five years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is shown in the table. The expenditure shown for rent and rebates is also included in the housing benefit total.

Housing Benefit Expenditure 1985-86 to 1989-90

£ million

	1985-86	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89	1989-90
Rent rebate	2,292	2,420	2,528	2,661	2,855
Rate rebate	1,479	1,635	1,714	1,373	1,483
Total housing benefit expenditure	4,609	5,009	5,289	5,074	5,592

Notes: Rates rebates for 1989-90 include community charge rebates in Scotland.
Source: Public Expenditure White Paper 1990.

Property Services Agency

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many job losses he expects to occur when the Property Services Agency and Crown Suppliers are privatised.

Mr. Chope: The sales of PSA and TCS should not cause job losses. Thereafter employment levels will depend on the success of the privatised organisations.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Fair Employment Bill

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Lord President of the Council on what date the House gave a Third Reading to the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Bill 1989.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: This information is available in the Journal of the House of Commons.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Housing Benefit

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the number of new claims for housing benefit received from young people in London for the most recent 12-month period for which figures are available.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that the information collected does not allow particular client groups to be identified.

Mentally Handicapped People

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many mentally handicapped people he estimates will benefit from the proposals outlined in "The Way Ahead: Benefits for Disabled People".

Mr. Scott: Our data sources do not enable us to isolate the number of mentally handicapped people who will gain from the changes to existing social security benefits detailed in "The Way Ahead: Benefits for Disabled People". The number of mentally handicapped people who will benefit from the introduction of the two new benefits, a disability allowance and a disability employment credit, will depend on the precise details of these benefits on which further work has yet to be done.

Income Support

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the latest figures for the number of income support claimants with deductions for (a) electricity debts, (b) gas debts, (c) water debts and (d) social fund loan repayments.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Figures for the number of income support claimants with deductions for electricity and gas debts are contained in table 10 of the "Department of Social Security Income Support Statistics Annual Statistical Enquiry, May 1988", a copy of which has been placed in the Library. Figures are not collected for deductions for water debts. Deductions are not all for debt: some are for current consumption only.

In December 1989 there was a total of 391,000 people making social fund loan repayments for 344,000 budgeting loans and 47,000 crisis loans. These figures relate to applicants who were in receipt of income support when the loan was taken out. Some may since have ceased to be in receipt of income support.

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the net cost or saving resulting from the introduction of a common waiting period of three months for attendance and mobility allowance in place of the present six months' waiting period for attendance allowance (a) for all claimants and (b) for those aged under 65 years.

Mr. Scott: It is estimated that, taking into account the full effect of the removal of the six-month waiting period for attendance allowance for people who are terminally ill, the net effect on expenditure would be (a) an increase of about £120 million a year and (b) an increase of about £10 million a year.

Bronchitis and Emphysema

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what funds he will commit to undertake research which would allow a reassessment of the decision of the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council not to distinguish between the development of chronic bronchitis or emphysema through smoking and that brought on by exposure to substances associated with the processing, smelting, working or production of steel.

Mr. Scott: It is not the practice of this Department to fund medical research into diseases which may be occupationally related.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will ask the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council to reassess its previous decisions relating to the acceptance of work-related causes for steel workers developing chronic bronchitis and emphysema.

Mr. Scott: The Industrial Injuries Advisory Council's report of May 1988 on bronchitis and emphysema (Cm. 379) concluded that it was not possible on the available evidence to recommend prescription of these diseases in their own right. The council intends to review this subject again when further evidence is available.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cost of abolishing the 2 per cent. rate of national insurance contribution below £46 a week in 1990-91.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: National insurance contributions are not payable on earnings that do not reach the lower earnings limit (£46 per week from April 1990). On the basis of assumptions contained in the report by the Government Actuary on the drafts of the Social Security Benefits Up-rating Order 1990 and the Social Security (Contributions) (Re-rating) Order 1990 (Cm 948), the cost of abolishing the 2 per cent. rate of national insurance contributions in 1990-91 would be £890 million. This figure relates to Great Britain.

Earnings

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of average male earnings the upper earnings limit represents; and what percentage it represented in each year since 1978-79.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information is in the table:

April 1978	89·10	120·00	134·7

HEALTH

Emergency Service

Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the full cost of both police service and Army assistance will be charged to the National Health Service.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The reasonable cost of police and Army assistance in the current dispute will be met by those regions benefiting from the service, which will also of course have offsetting savings on salaries and fuel costs.

Eye Tests

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what amount of the additional revenue raised by the £10 charge for sight tests has been allocated to the National Health Service.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: As from 1 April 1989, free NHS sight tests ceased to be generally available except to young people, those in respect of certain social security benefits or assessed as being on low incomes, and people with certain medical needs. The savings, estimated at £70 million in a full year, which have been generated from the reduced number of NHS sight tests to be paid for have been used to fund other areas of primary health care.

Hormone Replacement Therapy

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will commission an independent study of the health advantages of the wider use of hormone replacement therapy.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply that I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Billericay (Mrs. Gorman) on 18 January at column 403.

The main agency through which the Government fund bio-medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council (MRC). The MRC receives its grant in aid from the Department of Education and Science. The MRC has set up a sub-group of its physiological systems board to review the need for further research on osteoporosis. This group is examining the feasibility of mounting a multicentre prospective trial of screening methods to identify at risk women who are likely to benefit from hormone replacement therapy. The MRC is always willing to consider scientifically sound proposals for research which will be considered in competition with other applications.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what advice, and from whom, he has received about the side effects and long-term risks of hormone replacement therapy when the hormone is taken over a long period;

(2) what advice he has received about the effectiveness of hormone replacement therapy in preventing osteoporosis in women; and from whom;

(3) what information he has on the benefits and risks of hormone replacement therapy.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department obtains its advice and information on hormone replacement therapy (HRT) and osteoporosis from experts and advisers working in the field and from published work in the scientific press. It also receives advice from working groups set up by professional or other bodies such as the Royal College of Physicians working group on fractured neck of femur.

Recently the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists was given funds by the Department towards the funding of a study group of experts on HRT and osteoporosis.

HRT has a role to play in the prevention of osteoporosis and the treatment of menopausal symptoms; it is also possible that HRT may lead to a reduction in heart disease and strokes. However, since there may be risks, such as a possible increased risk of developing breast cancer, as well as benefits associated with its use, the individual patient's suitability for HRT is a matter for the clinical judgment of her doctor.

In the past HRT has been associated with an increased risk of cancer of the womb; however, it is believed that HRT containing combined oestrogen-progestogen substantially reduces this risk.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the current cost to the National Health Service of hormone replacement therapy; and what the cost would be if all women aged between 50 and 60 years took the treatment;

(2) what is the estimated number of women having hormone replacement therapy; and what percentage this is of the women at risk of osteoporosis.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information is not available in the form requested. Hormone replacement therapy (HRT) can be administered in a variety of forms. The current cost to the NHS in England and Wales of oral HRT prescriptions is around £4 million per annum. This figure does not include women using implants or stick-on patches or who receive HRT on private prescriptions.

The Department has recently agreed to fund an economic evaluation of HRT, which will look at its costs and benefits in relation to osteoporosis, cardiovascular disease and breast cancer.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been undertaken into a possible link between hormone replacement therapy and increased cancers.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State gave to the hon. Member for Antrim, East (Mr. Beggs) on 12 December 1989 at column 627.

The Department of Health is about to commission a review of osteoporosis and related problems which will investigate the statistical association between hormone replacement therapy and cancer risk.

Clinical Research

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with medical research charities about the effect of the National Health Service reorganisation on clinical research carried out in National Health Service hospitals.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Officials have met representatives of the Association of Medical Research Charities and some individual charities and have explained the measures that we are taking to ensure the continuation of high quality research in the NHS.

Imperial Cancer Research Fund

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has had discussions with the Imperial Cancer Research Fund regarding subsidies from the fund to National Health Service hospitals to pay for patient care; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Officials have discussed this issue with representatives of the Imperial Cancer Research Fund.

Hospital Trusts

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will prepare guidance and provide funds for the new National Health Service hospital trusts to ensure that their participation in clinical research is not diminished by their new status;

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure that the necessary facilities for teaching and research will continue to be provided on a long-term basis for medical and scientific professors and readers holding honorary appointments in the hospitals which are interested in becoming National Health Service hospital trusts.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Guidance on applications for NHS trust status make it clear that plans for involvement in research should be clearly set out. Orders establishing trusts will specify research as a function of individual trusts where it already plays a major part. The National Health Service and Community Care Bill provides explicit powers for NHS trusts to engage in research and support research by others and for the existence of reserve powers to ensure continued involvement in research.

In addition to money provided through contracts between purchasers and providers, funds will be available through SIFT: a similar scheme is being developed for non-teaching locations to meet the excess service costs to the NHS of research by universities and others. These should provide that hospitals will not become uncompetitive as a result of their involvement in research.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with university authorities regarding the provision of research and teaching facilities for academic staff in the National Health Service hospitals that have expressed an interest in becoming National Health Service hospital trusts.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: University authorities have been represented at meetings with officials at which these issues have been discussed, notably in the steering group on undergraduate medical and dental education.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which of the teaching hospitals that have expressed an interest in becoming a National Health Service hospital trust currently have medical and scientific professors and readers holding honorary appointments; and what is the total number of such professors and readers.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: All teaching hospitals might be expected to have medical and scientific professors and readers holding honorary appointments working in them. Medical teaching and research now takes place in many locations outside the main university hospitals. Details of honorary appointments are not held centrally.

Patient Care

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the National Health Service retains its customary obligation to fund patient care when patients in National Health Service hospitals are participating in charitably funded research studies.

Mr. Freeman: There is a presumption that health authorities should meet the costs of care where the treatment involved forms part of the service which an authority would normally be expected to provide. The district health authority must, however, retain the final decision on how its funds can best be spent in the interests of its patients.

Bronchitis and Emphysema

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health at what cost and by which research institutions work has been undertaken into distinguishing between the contribution of tobacco smoke and exposure to substances arising from steel production to the development of chronic bronchitis and emphysema.

Mr. Freeman: The Department of Health has not commissioned any research into the specific areas mentioned by the hon. Member.

The Medical Research Council (MRC) is the main agency through which the Government fund bio-medical and clinical research in the United Kingdom. The MRC receives its grant in aid from the Department of Education and Science. I understand that the MRC has in the past conducted research into these diseases. The MRC is always willing to consider scientifically sound proposals for research which will be considered in competition with other applications.

Nursing Homes (Prescriptions)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps he has taken to check prescriptions taken to dispensing chemists on behalf of elderly residents in private nursing homes are not misused;

(2) what steps he has taken to ensure surplus prescribed drugs in private nursing homes are not stockpiled for unauthorised use.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Registered Homes Act 1984 requires the registering district health authority to inspect private nursing homes at least twice each year to ensure that adequate arrangements exist for the recording, safekeeping, handling and disposal of drugs held. Prescribed medicines may be obtained only on the authorisation of a qualified and experienced pharmacist employed by the nursing home and countersigned by a doctor or dentist. It is for the dispensing chemist to satisfy himself as to the appropriateness of each prescription for drugs. Medicines dispensed to individual patients must be given to the patient on discharge or otherwise destroyed in the presence of a patient or relation.

NHS Price Indices

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish in the Official Report tables 13.3 and 13.21 of Cm. 1013 adjusted by the appropriate National Health Service price indices.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 5 February 1990]: It is not possible to reproduce tables 13.3 and 13.21 of Cm. 1013 adjusted in the manner requested, for the following reasons:

i. no price indices exist for the NHS in the United Kingdom as a whole;

ii. no specific price indices are available for the following categories of expenditure in England:
- —central health and miscellaneous services;
- —departmental administration;
- —family practitioner services administration;
- —family practitioner services capital;

iii. as no estimate is made of NHS pay and price inflation before the end of the current financial year it is not possible to adjust figures for 1989-90 to 1992-93.

Details of the relevant pay and price deflators for HCHS current and capital and FPS current expenditure in England between 1984-85 and 1988-89 are shown in the table, together with an index for the NHS in England based on a weighted average of these indices:

NHS pay and price inflation 1984-85 to 1988-89

	HCHS Current	HCHS Capital	FPS Current	NHS Total
1988-89	100·0	100·0	100·0	100·0
1987-88	110·5	105·8	109·6	110·0
1986-87	119·5	111·2	117·2	118·7

1984-85	134·8	123·6	129·4	132·9

NHS Doctors

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list, by grade, the numbers of doctors working for the National Health Service, including consultants with part-time contracts, for each year since 1979.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 8 February 1990]: The information is given in the table:

WALES

Community Health Councils

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will address an all-Wales conference of community health councils concerning his plans to reduce the number of community health councils in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: We are always prepared to consider requests to attend conferences, subject to parliamentary and other commitments. I have in fact agreed to address the annual conference of the Association of Community Health Councils for England and Wales in Swansea in July.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet (a) Clwyd South CHC and (b) Clwyd North community health council to discuss his Department's plans to merge Clwyd South and Clwyd North community health councils.

Mr. Grist: The consultation period on the Government's proposals for CHCs in Wales runs until the end of February 1990. Most CHCs have yet to respond and I have no plans to meet CHCs on an individual basis at present.

Football Grounds (Safety)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has assessed the implications for international soccer matches played in Wales arising from the Government's policy for the safety of football grounds in the wake of the Taylor report.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the statement made by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department to the House on 29 January and to the schedule placed in the Library.

The Government accept, in principle, the recommendations of Lord Justice Taylor's final report. Consultations will take place with the appropriate representative bodies on the implementation, as necessary, of the recommendations.

Historic Monuments

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the total annual income and the income from grant in aid of Cadw: Welsh Historic Monuments from 1984-85 to 1990-91.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The table shows actual income received by Cadw for 1984-85 to 1988-89, provisional estimates 1989-90 and planned income for 1990-91:

£000

	1984-85 outturn	1985-86 outturn	1986-87 outturn	1987-88 outturn	1988-89 outturn	1989-90 estimate	1990-91[1] estimate

[1] Subject to parliamentary approval of the Supply Estimate.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the amount paid by Cadw: Welsh Historic Monuments by category of grant in each year since 1984-85; what is the budget for 1989-90; and what is the estimate for 1990-91.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The information requested is to be found in the table:

[1] The provision for 1990-91 is subject to parliamentary approval.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which bodies received grant aid from Cadw: Welsh Historic Monuments annually from 1984-85 to 1989-90; and what were the amounts involved.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The only bodies Cadw specifically grant-aided are: Royal Commission on Ancient and Historical Monuments in Wales (RCAHM (W)), the four archaeological trusts and the Civic Trust for Wales (CTW). The grant figures for each of the years requested are as follows:

£000

	1984-85 outturn	1985-86 outturn	1986-87 outturn	1987-88 outturn	1988-89 outturn	1989-90 forecast
RCAHM (W)	538	550	608	711	655	715
Archaeological trusts	413	398	450	522	605	635
CTW	—	—	—	—	25	25

Severn Crossing and Barrage

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet the South Wales standing conference on regional policy to discuss (a) the second Severn crossing and (b) outline plans for a Severn barrage; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has already agreed to meet the South Wales standing conference on regional policy to discuss the proposals for a second Severn crossing. This meeting will be arranged once the successful tenderer is known. It is open to the standing conference to request that the agenda be extended to include the Severn barrage.

River Dee Crossing

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet Clwyd county council to discuss plans for the proposed new River Dee crossing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The scheme has been conditionally accepted in the transport grant settlement for 1990-91. Its progress is a matter for the county council.

Coal Mines (Applications)

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many applications for (a) private opencast coal mines and (b) private underground coal mines have been received via British Coal or otherwise by the Welsh Office since 1 February 1989.

Mr. Peter Walker: None. The responsibility for the issuing of licenses for the extraction of coal either by opencast or deep mining methods, by private companies, rests solely with British Coal.

Landfill Sites

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the estimated average cost, per site, of remedial work required to safeguard landfill sites in Wales, including the costs associated with the investigation of geology and hydrogeology necessary as a precursor to such remedial work.

Mr. Grist: The estimation of costs is a matter for the operator of the site. As an approximate indicator Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution has adopted an average sum of £250,000 when assessing the likely resource implications of landfill gas control.

Clwyd Language Centre

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the level of financial support earmarked by the Welsh Office for the Clwyd language centre, Canolfan Laith Clwyd, in the coming financial year.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Canolfan Laith Clwyd is one of many organisations that have applied for grant support next year. Whether they have been successful will be announced in due course.

Teachers' Pay

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what provision has been made for increases in school teachers' pay in the standard spending assessments for 1990-91; what percentage increase this represents; how this provision has been calculated; how this provision is related to the remit given to the interim advisory committee; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: Under the local authority revenue settlement for 1990-91 provision for total standard spending (TSS) is 9·4 per cent. over the equivalent figure for 1989-90 and 7·1 per cent. over local authorities' 1989-90 budgets. The remit given to the IAC was allowed for in full and the effect of the IAC's proposals on the community charge for standard spending is thus minimal. Standard spending assessments for individual local authorities are based on TSS but are not hypothecated to particular services. Further information about the settlement is provided in the reports approved by the House on 24 January 1990.

Community Care

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what financial contribution he intends to make available to housing associations in Wales in order to enable them to make the contribution he expects from them towards implementation of the community care White Paper in respect of (a) elderly and very elderly people and (b) disabled people.

Mr. Grist: The Department makes funding available to Housing for Wales in support of housing associations within the Principality: for this purpose gross provision for 1990-91 will be raised by 40 per cent. over that for 1989-90. As to the future we have made it clear in draft planning guidance recently issued for consultation, that as a first step we expect housing associations to be consulted closely in the development of social care plans and to maintain and develop their crucial role—working within supporting guidance set out by Housing for Wales.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what financial contribution he intends to make available to local authorities in Wales in order to enable them to make the contribution he expects from them towards implementation of the community care White Paper in respect of (a) elderly and very elderly people and (b) disabled people.

Mr. Grist: The position in respect of funding the new framework for community care in Wales is fully set out in paragraphs 11.34 to 11.41 of the White Paper "Caring for People" Cm. 849. In addition, we are to make available in each of the financial years 1990-91 and 1991-92 some £330,000 which will be used towards the costs of demonstration projects in each of the Welsh counties the aim of which will be to help authorities establish effective assessment and case management arrangements.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will make it his policy that Government contributions to support people living in homes for the elderly in Wales shall be calculated on the same basis, irrespective of whether the home is run by a local authority, a voluntary or charitable body, or on a private commercial basis.

Mr. Grist: Our policies for the future funding of care in the community are fully set out in the White Paper "Caring for People: Community Care in the Next Decade and Beyond" Cm. 849.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidance he has offered to housing associations in Wales on the contribution he expects them to make towards the provision of suitable homes for (a) disabled people and (b) elderly and very elderly people as part of the implementation of community care policies outlined in his recent White Paper.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to him on 8 February.

Inspector of Schools Report

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to receive Her Majesty's inspector of schools Wales annual report; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: We have received the report and propose to publish it next week.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make it his policy to convene a conference in Wales of local education authorities, parent-teachers associations and teacher unions to discuss Her Majesty's inspectorate of schools report of 5 February;

(2) what initiatives he will take consequent upon the publication on 5 February of Her Majesty's inspectorate of schools report.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The report of Her Majesty's inspectorate of schools which was published on 5 February related to England only.

Queensferry High School, Clwyd

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet the Clwyd local education authority to discuss the future of Queensferry high school.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Should the LEA publish a statutory notice affecting the future of the school and there are statutory objections, the matter falls to my right hon. Friend for determination.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will visit Queensferry high school to meet (a) staff members and (b) the parent-teachers association.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer that I gave him on 7 February 1990.

Dyslexic Children

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he has issued any guidance to local education authorities concerning early diagnosis of dyslexic children;

(2) what arrangements have been made for the diagnosis of pre-school children who suffer from dyslexia;

(3) what steps he is taking to support the role of local health and local education authorities in the teaching of dyslexic children.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The Education Act 1981 imposes duties on local education authorities to identify, assess and make appropriate provisions for children with special educational needs, including dyslexics. For children under five, the Act places a duty on health authorities to inform parents when they are of the view that a child has, or is likely to have, special educational needs and, after discussion, to bring that view to the attention of the LEA. Welsh Office circular 54/89 gives guidance to LEAs on special educational needs and stresses the importance of early identification of any difficulties. The national curriculum will apply to all children, including dyslexics, as far as is practicable.

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what advice he is issuing to local education authorities concerning the training of teachers of dyslexic children;

(2) what proposals he has to increase the number of teachers trained to teach dyslexic children.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The new criteria for the training of teachers, set out in Welsh Office circular 59/89, have been designed to ensure that students, on completion of their course, should be able to identify pupils with special educational needs or with learning difficulties; and that they should understand the way in which the potential of such pupils can be developed.

There is provision within the local education authority training grants scheme for the training of existing teachers to enable them to offer advice to colleagues on meeting the special educational needs of children in ordinary schools. A draft Welsh Office circular will issue for consultation shortly, offering guidance on staffing for pupils with special educational needs generally.

CIVIL SERVICE

Representations (Nottinghamshire)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if he will list the representations and the subjects in each case which he has received from Nottinghamshire on matters within his responsibility up to 7 February.

Mr. Luce: I am not aware of any such representations.

DEFENCE

Community Charge

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what guidance he has issued to the armed services on the status as students for community charge purposes of members of Her Majesty's forces undergoing training; and if he will estimate numbers of (a) trainees at Her Majesty's forces establishments and (b) members of Her Majesty's forces attending courses at institutions of further and higher education who will be classified as students for poll tax purposes.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We have promulgated information about the classification as students of personnel on long training courses at RAF Halton, and asked other training establishments to seek such classification for other similar categories. As decisions on classification are taken by community charge registration officers on the basis of all the relevant facts, I cannot estimate how many members of Her Majesty's forces will eventually be classified as students.

Computer Security

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department has taken and is taking to improve the security of its computer systems.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: For unclassified but sensitive systems Departments are expected to follow Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency (CCTA) guidance covering all aspects of IT security, and the application of this has been tightened recently. CCTA advice is kept under continuous review and is based upon the analysis of security risks and requirements using structured methods such as the CCTA risk analysis and management methodology (CRAMM), which has also been made commercially available.

For classified systems more stringent conditions apply. MOD computer security staff continuously review the Department's computer security policy and its application to ensure that constant and adequate levels of protection are provided for those systems processing or holding classified material. In the interests of national security the nature and extent of the security countermeasures utilised to protect classified MOD computer systems cannot be revealed.

Preventable Loss

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the extent of preventable loss arising from theft or misappropriation in his Department.

Mr. Neubert: Causes of theft or misappropriation in the Ministry of Defence are centrally recorded and, where appropriate, published in the losses statement attached to the appropriation accounts. In the light of analysis of individual cases, systems and procedures are changed as necessary.

Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will list the number of professionally qualified loss prevention staff employed by his Department and the qualifications held by such staff, excluding qualifications obtained during police or military service.

Mr. Neubert: Responsibility for the prevention of loss, as for all matters of regularity and propriety, including the development, introduction and operation of internal control systems, rests with line managers. There are no staff employed specifically on loss prevention.

Household Division

Sir Alan Glyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list (a) the duties of the Household Division apart from ceremonial duties and (b) the areas in which units are serving and have served in recent years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Household Division comprises both cavalry and infantry regiments and undertakes a wide range of duties outside its ceremonial functions. The division has eight battalions of foot guards, all of which undertake regular infantry tasks both in the United Kingdom and around the world. Recently this has meant units serving as far afield as Cyprus, Belize, Berlin, Gibraltar and Northern Ireland. Units are presently deployed at various locations in the United Kingdom, West Germany and Berlin. The division's two regiments of cavalry alternate between tours of duty with the British Army of the Rhine and 5 Airborne Brigade at Windsor.

Submarines

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) nuclear-powered hunter killer and (b) Polaris submarines have been withdrawn from duties or recalled from patrol following the recent discovery of faults in Royal Navy nuclear submarine reactors.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the answers that I gave the hon. Member for St. Helens, North (Mr. Evans) on 5 February at column 460.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many submarines and of which types, were withdrawn from Soviet naval service in 1989; and what was the comparable figure for 1988.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Over the past two years the Soviet Navy has embarked on a major force modernisation programme to rid its inventory of obsolete submarines. The rate at which units are being decommissioned and the numbers subsequently sold for scrapping in foreign shipyards has increased markedly during 1989. During that year the Soviets removed a total of at least 35 submarines from service compared with at least two in 1988. The vast majority of these units were the 1950s vintage WHISKEY class general purpose diesel submarines.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much money has been spent so far on conceptual and design work on a new generation of hunter killer submarines for the Royal Navy.

Mr. Neubert: Concept studies were completed in 1985. Some £28 million at 1989-90 prices has been spent so far on feasibility studies for a new generation of hunter killer submarines for the Royal Navy.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if, as part of his policy of devolving budget responsibilities and allocating costs to users, he will instruct hunter killer submarine units to charge the Polaris force for anti-submarine protection services rendered.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether a Royal Navy Polaris submarine has ever been detected by Soviet forces while on patrol.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Soviet Union has never to our knowledge detected one of our Polaris submarines on patrol.

Naval Aircraft

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all major accidents to naval aircraft in 1989, giving the type, tail number, location, date and cause of accident in each case.

Mr. Neubert: All accidents to Royal Navy aircraft during 1989 are currently under official investigation. As such, details of the causes cannot be given. However, the remaining information is as follows:

Aircraft type	Tail No.	Location	Date
Accidents to aircraft in flight
Jetstream T2	XX489	Portland Harbour	8 May 1989
Lynx	XZ244	Kenya	14 May 1989
Sea King	XV699	Pont Henri, Llanelli	5 June 1989
Sea Fury FB11	TF956	Firth of Clyde	10 June 1989
Sea Harrier	ZA191	Lyme Bay	4 October 1989
Sea King	XZ582	Off Bermuda	27 October 1989
Sea Harrier	XZ451	Off Sardinia	1 December 1989
Accidents to aircraft on the ground/on board ship
Sea King	XV676	Prestwick airport	31 May 1989
Sea Harrier	XZ440	Off Bermuda	30 October 1989

Naval Arms Control

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his policy in relation to naval arms control.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: NATO's current priorities in arms control were set out in "The Alliance's Comprehensive Concept" in May 1989. In the conventional field this called primarily for the establishment of a secure and stable balance of conventional forces in Europe at lower levels. Naval forces are, by the agreement of all parties, specifically excluded from the CFE negotiations.

Soviet Aircraft

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if Royal Air Force aircraft operating from United Kingdom bases have ever intercepted a Soviet backfire aircraft.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not our practice to comment on operational matters.

Soviet Warships

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on how many port visits were made to non-Warsaw pact countries by Soviet warships in 1989; what proportion of these involved submarines; and what were the comparable figures for 1988.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We are aware of 95 port visits made by Soviet warships to non-Warsaw pact countries in 1989; nine of these visits were by submarines.

We recorded 125 port visits to non-Warsaw pact countries by Soviet warships in 1988, including 16 visits by submarines.

Soviet Tanks

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the number of main battle tanks built by the Soviet Union in 1989; and what was the comparable figure for 1988.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We believe that the Soviet Union produced approximately 3,500 tanks in 1988. Preliminary estimates suggest that tank production in 1989 may have been reduced to about half that level.

Soviet Submarines

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on the number of new nuclear-powered submarines which entered Soviet naval service in 1989; and what was the comparable figure for 1988.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We believe that the USSR completed construction of five nuclear-powered submarines in 1988, and that a comparable level of output was maintained in 1989.

Sea Harriers

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the major accident rate per 10,000 flying hours for the Sea Harrier aircraft in 1989.

Mr. Neubert: Information for individual aircraft types is classified. However, the fixed-wing major accident rate for the Royal Navy, shortly to be published in the Statement on the Defence Estimates, is 1·52 per 10,000 hours.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement about trends in the level of unemployment in Greater London since 1985.

Mr. Nicholls: The information is available in the Library. In December 1989 the level of unemployment, seasonally adjusted, in the Greater London region was 201,300, a fall of 181,300, or 47·4 per cent. since December 1985.

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people in Derbyshire are currently unemployed; and by what percentage this figure has changed in the last year.

Mr. Nicholls: The information is available in the Library. In December 1989 there were 23,537 unemployed claimants in Derbyshire. This figure represents a fall of 9,962 or 29·7 per cent.

Mr. Yeo: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the current rate of unemployment in the United Kingdom and list those member states of the European Community whose rate of unemployment is higher.

Mr. Nicholls: In December 1989, the seasonally adjusted unemployment rate in the United Kingdom was 5·8 per cent. On the OECD international definition the unemployment rate is higher in Belgium, Denmark, France, Ireland, Spain, Greece, Italy and the Netherlands.

Small Businesses

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many measures he has introduced to help small businesses during the course of this Parliament.

Mr. Eggar: My Department has made major improvements in the provision of training for small businesses with the introduction last April of business growth training (BGT). For small firms, BGT offers help for owner managers in producing better business and training plans; training for starting their own businesses; and training to improve the business skills of owner managers and to help the more ambitious achieve their plans for growth. This year BGT will offer 90,000 such opportunities to small firms. The Training Agency also sponsored the launch last month of the small business programme, and open learning initiative backed by the Open university and Cranfield School of Management.

The groundwork has been laid for the new network of training and enterprise councils which will take over responsibility from the Training Agency for planning and delivering training for, and to support the development of, small businesses. They will be responsible both for encouraging more firms to invest in training and for enterprise activities designed to strengthen local economic growth.

My Department has continued with its campaign to make Government procurement more accessible to small firms by simplifying purchasing practices and by improving their awareness of the benefits for small suppliers. We have updated the booklet "Tendering for Government Contracts" and published our advice to purchasing officers in "Think Big, Buy Small". Last December I appointed a consultant to work closely with the central unit of purchasing to further improve purchasing practices and to strengthen the monitoring of small firms involvement.

In 1988 the Government published the booklet "Prompt Payment Please" as part of an initiative to encourage good payment practice in both large and small firms and to foster closer co-operation between buyers and suppliers. The booklet gives guidance to small firms on credit management and correct invoicing and to large firms on their responsibility to suppliers, particularly small firms. It was prepared in conjunction with the CBI, the Association of British Chambers of Commerce, the Institute of Directors and the Institute of Purchasing and Supply and has met with a positive response from both the public and private sectors.

The local enterprise agency project scheme was introduced in April 1988 as part of the Action for Cities initiative. Grants have been made available to support project-based activity in approved enterprise agencies in any of the 57 urban programme authority areas. To date £729,893 has been given in support of 102 projects, with matched cash contributions of £914,734 from the private sector.

Following a review, the loan guarantee scheme was improved in January 1988 by the introduction of a simplified application procedure for loans up to £15,000. In April 1989 the loan limit was increased from £75,000 to £100,000. These changes have led to a doubling of applications for usage of the scheme, which are now running at 260 per month. In addition, in June 1988 the proportion guaranteed was increased from 70 per cent. to 85 per cent. for businesses in the 16 inner-city task force areas. In 1988-89, some 2,291 loans were guaranteed to the value of £64·76 million, compared to 1,234 loans totalling £46·23 million in the previous year.

Earnings

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a table showing average gross weekly earnings for full-time male employees on adult rates in Great Britain for every year from 1979 to the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is published in table 15 of part A of the 1989 new earnings survey report. A copy of the report is in the Library.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the average gross hourly earnings in Great Britain for full-time manual workers, full-time non-manual workers, part-time manual workers and part-time non-manual workers, at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Nicholls: The latest available information, for April 1989, is provided in the following table:

Average gross hourly earnings (excluding overtime) of employees on adult rates

Full-time manual employees	4·44
Full-time non-manual employees	6·83
Part-time manual employees	2·97
Part-time non-manual employees	4·23

Bronchitis and Emphysema

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the name of and amount of money invested in each research project into the effects of work in or around steel furnaces on the development of chronic bronchitis, emphysema or other related disorders.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Executive has not directly funded any research into the effects of work in or around steel furnaces on the development of chronic bronchitis, emphysema or other disorders. The European Coal and Steel Community is now conducting its fifth programme of medical research into occupational ill-health. The Health and Safety Executive has been consulted about the contents of this research and is closely following the programme's progress.

SCOTLAND

Training

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will estimate what proportion of their turnover firms in the private sector in Scotland spend on training.

Mr. Rifkind: It is not feasible to produce the information requested because many companies located in Scotland operate on a national or international basis and their Scottish training costs cannot be separately identified.

In connection with its major study "Training in Britain" the Training Agency commissioned an employers' activities study. The public and private sector employers in Scotland that responded to that study jointly spent £665 million on training in 1986-87.

"Training in Britain" estimated that net training expenditure by British employers in 1986-87 was of the order of £18 billion; but was not able to relate this directly to turnover.

Bed and Breakfast

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the latest figures for the number of people living in bed-and-breakfast accommodation.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are no figures available for the total number of people living in bed-and-breakfast accommodation. It is estimated, however, that the number of households placed in such accommodation by local authorities under the provisions of part II of the Housing (Scotland) Act 1987 was 295 at 30 September 1989.

Student Teachers

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what additional grant or bursary payments are made available to student teachers of mathematics, computing and design and technology in Scotland; and what rules and regulations apply to the receipt of such payments.

Mr. Lang: No such payments are made in Scotland.

North East River Purification Board

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) on how many occasions the Minister has met representatives of the North East River Purification Board in the last nine months; what subjects were discussed; and on what dates the meetings took place;

(2) if he has received any correspondence from the North East River Purification Board concerning matters relating to the duties and structures of the board for which he is responsible; and whether he has received any representations on such matters.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Secretary of State has not met representatives of the board in the past nine months. No representations have been received about the board's duties and structures; I have received a letter from the hon. Member about the responsibilities of the Secretary of State in this respect, to which I am replying. The clerk to the board wrote to the Department last October intimating the board's intention to restructure its management organisation. There is, of course, day-to-day official correspondence with the board on matters of mutual interest.

Prisoners

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many complaints he has received from prisoners or from organisations concerned with prisons that hon. Members have not passed on prisoners' complaints to the parliamentary ombudsman.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: We have no record of receiving such a complaint.

House Purchase

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will publish a table showing the average income of first-time house buyers and average prices of houses in Scotland in 1989-90;

(2) what is the average new mortgage in 1989-90 in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is available for the first half of 1989-90 only. Details are set out in the table:

	First-time housebuyers £	All housebuyers £
Average income	12,461	—
Average price of all dwellings	23,152	35,847
Average new mortgage (advances)	—	25,893

Source: DOE 5 per cent. sample survey of building society mortgages.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average outstanding mortgage in 1989-90 in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is not held centrally.

Skye (Transport)

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the question of improved transport links to Skye.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My noble Friend the Minister of State is today announcing that three consortia have been selected to tender for the provision of a privately financed bridge to Skye. Subject to obtaining the necessary powers and approvals, it is hoped that the fixed link will be open to traffic by the mid-1990s. For the interim period however, given the rising popularity of the Skye crossing, approval has also been given today for the replacement of the existing ferries by two new 36-car capacity vessels. Tenders to build will now be invited by Caledonian MacBrayne and it is expected that the vessels will enter service during 1991.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Maintenance Funds

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many applications for maintenance funds under the Finance Act 1982 have taken more than one year to process; and how many have taken more than two years.

Mr. Lilley: Of the applications for the establishment of a heritage maintenance fund which have been accepted, five have taken less than one year to process, four between one and two years and 47 more than two years.

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many applications for maintenance funds under the Finance Act 1982 are currently under consideration.

Mr. Lilley: A total of 58 applications for the establishment of heritage maintenance funds are currently under consideration.

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many applications to establish maintenance funds have been made in each of the last two years.

Mr. Lilley: The total number of applications for the establishment of heritage maintenance funds received in the calendar years 1988 and 1989 was 13 and nine respectively.

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many cases have occurred where permission has been given for the establishment of a maintenance fund under the Finance Act 1982 but where the fund has not thereafter been established with an endowment.

Mr. Lilley: The number of cases where a maintenance fund has not been established despite approval having been granted by the Inland Revenue or the Treasury is five.

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many maintenance funds for heritage property have been established since the Finance Act 1982; and how many have an endowment of less than £20,000.

Mr. Lilley: A total number of 56 heritage maintenance funds have been established since the passage of the Finance Act 1982; of these four have an endowment which on establishment was less than £20,000.

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many maintenance funds have been established under the Finance Act 1982 with more than one sector.

Mr. Lilley: Of the total of 56 maintenance funds established since the passage of the Finance Act 1982, 53 support heritage entities which include property designated under more than one of the categories contained in section 31(1) of the Inheritance Tax Act.

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the value of maintenance funds for heritage property established since the Finance Act 1982.

Mr. Lilley: It is not possible to provide a figure for the current value of property held by heritage maintenance funds.

Tobacco

Mr. Amos: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received about the taxation of tobacco products.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has received a large number of representations concerning the taxation of tobacco products.

Interest Rates and Inflation

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research he has undertaken on the relationship between interest rates and inflation rates in member states of the European Community.

Mr. Ryder: The experience of member states of the European Community confirms that an increase in interest rates is the appropriate response to inflationary pressures.

Mortgage Interest Relief

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many individuals are currently receiving mortgage interest tax relief; and what is the current cost to the Exchequer.

Mr. Lilley: It is estimated that 9·3 million tax units will have received mortgage interest relief in 1989-90, at a cost of £7 billion.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Electronic Tagging

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many defendants have been electronically tagged since the scheme became operational; and how many of these defendants by each scheme have breached the conditions of their bail;

(2) how much each electronic tag pilot cost to date;

(3) when he will be publishing his research findings on the pilot electronic tag schemes;

(4) whether there will be any further trials of the electronic tag as an alternative to remand in custody; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The number of defendants electronically monitored and the number of breaches as at 30 January is set out in the table. Electronic monitoring cannot prevent breaches of bail, which are also committed by defendants on bail, subject to other conditions, but it does enable them to be detected.

Trial area	Total monitored	Breaches[1]
Nottingham	17	9
North Tyneside	13	8
Tower Bridge	16	7
Total	46	24

[1] Includes defendants who have breached conditions of bail, been arrested for further offences or absconded.

The cost of the contracts (including VAT) for each trial is as follows: Nottingham £145,529, North Tyneside £158,808, Tower Bridge £260,369.

We expect to make available later this year an analysis of the outcome of the current trials.

So far as further trials of electronic monitoring are concerned, I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave on 10 January to my hon. Friend the Member for Nottingham, East (Mr. Knowles) at column 626.

Charities

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will include the General Synod's miscellaneous paper 317 on new religious movements as evidence to the consultation process on his White Paper, "Charities—a Framework for the Future."

Mr. Waddington: I shall certainly do so.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food Safety

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will list in the Official Report, those food research projects which the Agriculture and Food Research Council will cease to fund as a result of the planned closure of the Bristol laboratory of the Institute of Food Research; and if he will make a statement on the reasons for such rationalisation of projects.

Mr. Curry: The food research projects listed are those being carried out at IFR Bristol which have been identified as near market, that is, suitable for industrial support. Their funding by my Department is being phased out in 1989-90 during 1990-91.

1. Effects of poultry breeding, husbandry, handling and processing on carcase composition and quality.
2. Effects of breeding, husbandry, plant operations on processing quality turkey meat.
3. Effects of frozen storage on quality and processing (meat)
4. Carcase characteristics that determine value.
5. Define processing conditions for optimum and consistent quality in meat products.
6. Factors controlling meat restructuring processes.
7. Protein solubilisation and adhesion of reformed meats.
8. Heat and mass transfer in meat refrigeration.
9. Temperature and mass change in meat cooking.
10. Electrical stimulation, hot boning and accelerated ageing.
11. Electrical stimulation, hot boning and processing properties of beef, pork and poultry.
12. Meat process engineering.
13. Robotics in meat handling and processing.
14. Quality control, robotic vision and meat grading by video image analysis and fibre optics.
15. Industrial developments and technology transfer.
16. Carcase composition and meat quality in cattle.
17. Carcase composition and meat quality in sheep.
18. Techniques for assessment of carcase composition.
19. Effects of pre-slaughter handling practices on value of carcase and fresh meat.
20. Packaging techniques for improved storage and display.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will specify the measures he is taking to ensure that public interest research and development on the safety and quality of foods, particularly meat and meat products, will not be diminished as a result of the closure of the Bristol laboratory of the Institute of Food Research in December 1990.

Mr. Curry: Public interest research and development on the safety of food is under way at the Norwich and Reading laboratories of the Institute of Food Research and will be increased following the reorganisation of the institute. In addition, MAFF is commissioning relevant work at Food Research Association and university departments. Food safety research of relevance to the meat industry is also being undertaken by the Ministry's own central veterinary laboratory and by the public health laboratory service.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consultations he has had, or proposes to have, with representations of consumer interests, the food manufacturing industry, the food retailing industry, and farmers, over the arrangements he is making to ensure that public interest research and development into the safety and quality of food, particularly meat and meat products, will be retained after the closure of the Bristol laboratory of the Institute of Food Research.

Mr. Curry: The research consultative committee on food safety and applied nutrition which consists of representatives from consumer interests and the food manufacturing and the food retailing industries, recently reported to the Priorities Board on the priorities for public interest research in the safety of food, including meat, and discussions are under way with a wide range of contractors to implement these recommendations. This followed consultations with outside organisations, including the food manufacturing and the food retailing industries, on the priorities for food microbiology research in 1988-89. As a consequence, the Ministry commissioned a major strategic initiative in the area of food microbiology research and development at various institutes throughout the United Kingdom.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he anticipates that there will be any diminution of the quantity or quality of United Kingdom-based research into (a) food irradiation, (b) micro-wave treatments, (c) exclusion of salmonella from chickens, and (d) the growth of listeria in foods, as a result of the closure of the Bristol laboratory of the Institute of Food Research.

Mr. Curry: No. Research on these issues will continue to be carried out as necessary at the IFR's other sites at Norwich and Reading and at other research institutions.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what United Kingdom resources capable of monitoring the safety of the food processes of (a) cook-chill and (b) ready meal production on a scale appropriate to industrial conditions will remain following the closure of the Bristol laboratory of the Institute of Food Research.

Mr. Curry: Facilities for carrying out research and monitoring current conditions on the safety of cook-chill and other ready meal products exist at Leatherhead Food Research Association, Campden Food and Drink Research Association, Huddersfield polytechnic, Sheffield polytechnic and the Dorset Institute of Higher Education. The Ministry is funding work at some of these establishments in the fields in question and recognises the existent expertise.

Radiation Contamination

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will indicate what level of radiation contamination was present in soft fruit imported to Britain in each year from 1986 onwards;

(2) if he will make it his policy to monitor future imports of soft fruit to Britain for radiation contamination.

Mr. Freeman: I have been asked to reply.

Central records on the monitoring of soft fruit food imports by port health authorities for radiation contamination following the Chernobyl nuclear accident show that since 1986 only consignments of dried prunes from Romania have exceeded maximum permitted levels. All consignments concerned have been refused entry into the United Kingdom. United Kingdom monitoring has not picked up any excess readings over the last two years.

Port health authorities are continuing to monitor food imports from outside the European Community in accordance with the latest European Council regulation (EEC No. 4003/89).

Therapeutic Medicants

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what tests have been carried out to establish whether therapeutic medicants used in animal feedingstuffs show up in the flesh and offal of animals destined for human consumption; what are the results of these tests; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: My Department carries out extensive monitoring of residues of veterinary medicines, including therapeutic substances administered in animal feed; 40,000 samples are taken annually at randomly selected slaughterhouses and farms and are subject to screening tests and confirmatory analysis where residues are suspected. In 1989, 97 per cent. of samples analysed for anti-microbial substances passed these tests. In the remaining cases follow-up action was taken with the farms of origin.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what research he has commissioned on the spread of bovine spongiform encephalopathy to mice; what figures are available on the incidence of bovine spongiform encephalopathy among mice; and what information he has on the possibility of communication of bovine spongiform encephalopathy from mice to humans;

(2) what restrictions have been placed on the export of British mice as a result of the spread of bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

Mr. Maclean: Research has shown that bovine spongiform encephalopathy can be transmitted to mice in experimental conditions by intra-cerebral inoculation of BSE brain tissue and by feeding large quantities of infective material. Both are unnatural methods of infection which cannot be mimicked in field conditions. Questions about its incidence, risk and control do not therefore arise.

Free Foodstuffs (EC)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list in the Official Report the types of food, the quantities ordered and the locations of the distribution of all free foodstuffs received from Economic Community states for free distribution to pensioners to the United Kingdom over the past six months.

Mr. Curry [pursuant to his reply, 15 January 1990, c. 134]: I have placed in the Library of the House details of distribution centres for butter and beef under the EC surplus food scheme which have been notified to us over the past six months.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 166

SESSION 1989–90

29th January—19th February 1990

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr. Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speaker's rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr. Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R=first reading, 2R=second reading, Money res=money resolution, Com=Committee stage, Rep=Report stage, 3R=third reading, amendt/amendts=amendment/amendments, *=matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
